« Idle No More » est un mouvement de protestation en cours d'origine entre les Premières Nations et d'autres peuples autochtones du Canada. Il s'est rapidement développé et il a recueilli un soutien dans le monde entier à partir des peuples autochtones ainsi que les Canadiens et Américains non autochtones, sympathique au mouvement. Il a consisté en une série d'actions politique dans le monde entier, inspirée en partie par la grève de la faim de la chef Thérèse Spence d` Attawapiskat et plus coordonnée via les medias sociaux. Le mouvement affirme que le projet de loi omnibus du gouvernement canadien C-45 viole un certain nombre de droits issus des traités historiques. Cependant, selon des sources ouvertes, la chef Theresa Spence ne soutient pas ces protestations.

De grandes manifestations devraient avoir lieu le 5 janvier 2013, dans différentes régions et la plus grande manifestation devrait avoir lieu au port d'entrée de Cornwall en Ontario. D'autres manifestations plus petites peuvent avoir un impact limité sur les opérations de l`ASFC aux points d'entrée dans la Région Sud de l`Ontario (Sarnia, Fort Erie et Niagara Falls); Nord de l`Ontario (Fort Francis et Sault Ste Marie); Région du Pacifique (Douglas. Osoyoos, Kingsgate et Victoria) et la région des Prairies (Boissevain et Carway).

Le mouvement a gagné l'appui de d'autres mouvements de masse similaires, y compris « Occupy Canada » et le Conseil des Canadiens, ainsi que Greenpeace.

Bien que les protestions menée sous la bannière d'inactivité « Idle No More » ont restées pacifiques, il y a un potentiel de violence qui ont plus un impact sur le public.

Les opérations de renseignement et de l'analyse (IOAD) et application régionale et les divisions du renseignement (E&I) continuent d'assurer la liaison avec les organismes partenaires, y compris la Police provinciale de l`Ontario (PPO), la Gendarmerie royale du Canada (GRC), US Customs and Border Protection (US CBP), la US Border Patrol, le service canadien du renseignement de sécurité (SCRS), le Centre d'évaluation intégrée terrorisme (ACTI), Transport Canada (TC) et la Sureté du Québec pour surveiller été évaluer les menaces pas rapport aux blocages prévus.

CONTEXTE

De nombreux rapports et médias sociaux font état de mouvement de protestations en appui au mouvement autochtone Idle No More. Ce rapport se veut un récapitulatif des actions en cours ainsi qu'annoncées sur le territoire québécois, cela dans un but informatif et pour la sécurité de la population et des forces de l'ordre (PROS 2012-1617463). Il importe de mettre en garde que les événements peuvent rapidement changer et devenir obsolètes.

ÉVÉNEMENTS

Les informations nous indiquent un total de 4 événements organisés pour le 5 janvier 2013. Ces actions incluent un blocage de pont et de routes ainsi qu'une manifestation devant des bureaux ministériels.

Même si le premier ministre Stephen Harper a accepté de rencontrer les représentants des Premières Nations vendredi prochain, des manifestations étaient quand même prévues au cours de la fin de semaine, principalement dans l'ensemble de l'Ontario. Un autre leader autochtone, Raymond Robinson, s'est joint lui aussi à la grève de la faim fait par Theresa Spencer, qu'il continuera lui aussi malgré l'annonce de la rencontre du 11 janvier prochain.

LE 5 JANVIER 2013

Heure	Endroit	Description	Participation
Inconnue	Kingston, ON Montréal, QC	Blocage par la communauté Tyendinaga de la ligne ferroviaire entre Toronto et Montréal qui causerait une perturbation de la circulation ferroviaire pour Via et CN. Les blocages doivent être levés au moment de la rencontre du 11 janvier 2013.	Inconnue
13h	Roberval, QC	Manifestation d'Innus de Mashteuiatsh devant les bureaux du ministre fédéral Denis Lebel (au 797 boul. Saint-Joseph)	Quarantaine
13h30-15h30	Québec, QC	Mobilisation- éclair (de son expression anglophone flash mob) prévue à la Place Laurier vers 13h30 jusqu'à 13h50. Une autre est prévue plus tard aux Galeries de la Capitale. Ce type d'événements avait déjà eu lieu le 28 décembre 2012 à Montréal et a notamment été annoncée sur Twitter.	Inconnue

Il avait été question d'initier un mouvement national de blocages des points d'entrée à la frontière canado-américaine au matin du 5 janvier 2013. En réponse à la menace de bloquer la frontière dans la région d'Akwesasne entre 10h et 14h, la police de Cornwall s'est décidée à fermer le pont international. Une marche a été entamée vers midi sur le pont pour laquelle la police de Cornwall estime une participation entre 100 et 150 manifestants qui traversent en direction de l'Ontario.
Un autre groupe d'Idle No More devrait aussi manifester sur le pont Falls International, entre Dryden et le Minnesota. L'OPP a d'ailleurs lancé un avertissement pour tous les postes douaniers de l'Ontario. Ailleurs des perturbations sont aussi à prévoir tout au long de cette fin de semaine alors que des groupes envisagent de déclencher des manifestations spontanées à divers endroits sans plus de précisions toutefois.

La fermeture complète du Pont Mercier d'ici les 5 à 10 prochains jours a été envisagée par la communauté mohawk de Kahnawake dans la région métropolitaine. Une centaine de Mohawks de Kahnawake avaient d'ailleurs marché jeudi matin (3 janvier 2013) sur la rampe d'accès du pont, ce qui a bloqué la circulation pendant plus d'une heure. Après la marche, les manifestants se sont retrouvés sur le bord de la route 132, autour d'un feu improvisé, pour annoncer que le mouvement n'en était qu'à ses débuts : «Si Mme Spence est prête à mourir pour la cause, que sommes-nous prêts à faire, nous?»

Une délégation de plusieurs Innus de la région de la Côte-Nord s'est aussi rendue à Ottawa afin de prendre part à la manifestation prévue aujourd'hui sur la colline parlementaire.

January 5, 2012

At 1150 EST, protesters are starting to arrive at the Cornwall POE.

At 1123 EST, march continuing to Cornwall. Approx. 300 people going North. Vehicles approx. 10-15. Media (CBC) is with them.
Bridge closure. CBSA POE STILL OPEN Movement started from GM plant. Approx. 30 people on island and a lot of children. A few vehicles with warrior signs and a few known warriors. A few confirmed warriors and signs and flags. Lawyer and First Nations activist Frank Horn at POE

At 0847 EST, Organizers will let the crowd decide at the staging location today if they will do both bridges or not.
Protest activity commencing in Roosevelt, New York, proceeding by foot across Cornwall Island through CBSA Port of Entry to the City of Cornwall traffic circle. The demonstrators will then return to Cornwall Island. According to Facebook, 1,100 people have indicated they will participate and organizers are expecting a large number of participants. However, inclement weather and the requirement of demonstrators to be processed by CBSA may reduce the number of participants. Indications that criminally inadmissible persons may be part of the demonstration entering Canada. Indications of possible participation by members of the Mohawk Warrior Society, The bridge will be closed to vehicle traffic during the protest (4-6 hours).

Solidarity Protest on U.S. side of the Ft. Frances / International Falls border crossing. Expecting Canadian residents to cross into the US to attend the protest and return in the evening. Possible protest to be staged on Canadian side near the Fort Frances Port of Entry. Reports now indicating that demonstrators will attempt to close the bridge for an unknown period of time.

Sault Ste. Marie
of Demonstrators: unknown

At 1130 EST, No new information was reported.

Plans for a small demonstration have been cancelled; however a small protest may be staged at the Port of Entry, similar to what has been staged there before as part of Idle No More.

Southern Ontario Region

Fort Erie Peace Bridge
of Demonstrators: 600 (based on social media responses, includes the US contingent; Canadian participation will likely be significantly less)
2013-01-05 11:00 EST
Weather: Cloudy, -1° to 1°C
January 5, 2012
At 1133 EST, Fort Erie is reporting 70 protesters near regional office (Garrison Rd/ Mathers Park (near Peace Bridge). CBC and Parks Police on site – all peaceful – no extremist flags/banners. No reports from CBP of any US protesters marshalling on US side.

At 0830 EST, No new information was reported.

Protest with two contingents – demonstrators gathering on the Buffalo, NY side and a demonstration in Fort Erie. Bridge operator allowing protestors to march across the bridge occupying one lane of traffic.

Niagara Falls
of Demonstrators: 250 (based on social media responses)
2013-01-05 11:30 EST
Weather: Cloudy, -1° to 1°C
January 5, 2012
1050 EST, no observations of any protest activity in Windsor or Niagara Falls.

At 0830 EST, No new information was reported.

Sarnia - BWB
(CLOSED)
of Demonstrators: 370 (based on statements by protest organizers)
2013-01-05 10:00 EST
Weather: Cloudy/flurries, -5° to
-2°C
January 5, 2012
At 1133 EST, BWB is holding traffic coming into Canada and both CBSA and CBP is clearing any traffic in queue. Sarnia is reporting approximately 200 protesters – no extremist members observed.

According to the social media (Facebook) there is a possibility of 420 attending.

Participants are to gather at the 'Soul's Monument' located under the bridge at 1000 EST . Beginning between 1100-1130 EST, participants will march from the monument to Front Street via Venetian Boulevard. Previous information indicated participants will then enter onto Highway 402 and block traffic in both directions. As Highway 402 links directly to the Bluewater Bridge, a traffic stoppage affecting both directions of this highway will have a direct impact on bridge traffic. Information indicates that this event will include members of Aamjiwnaang First Nation and Kettle Point First Nation. Event organizers will also be advising Walpole Island First Nation, Chippewa of the Thames First Nation, Munsee-Delaware First Nation and Stoney Point First Nation should members of these communities wish to participate.

Information was received from organizers of today's demonstration of the potential of a "rogue" group planning a protest on Indian Road in Sarnia. This apparent protest is not being promoted by the Idle No More demonstration. The number of demonstrators, exact location and time is unknown.
At 0830 EST, No new information was reported.

Protest and march starting at 10:00 under the bridge, then proceeding to Highway 403 with the intention of blocking traffic, possibly affecting access to the Port of Entry. Sun Media is reporting that protestors plan to block the Canadian side of the Bluewater Bridge for one hour.

Overview

Coverage of Idle No More protests planned for border towns on Saturday, January 5th, 2013 was moderate. Media coverage focused on the length of time the bridges and border crossings would be affected by delays.

Several Ontario protests received the majority of the media coverage: Seaway International Bridge in Cornwall, Peace Bridge in Erie, Highway 403, and Blue Water Bridge in Sarnia.

The Blue Water Bridge protest generated coverage from American media.

Idle No More is an ongoing protest movement originating among the First Nations and other Indigenous Peoples in Canada. It has quickly grown and garnered worldwide support from other Indigenous Peoples as well as sympathetic non-Indigenous Canadians and Americans. It has consisted of a number of political actions worldwide, inspired in part by the hunger strike of Attawapiskat Chief Theresa Spence and further coordinated via social media. The movement claims that the Canadian government's omnibus bill C-45 infringes on a number of historical treaty rights, however, according to open sources, Chief Theresa Spence is not supporting these protests.

Large protests are expected to take place on January 5, 2013, in various regions, with the largest protest expected to occur at the Cornwall Port of Entry in Ontario. Other smaller protests may have a limited impact on CBSA operations at ports of entry in the Southern Ontario Region (Sarnia, Fort Erie and Niagara Falls); Northern Ontario Region (Fort Francis and Sault Ste. Marie); Pacific Region (Douglas, Osoyoos, Kingsgate and Victoria) and the Prairie Region (Boissevain and Carway).

The movement has gained support from other similar mass movements, including Occupy Canada and Council for Canadians as well as Greenpeace.

Although protests conducted under the Idle No More banner remain peaceful, there is the potential for violence the more they impact the public.

The Intelligence Operations and Analysis Division (IOAD) and Regional Enforcement and Intelligence Divisions (E&I) are continuing to liaise with partner agencies, including the Ontario Provincial Police (OPP), the Royal Canadian Mounted Police (RCMP), US Customs and Border Protection (US CBP), US Border Patrol, the Canadian Security and Intelligence Service (CSIS), the Integrated Terrorism Assessment Centre (ITAC), Transport Canada (TC) and the Sûreté du Québec to monitor and assess threats in relation to planned blockades.

« Idle No More » est un mouvement de protestation en cours d'origine entre les Premières Nations et d'autres peuples autochtones du Canada. Il s'est rapidement développé et il a recueilli un soutien dans le monde entier à partir des peuples autochtones ainsi que les Canadiens et Américains non autochtones, sympathique au mouvement. Il a consisté en une série d'actions politique dans le monde entier, inspirée en partie par la grève de la faim de la chef Thérèse Spence d` Attawapiskat et plus coordonnée via les medias sociaux. Le mouvement affirme que le projet de loi omnibus du gouvernement canadien C-45 viole un certain nombre de droits issus des traités historiques. Cependant, selon des sources ouvertes, la chef Theresa Spence ne soutient pas ces protestations.
De grandes manifestations devraient avoir lieu le 5 janvier 2013, dans différentes régions et la plus grande manifestation devrait avoir lieu au port d'entrée de Cornwall en Ontario. D'autres manifestations plus petites peuvent avoir un impact limité sur les opérations de l`ASFC aux points d'entrée dans la Région Sud de l`Ontario (Sarnia, Fort Erie et Niagara Falls); Nord de l`Ontario (Fort Francis et Sault Ste Marie); Région du Pacifique (Douglas. Osoyoos, Kingsgate et Victoria) et la région des Prairies (Boissevain et Carway).
Le mouvement a gagné l'appui de d'autres mouvements de masse similaires, y compris « Occupy Canada » et le Conseil des Canadiens, ainsi que Greenpeace.
Bien que les protestions menée sous la bannière d'inactivité « Idle No More » ont restées pacifiques, il y a un potentiel de violence qui ont plus un impact sur le public.
Les opérations de renseignement et de l'analyse (IOAD) et application régionale et les divisions du renseignement (E&I) continuent d'assurer la liaison avec les organismes partenaires, y compris la Police provinciale de l`Ontario (PPO), la Gendarmerie royale du Canada (GRC), US Customs and Border Protection (US CBP), la US Border Patrol, le service canadien du renseignement de sécurité (SCRS), le Centre d'évaluation intégrée terrorisme (ACTI), Transport Canada (TC) et la Sureté du Québec pour surveiller été évaluer les menaces pas rapport aux blocages prévus.

January 5, 2012
At 1440 EST. Cornwall & Massena International Bridges on both sides of the border re-open. All marchers that returned to the USA POE presented themselves for inspection. CBSA Cornwall E&I and Cornwall POE are all clear.

At 1346 EST, Bridge still closed from USA and from Cornwall City to the island. But in an attempt to get traffic moving people will be allowed to leave Cornwall island to Cornwall POE and Massena POE. Marchers carrying the 6 Nations (Purple Flag).
At 1309 EST, Cornwall Community Police Service (CCPS) will re-open Brookdale to regular city traffic but the bridge is still closed until all marchers are off the roads and all vehicles with this group are parked and off the roads at the Peoples Fire on Cornwall Island. Then CCPS will make the call once Akwesasne Mohawk Police Service (AMPS) give the all clear that all is safe and the bridge will re-open. Presently the large group is moving fast but there are still a lot of smaller groups moving much slower back up the bridge. It will still be some time before the walkers are all off the bridge.
2 Emergency vehicles were facilitated during this march by Police and CBSA
At 1250 EST, All marched through toll booth heading back on Bridge to Cornwall Island. Any persons carrying the black flags that have covered faces who stay in Cornwall will be approached by CCPS.
At 1218 EST, all 300 or so marched through the POE. . The Group is staking 2 flags beside the existing polls in the traffic circle, the warrior flag and the 6 nations flag (Purple flag). Smaller groups arriving on foot and are reporting into POE properly.

At 1150 EST, protesters are starting to arrive at the Cornwall POE.

At 1123 EST, march continuing to Cornwall. Approx. 300 people going North. Vehicles approx. 10-15. Media (CBC) is with them. Bridge closure. CBSA POE STILL OPEN Movement started from GM plant. Approx. 30 people on island and a lot of children. A few vehicles with warrior signs and a few known warriors. A few confirmed warriors and signs and flags. Lawyer and First Nations activist Frank Horn at POE

At 0847 EST, Organizers will let the crowd decide at the staging location today if they will do both bridges or not.
Protest activity commencing in Roosevelt, New York, proceeding by foot across Cornwall Island through CBSA Port of Entry to the City of Cornwall traffic circle. The demonstrators will then return to Cornwall Island. According to Facebook, 1,100 people have indicated they will participate and organizers are expecting a large number of participants. However, inclement weather and the requirement of demonstrators to be processed by CBSA may reduce the number of participants. Indications that criminally inadmissible persons may be part of the demonstration entering Canada. Indications of possible participation by members of the Mohawk Warrior Society, The bridge will be closed to vehicle traffic during the protest (4-6 hours).

At 1344 EST, The Blue Water Bridge has been reopened following the conclusion of the Idle No More protest.
At 1221 EST, presence of a few Mohawk warrior flags, all peaceful at this time. POE SEN reporting temporary blockage of traffic, commercial trucks being diverted around protest group.

At 1133 EST, BWB is holding traffic coming into Canada and both CBSA and CBP is clearing any traffic in queue. Sarnia is reporting approximately 200 protesters – no extremist members observed.

According to the social media (Facebook) there is a possibility of 420 attending.

Participants are to gather at the 'Soul's Monument' located under the bridge at 1000 EST . Beginning between 1100-1130 EST, participants will march from the monument to Front Street via Venetian Boulevard. Previous information indicated participants will then enter onto Highway 402 and block traffic in both directions. As Highway 402 links directly to the Bluewater Bridge, a traffic stoppage affecting both directions of this highway will have a direct impact on bridge traffic. Information indicates that this event will include members of Aamjiwnaang First Nation and Kettle Point First Nation. Event organizers will also be advising Walpole Island First Nation, Chippewa of the Thames First Nation, Munsee-Delaware First Nation and Stoney Point First Nation should members of these communities wish to participate.

Information was received from organizers of today's demonstration of the potential of a "rogue" group planning a protest on Indian Road in Sarnia. This apparent protest is not being promoted by the Idle No More demonstration. The number of demonstrators, exact location and time is unknown.
At 0830 EST, No new information was reported.

Protest and march starting at 10:00 under the bridge, then proceeding to Highway 403 with the intention of blocking traffic, possibly affecting access to the Port of Entry. Sun Media is reporting that protestors plan to block the Canadian side of the Bluewater Bridge for one hour.

Natives plan Blue Water blockade

Local members of the Idle No More native protest movement plan to block traffic on the Canadian side of the Blue Water Bridge for one hour Saturday. Sarnia police said the bridge would be closed in both directions from noon until 1 p.m., with drivers in the area of Exmouth and Front streets asked to be patient. They should expect traffic to be heavy and even stopped at times during the demonstration. Protesters are expected to meet at the Soul's Memorial along the waterfront in Point Edward, beginning at 10 a.m. They will march to Hwy. 402 and plan to block traffic in both directions near the currency exchange until noon. Idle No More protests target bridges across Canada

The Idle No More protest movement continues to gain steam with more demonstrations Saturday, after Prime Minister Stephen Harper announced he would meet with a delegation of First Nations chiefs, including Attawapiskat Chief Theresa Spence who is now on day 26 of a hunger strike. Several groups have pledged to block bridges, several of which straddle the Canada-U.S. border. Organizers with Idle No More have organized several other demonstrations on Saturday at sites including: The Peace Arch crossing in Surrey, B.C., from 1 to 2 p.m. PT, NWT's Deh Cho Bridge between 2 and 4 p.m. MT, the Canadian side of the Blue Water Bridge in Sarnia, Ont., for one hour. Sarnia police said the bridge would be closed in both directions from noon until 1 p.m. The Peace Bridge between Fort Erie and Buffalo in the Niagara region, starting at 1 p.m. ET. Organizers say it will be "peaceful," and they will occupy only one lane of traffic on the international bridge, A disruption is also planned at the Queenston/Lewiston Bridge between Niagara Falls and Niagara on the Lake. Idle No More activists to block Deh Cho Bridge
Drivers who plan to N.W.T.'s Deh Cho Bridge this afternoon could have trouble as Idle No More activists plan to disrupt traffic. Event organizers say the prime minister's commitment to meet with First Nation leaders has only fuelled the Idle No More fire. Organizer Nellie Norwegian said they chose to block the recently opened Deh Cho Bridge to show, even though the federal and territorial governments built the link, it is still on Dene land. She said they do not expect the upcoming meeting to change any of the government's priorities. They hope to draw attention to the need for environmental protection for land and water in the North. The rally and a round dance are expected to block bridge traffic from 2 to 4 p.m., followed by a feast. CBC News (http://www.cbc.ca/news/canada/north/story/2013/01/05/north-dehcho-bridge-block.html)

Protest underway at the Peace Bridge
Several "Idle No More" protests are planned for today. Protestors have gathered at the Peace Bridge in Fort Erie for a rally, and a march will take place at 1p Saturday. The "peaceful" march will occupy one lane of traffic on the bridge. The single lane closure and is not expected to impact traffic movements or cause border delays. A gathering will be held at the Fort Erie Native Friendship Centre following the march. 610 CKTB (http://www.610cktb.com/news/local/story.aspx?ID=1855149); Global BC (http://www.globaltvbc.com/idle+no+more+protest+hits+peace+arch+border+crossing+today/6442782655/story.html)

Idle No More is an ongoing protest movement originating among the First Nations and other Indigenous Peoples in Canada. It has quickly grown and garnered worldwide support from other Indigenous Peoples as well as sympathetic non-Indigenous Canadians and Americans. It has consisted of a number of political actions worldwide, inspired in part by the hunger strike of Attawapiskat Chief Theresa Spence and further coordinated via social media. The movement claims that the Canadian government's omnibus bill C-45 infringes on a number of historical treaty rights, however, according to open sources, Chief Theresa Spence is not supporting these protests.

Large protests are expected to take place on January 5, 2013, in various regions, with the largest protest expected to occur at the Cornwall Port of Entry in Ontario. Other smaller protests may have a limited impact on CBSA operations at ports of entry in the Southern Ontario Region (Sarnia, Fort Erie and Niagara Falls); Northern Ontario Region (Fort Francis and Sault Ste. Marie); Pacific Region (Douglas, Osoyoos, Kingsgate and Victoria) and the Prairie Region (Boissevain and Carway).

The movement has gained support from other similar mass movements, including Occupy Canada and Council for Canadians as well as Greenpeace.

Although protests conducted under the Idle No More banner remain peaceful, there is the potential for violence the more they impact the public.

The Intelligence Operations and Analysis Division (IOAD) and Regional Enforcement and Intelligence Divisions (E&I) are continuing to liaise with partner agencies, including the Ontario Provincial Police (OPP), the Royal Canadian Mounted Police (RCMP), US Customs and Border Protection (US CBP), US Border Patrol, the Canadian Security and Intelligence Service (CSIS), the Integrated Terrorism Assessment Centre (ITAC), Transport Canada (TC) and the Sûreté du Québec to monitor and assess threats in relation to planned blockades.

« Idle No More » est un mouvement de protestation en cours d'origine entre les Premières Nations et d'autres peuples autochtones du Canada. Il s'est rapidement développé et il a recueilli un soutien dans le monde entier à partir des peuples autochtones ainsi que les Canadiens et Américains non autochtones, sympathique au mouvement. Il a consisté en une série d'actions politique dans le monde entier, inspirée en partie par la grève de la faim de la chef Thérèse Spence d` Attawapiskat et plus coordonnée via les medias sociaux. Le mouvement affirme que le projet de loi omnibus du gouvernement canadien C-45 viole un certain nombre de droits issus des traités historiques. Cependant, selon des sources ouvertes, la chef Theresa Spence ne soutient pas ces protestations.
De grandes manifestations devraient avoir lieu le 5 janvier 2013, dans différentes régions et la plus grande manifestation devrait avoir lieu au port d'entrée de Cornwall en Ontario. D'autres manifestations plus petites peuvent avoir un impact limité sur les opérations de l`ASFC aux points d'entrée dans la Région Sud de l`Ontario (Sarnia, Fort Erie et Niagara Falls); Nord de l`Ontario (Fort Francis et Sault Ste Marie); Région du Pacifique (Douglas. Osoyoos, Kingsgate et Victoria) et la région des Prairies (Boissevain et Carway).
Le mouvement a gagné l'appui de d'autres mouvements de masse similaires, y compris « Occupy Canada » et le Conseil des Canadiens, ainsi que Greenpeace.
Bien que les protestions menée sous la bannière d'inactivité « Idle No More » ont restées pacifiques, il y a un potentiel de violence qui ont plus un impact sur le public.
Les opérations de renseignement et de l'analyse (IOAD) et application régionale et les divisions du renseignement (E&I) continuent d'assurer la liaison avec les organismes partenaires, y compris la Police provinciale de l`Ontario (PPO), la Gendarmerie royale du Canada (GRC), US Customs and Border Protection (US CBP), la US Border Patrol, le service canadien du renseignement de sécurité (SCRS), le Centre d'évaluation intégrée terrorisme (ACTI), Transport Canada (TC) et la Sureté du Québec pour surveiller été évaluer les menaces pas rapport aux blocages prévus.

Situation Report

Incident Number: ST122-12I

Incident: First Nations Protests

Date: Information valid as of 05 Jan 2013, 12:30 (EST)

Description of current incident: A number of First Nations (FN) Protests are occurring as a result of a grassroots campaign called "Idle No More" which is protesting Bill C-45, the government's omnibus budget legislation.

Source(s) of reporting: Aboriginal Affairs and Northern Development Canada, PS Regional Offices, New Brunswick Department of Public Safety, Transport Canada, Canada Border Services Agency, media/open source reporting.

Current actions: GOC is monitoring the situation and has established contact with key partners in order to maintain cohesive information sharing.

Event management of the protests falls under the purview of local jurisdictions and local law enforcement agencies, as appropriate.

On 04 Jan, the Prime Minister announced he will be meeting with a delegation of FN leaders, coordinated by the Assembly of First Nations (AFN), on 11 Jan. The meeting will include the AANDC Minister and focus on two areas: 1) the treaty relationship and aboriginal rights and 2) economic development. Media reporting indicates Chief Spence will take part in the meeting.

The protest activities are dynamic in nature and subject to change. At this time, the GOC is aware of the following "Idle No More" related protest activities planned for 05 Jan 2013.

Rail Operations

As of 10:45 EST, CN and VIA Rail advise that operations are normal across Canada.

Ongoing Protest Events

Ontario

- 12:00 – 13:00 EST at Sarnia. Blue Water Bridge (BWB) blockade. As of 11:33 EST, the BWB Authority is holding traffic coming into Canada. Approximately 200 protesters are present. The Blue Water Bridge was closed as of 11:39 EST. At 11:46 EST, CBSA issued a Border Alert to advise that the Port of Entry (POE) is experiencing a service disruption and to expect possible delays.
- 13:00 - 14:00 EST at Fort Erie. Peace Bridge Border blockade. As of 11:33 EST, approximately 70 protesters are present in the vicinity of the Peace Bridge.
- 11:00 EST at Cornwall. Seaway International Bridge blockade. The Seaway International Bridge was closed at 10:30 EST. As of 11:50 EST, approximately 300 protesters had started to arrive at the Cornwall POE from the U.S. side; it is estimated protesters will have crossed by approximately 12:30. CBSA has issued a Border Alert to advise the POE is experiencing a service disruption and to expect possible delays.

- 13:00 EST in the Hamilton area. Closure of Highway 403 at Main Street.
- Oshawa (Time unknown). Rally at Albert Street over Highway 401.
- Potential protest on the CN Rail Line through Tyendinaga in Eastern ON. Note: Via Rail issued a travel advisory regarding a potential blockade at Marysville.
- Pic River - Marathon (10:00 – 16:00 EST). Rail blockade on CP Railway line at Highway 627.

Saskatchewan
- 13:00 EST Peaceful Slow Down Barricade on the Trans-Canada Highway. (exact location not yet determined).

British Columbia
- Douglas Peace Arch 14:00 EST: Peaceful protest to "block the border".
- Rykerts / Porthill 17:00-19:00 EST: Solidarity gathering.
- Coho / Seattle - Victoria Clipper Ferry, Terminal – Victoria, BC 17:30 – 20:30 EST: Peaceful protest / traditional bone game to be played at the entrance / exit of the terminal to coincide with the afternoon arrival of the MV Coho ferry from Port Angeles, Washington.
- 16:00 EST at the Kingsgate POE (south of Cranbrook). Potential protest.

Northwest Territories
- 16:00 – 18:00 EST at Fort Providence. Highway 3 blockade at the Deh Cho Bridge.

United States
- 14:00 EST at International Falls MN. "Idle No More Solidarity Round Dance International Falls, MN Border Crossing (at Fort Frances, ON). No attendees have been noted yet.

Concluded Protest Events

New Brunswick
- Blockade of the CN Rail line near Adamsville, Kent County.
- Protest near Highway 102 (the former TransCanada Highway) – near Kingsclear FN.
- Woodstock, NB. Houlton, Maine Border blockade (reportedly cancelled).

Ontario
- Walpole Island Ferry (Time unknown): Protest

Alberta
- 08:00 – 09:00 EST in Hardisty. "Turn off the Taps! blockade at the Pipeline Terminal".

Assessment/Analysis: Although it may have a mitigating effect, it is unclear what implications the 11 Jan meeting between the Prime Minister and FN leaders, including Chief Spence, will have on planned protest activities. To note, some activities planned for 05 Jan have been cancelled as of 04 Jan. However, media is reporting on 05 Jan that an organizer of the Idle No More rallies in Metro Vancouver advised that rallies will continue even though the Prime Minister has agreed to meet with FN leaders.

The protests have been peaceful in nature. However, some protests have disrupted rail operations and resulted in delays on various highways.

Departments and Agencies with further information on this incident are asked to report to the GOC.

Additional situation reports: Further situation reports will be issued as significant developments occur.

Additional Products: Geomatics and other products will be attached to a follow-on message.

Subject: Update in Lieu of BN - Possible Protest near TCH Colchester/ Mill Brook area

Good evening:

For the benefit of CROPS, intelligence derived from Indian Brook (Cpl Lerat) earlier today suggest a possible protest being planned near TCH Colchester/ Mill Brook area by individuals protesting Bill C 45, as early as tomorrow. Superintendent Beaton has been monitoring developments closely, as hereafter described & others within NEN whereby BN were submitted.

Part of the information clip from Cpl. Lerat is as follows,

Additional intell derived from Cpl. Lerat notes the possibility could attend",

So there may be a plans of a long term protest." Mill Brook, via a patrol by Cst Joe, indicates approximately 30 cars were at the meeting site.

Given the fluidity of the situation, a number of preliminary steps are underway: these include a Monday 08:30 AM stakeholder, as Colchester IC assumes the lead in preparing an OPS Plan for (likely) a protest. Cpl. Bernard (Measured Approach Coordinator) has been seconded and will be in attendance in his role. The IC's of Mill Brook and Indian Brook Office, will also attend to ensure broad knowledge and partnership around resources. As of this email, all available material has been shared with Cpl. Bernard, who has a long standing knowledge of this area and players/ leaders within.
CADPS and COMMS will play a key role as well and they will be engaged. A copy of this email, will be shared separately to Risk Managers as SSGT Warr, given my conversations with him through the day.

Lastly, a suitable BN will be generated tomorrow AM and fwd'ed to CROPs after the stakeholder meeting... and as intelligence firms up, with clearer details, via the District Commander Colchester and his management team.

Sincerely,

Jeffrey

The following is new information received, in addition to what was disseminated at 1600 EST on January 5, 2013.

Potential border service disruptions may occur on January 5, 2013, at the following ports of entry:

Region Port of Entry/Location	Date/Time[1] Weather Forecast	Activity Type
Northern Ontario Region
Akwesasne/Cornwall (OPEN) # of Demonstrators: 800 – 1,100 (based on social media responses, actual numbers may be lower due to weather and requirement to carry identity documents)	2013-01-05 11:00 EST Weather: Sunny, -7° to -6°C, wind-chill of -15°C predicted	January 5, 2012 (CONCLUDED – No further reporting) At 1440 EST. Cornwall & Massena International Bridges on both sides of the border re-open. All marchers that returned to the USA POE presented themselves for inspection. CBSA Cornwall E&I and Cornwall POE are all clear. At 1346 EST, Bridge still closed from USA and from Cornwall City to the island. But in an attempt to get traffic moving people will be allowed to leave Cornwall island to Cornwall POE and Massena POE. Marchers carrying the 6 Nations (Purple Flag).

		At 1309 EST, Cornwall Community Police Service (CCPS) will re-open Brookdale to regular city traffic but the bridge is still closed until all marchers are off the roads and all vehicles with this group are parked and off the roads at the Peoples Fire on Cornwall Island. Then CCPS will make the call once Akwesasne Mohawk Police Service (AMPS) give the all clear that all is safe and the bridge will re-open. Presently the large group is moving fast but there are still a lot of smaller groups moving much slower back up the bridge. It will still be some time before the walkers are all off the bridge. 2 Emergency vehicles were facilitated during this march by Police and CBSA At 1250 EST, All marched through toll booth heading back on Bridge to Cornwall Island. Any persons carrying the black flags that have covered faces who stay in Cornwall will be approached by CCPS. At 1218 EST, all 300 or so marched through the POE. . The Group is staking 2 flags beside the existing polls in the traffic circle, the warrior flag and the 6 nations flag (Purple flag). Smaller groups arriving on foot and are reporting into POE properly. At 1150 EST, protesters are starting to arrive at the Cornwall POE. At 1123 EST, march continuing to Cornwall. Approx. 300 people going North. Vehicles approx. 10-15. Media (CBC) is with them.Bridge closure. CBSA POE STILL OPEN Movement started from GM plant. Approx. 30 people on island and a lot of children. A few vehicles with warrior signs and a few known warriors. A few confirmed warriors and signs and flags. Lawyer and First Nations activist Frank Horn at POE At 0847 EST, Organizers will let the crowd decide at the staging location today if they will do both bridges or not. Protest activity commencing in Roosevelt, New York, proceeding by foot across Cornwall Island through CBSA Port of Entry to the City of Cornwall traffic circle. The demonstrators will then return to Cornwall Island. According to Facebook, 1,100 people have indicated they will participate and organizers are expecting a large number of participants. However, inclement weather and the requirement of demonstrators to be processed by CBSA may reduce the number of participants. Indications that criminally inadmissible persons may be part of the demonstration entering Canada. Indications of possible participation by members of the Mohawk Warrior Society, The bridge will be closed to vehicle traffic during the protest (4-6 hours).

Fort Frances/International Falls # of Demonstrators: 70-80 on the US	2013-01-05 13:00 EST Weather: Sunny/cloudy, -15° to -6°C	January 5, 2013 (CONCLUDED – No further reporting) At 1615 EST, the protest activity at Fort Frances concluded. At 1520 EST, 75-80 people estimated to be on US side but nothing to indicate at this point that they will be marching to Canada. At 1434 EST, Intel on site at Ft Frances report that a traveller just returned from US and indicated that a group on US side were lining up for a march across bridge to Canada. There are approximately 70 in total at border crossing. Expecting Canadian residents to cross into the US to attend the protest and return in the evening. Possible protest to be staged on Canadian side near the Fort Frances Port of Entry. Reports now indicating that demonstrators will attempt to close the bridge for an unknown period of time.

Sault Ste. Marie # of Demonstrators: unknown		January 5, 2013 (CONCLUDED – No further reporting) Local police and OPP Liaison team in Sault Ste. Marie have met with band chiefs and they have both said that plans have been cancelled. At 1130 EST, No new information was reported. Plans for a small demonstration have been cancelled; however a small protest may be staged at the Port of Entry, similar to what has been staged there before as part of Idle No More.

Southern Ontario Region

Region Port of Entry/Location	Date/Time[1] Weather Forecast	Activity Type
Fort Erie Peace Bridge # of Demonstrators: 100	2013-01-05 11:00 EST Weather: Cloudy, -1° to 1°C	January 5, 2013 (CONCLUDED – No further reporting) There were no reported issues. At 1346 EST, crowds were dispersing. A small contingent remains on the Peace Bridge. Handing out flyers to provide some background on Idle No More. At 13:00 EST, marching in unity on to the plaza heading towards the mid-point of the bridge carrying flags, banners and signs, it is a peaceful demonstration. The Peace Bridge Authority has closed one US bound lane to accommodate this peaceful demonstration. The PBA have staff stationed near the entrance from Mather's Arch onto the plaza in order to facilitate their lawful and safe entrance onto the plaza. The PBA and the organizers have agreed that this demonstration will conclude at 14:00 EST at which time the participants will begin making their way back to Canada towards Mather's Arch. Canadian residents attending the US rally are travelling by car. Local Intel / OPP Intel on site at POE and will contact US CBP at 1400 EST to determine number of Canadian residents destined to attend rally. One warrior flag and 120-140 persons in attendance. At 1133 EST, Fort Erie is reporting 70 protesters near regional office (Garrison Rd/ Mathers Park (near Peace Bridge). CBC and Parks Police on site – all peaceful – no extremist flags/banners. No reports from CBP of any US protesters marshalling on US side. At 0830 EST, No new information was reported. Protest with two contingents – demonstrators gathering on the Buffalo, NY side and a demonstration in Fort Erie. Bridge operator allowing protestors to march across the bridge occupying one lane of traffic.

Region Port of Entry/Location	Date/Time[1] Weather Forecast	Activity Type
Niagara Falls # of Demonstrators:	2013-01-05 11:30 EST Weather: Cloudy, -1° to 1°C	January 5, 2012 (CONCLUDED – No further reporting) 1050 EST, no observations of any protest activity in Windsor or Niagara Falls. At 0830 EST, No new information was reported. No specific POE targeted protests are known, however a small protest is planned near Rainbow Bridge.
Sarnia - BWB (OPEN) # of Demonstrators: 370 (based on statements by protest organizers)	2013-01-05 10:00 EST Weather: Cloudy/flurries, -5° to -2°C	January 5, 2013 (CONCLUDED – No further reporting) There were no reported issues. At 1344 EST, The Blue Water Bridge has been reopened following the conclusion of the Idle No More protest. At 1221 EST, presence of a few Mohawk warrior flags, all peaceful at this time. POE SEN reporting temporary blockage of traffic, commercial trucks being diverted around protest group. At 1133 EST, BWB is holding traffic coming into Canada and both CBSA and CBP is clearing any traffic in queue. Sarnia is reporting approximately 200 protesters – no extremist members observed. According to the social media (Facebook) there is a possibility of 420 attending. Participants are to gather at the 'Soul's Monument' located under the bridge at 1000 EST . Beginning between 1100-1130 EST, participants will march from the monument to Front Street via Venetian Boulevard. Previous information indicated participants will then enter onto Highway 402 and block traffic in both directions. As Highway 402 links directly to the Bluewater Bridge, a traffic stoppage affecting both directions of this highway will have a direct impact on bridge traffic.

		Information indicates that this event will include members of Aamjiwnaang First Nation and Kettle Point First Nation. Event organizers will also be advising Walpole Island First Nation, Chippewa of the Thames First Nation, Munsee-Delaware First Nation and Stoney Point First Nation should members of these communities wish to participate. Information was received from organizers of today's demonstration of the potential of a "rogue" group planning a protest on Indian Road in Sarnia. This apparent protest is not being promoted by the Idle No More demonstration. The number of demonstrators, exact location and time is unknown. At 0830 EST, No new information was reported. Protest and march starting at 10:00 under the bridge, then proceeding to Highway 403 with the intention of blocking traffic, possibly affecting access to the Port of Entry. Sun Media is reporting that protestors plan to block the Canadian side of the Bluewater Bridge for one hour.

There was no impact to operations during the protest. At 1339 PST it was reported that approximately 130 demonstrators are in attendance. There have been no disruptions to operations. At 1245 PST, demonstrators who will be participating in a planned "Idle No More" protest at the Osoyoos, BC POE (OKK District, Pac Region) began arriving on site. Currently there approximately 100 demonstrators in attendance with more arriving. The demonstration will be taking place on CBSA property however it is anticipated that it will remain peaceful and that there will be no disruption to CBSA operations. The Superintendent is currently in constant contact with the organizer as well as the RCMP who are also on site. CHBC Global News is on site as well. There have been no requests from the media to speak with CBSA personnel. Any requests will be directed to Communications. The demonstration is expected to begin at 1300 PST and be completed at 1400 PST. At 1400 EST, News Media indicates the event titled Gathering of Drums will be held at 1230 PST at the Osoyoos border crossing. A gathering will also be held at the Peace Arch around the same time. Organizers have stressed that this is not a political demonstration and ask there be no stopping of traffic, disturbing of the public, speeches or drugs and alcohol. Demonstrations planned at 1300 PST, outside the warehouse area They anticipate 100 demonstrators. The organizer has been in contact with the RCMP First nations outreach member who will be on site. Meeting being scheduled with local RCMP and CBSA in Osoyoos this afternoon to work out details/plan. Demonstration to be staged outside the Port of Entry, not expected to impact POE operations.

Kingsgate # of Demonstrators: 14		January 5, 2013 (CONCLUDED – no further reporting) As of 1435 MT, the protest concluded. There was no impact to operations. At 1310 MT, approximately 14 individuals arrived and began to protest approximately 200 meters north of the Port of Kingsgate. They are located near the center meridian outside of CBSA property. At this point, there have been no traffic interruptions in either direction. Updates will be provided as the situation evolves. At 1446 EST, No border activity was reported. At 1130 EST, No new information was reported. Posts have appeared over the past 10 hours on the Cranbrook Idle No More page calling for a border occupation at the Kingsgate Port of Entry.

"Idle No More Protest in Kelowna"
More than 60 people are expected to gather at the sails in City Park this afternoon for a flash mob and round dance as the Idle No More movement makes it's way to Kelowna. The protest is part of a nationwide movement with at least three more demonstrations scheduled for today. In the South Okanagan 100 people are expected to meet at the Osoyoos border crossing for a drumming session. AM 1150

"Idle No More protest shut down by CN in New Brunswick"
An Idle No More protest that was blocking commercial trains on Canadian National Rail tracks between Moncton and Miramichi, N.B. on Friday has been shut down. CN Rail filed the order Friday afternoon. It stated that the dozen protestors from the Elsipogtog First Nation had to stop blocking the railway along Highway 126 in Adamsville immediately or face arrest. The group had planned to continue the blockade until Monday. The protesters peacefully left the picket lines, but said their fight isn't over. CBC News

"Idle No More activists to block Deh Cho Bridge'
Drivers who plan to N.W.T.'s Deh Cho Bridge this afternoon could have trouble as Idle No More activists plan to disrupt traffic. Event organizers say the prime minister's commitment to meet with First Nation leaders has only fuelled the Idle No More fire. Organizer Nellie Norwegian said they chose to block the recently opened Deh Cho Bridge to show, even though the federal and territorial governments built the link, it is still on Dene land. She said they do not expect the upcoming meeting to change any of the government's priorities. They hope to draw attention to the need for environmental protection for land and water in the North. The rally and a round dance are expected to block bridge traffic from 2 to 4 p.m., followed by a feast. CBC News

"Idle No More protests target bridges, roads across Canada"
The Idle No More protest movement continues to gain steam with more demonstrations Saturday, after Prime Minister Stephen Harper announced he would meet with a delegation of First Nations chiefs, including Attawapiskat Chief Theresa Spence, who is now on day 26 of a hunger strike. A number of groups have pledged to block bridges, several of which straddle the Canada-U.S. border. Police in Cornwall, Ont., closed the International Bridge for more than three hours in response to an Idle No More protest that began mid-Saturday morning. About 350 protesters crossed the bridge.The bridge reopened by 2 p.m. local time. And in Saskatchewan, RCMP say they've close off Highway 624 from Highway 1 to Highway 46 for safety precautions due to a protest of about 300 people. "Cornwall bridge reopened after Idle No More protest"
Police in Cornwall, Ont., have reopened the International Bridge after an Idle No More protest attracted about 350 demonstrators and closed the bridge for more than three hours. The bridge closed at about 10:30 a.m. when the march began and reopened at about 2 p.m. CBC News; Canadian Press (Global Montreal); Ottawa Citizen

"Protestors gathering at Peace Arch border crossing"
Hundreds of Idle No More protestors are planning to descend on the Peace Arch border crossing today. Idle No More is protesting the Harper government's treatment of First Nations groups and supporting Chief Theresa Spence's hunger strike. Grand Chief Stewart Phillip with the Union of BC Indian Chiefs says the movement is growing everywhere. The protest will include an hour long prayer ceremony and drum circle. "Protest underway at the Peace Bridge"
Several "Idle No More" protests are planned for today. Protestors have gathered at the Peace Bridge in Fort Erie for a rally, and a march will take place at 1p Saturday. The "peaceful" march will occupy one lane of traffic on the bridge. The single lane closure and is not expected to impact traffic movements or cause border delays. A gathering will be held at the Fort Erie Native Friendship Centre following the march. 610 CKTB

"Idle No More protest to cause some delays on Hwy 1"

A planned Idle No More protest on the Trans-Canada Highway just outside of Regina has ended. The RCMP had previously advised drivers traveling on the Trans-Canada Highway to expect delays Saturday afternoon between noon and 3 p.m. CST because of the protest. About 150 protesters staged a slowdown blockade on Highway 1 near the Pilot Butte turnoff in the right westbound lane while RCMP directed traffic. CBC News

SYNOPSIS | SYNOPSIS

Idle No More is an ongoing protest movement originating among the First Nations and other Indigenous Peoples in Canada. It has quickly grown and garnered worldwide support from other Indigenous Peoples as well as sympathetic non-Indigenous Canadians and Americans. It has consisted of a number of political actions worldwide, inspired in part by the hunger strike of Attawapiskat Chief Theresa Spence and further coordinated via social media. The movement claims that the Canadian government's omnibus bill C-45 infringes on a number of historical treaty rights, however, according to open sources, Chief Theresa Spence is not supporting these protests.

Large protests are expected to take place on January 5, 2013, in various regions, with the largest protest expected to occur at the Cornwall Port of Entry in Ontario. Other smaller protests may have a limited impact on CBSA operations at ports of entry in the Southern Ontario Region (Sarnia, Fort Erie and Niagara Falls); Northern Ontario Region (Fort Francis and Sault Ste. Marie); Pacific Region (Douglas, Osoyoos, Kingsgate and Victoria) and the Prairie Region (Boissevain and Carway).

The movement has gained support from other similar mass movements, including Occupy Canada and Council for Canadians as well as Greenpeace.

Although protests conducted under the Idle No More banner remain peaceful, there is the potential for violence the more they impact the public.

The Intelligence Operations and Analysis Division (IOAD) and Regional Enforcement and Intelligence Divisions (E&I) are continuing to liaise with partner agencies, including the Ontario Provincial Police (OPP), the Royal Canadian Mounted Police (RCMP), US Customs and Border Protection (US CBP), US Border Patrol, the Canadian Security and Intelligence Service (CSIS), the Integrated Terrorism Assessment Centre (ITAC), Transport Canada (TC) and the Sûreté du Québec to monitor and assess threats in relation to planned blockades.

« Idle No More » est un mouvement de protestation en cours d'origine entre les Premières Nations et d'autres peuples autochtones du Canada. Il s'est rapidement développé et il a recueilli un soutien dans le monde entier à partir des peuples autochtones ainsi que les Canadiens et Américains non autochtones, sympathique au mouvement. Il a consisté en une série d'actions politique dans le monde entier, inspirée en partie par la grève de la faim de la chef Thérèse Spence d` Attawapiskat et plus coordonnée via les medias sociaux. Le mouvement affirme que le projet de loi omnibus du gouvernement canadien C-45 viole un certain nombre de droits issus des traités historiques. Cependant, selon des sources ouvertes, la chef Theresa Spence ne soutient pas ces protestations.
De grandes manifestations devraient avoir lieu le 5 janvier 2013, dans différentes régions et la plus grande manifestation devrait avoir lieu au port d'entrée de Cornwall en Ontario. D'autres manifestations plus petites peuvent avoir un impact limité sur les opérations de l`ASFC aux points d'entrée dans la Région Sud de l`Ontario (Sarnia, Fort Erie et Niagara Falls); Nord de l`Ontario (Fort Francis et Sault Ste Marie); Région du Pacifique (Douglas. Osoyoos, Kingsgate et Victoria) et la région des Prairies (Boissevain et Carway).
Le mouvement a gagné l'appui de d'autres mouvements de masse similaires, y compris « Occupy Canada » et le Conseil des Canadiens, ainsi que Greenpeace.
Bien que les protestions menée sous la bannière d'inactivité « Idle No More » ont restées pacifiques, il y a un potentiel de violence qui ont plus un impact sur le public.
Les opérations de renseignement et de l'analyse (IOAD) et application régionale et les divisions du renseignement (E&I) continuent d'assurer la liaison avec les organismes partenaires, y compris la Police provinciale de l`Ontario (PPO), la Gendarmerie royale du Canada (GRC), US Customs and Border Protection (US CBP), la US Border Patrol, le service canadien du renseignement de sécurité (SCRS), le Centre d'évaluation intégrée terrorisme (ACTI), Transport Canada (TC) et la Sureté du Québec pour surveiller été évaluer les menaces pas rapport aux blocages prévus.

ANTICIPATED PROTESTS | MANIFESTATIONS PRÉVUES

The following is new information received, in addition to what was disseminated at 1200 EST on January 5, 2013.

Potential border service disruptions may occur on January 5, 2013, at the following ports of entry:

Region Port of Entry/Location	Date/Time[1] Weather Forecast	Activity Type
Northern Ontario Region
Akwesasne/Cornwall (OPEN) # of Demonstrators: 800 – 1,100 (based on social media responses, actual numbers may be lower due to weather and requirement to carry identity documents)	2013-01-05 11:00 EST Weather: Sunny, -7° to -6°C, wind-chill of -15°C predicted	January 5, 2012 (CONCLUDED – No further reporting) At 1440 EST. Cornwall & Massena International Bridges on both sides of the border re-open. All marchers that returned to the USA POE presented themselves for inspection. CBSA Cornwall E&I and Cornwall POE are all clear. At 1346 EST, Bridge still closed from USA and from Cornwall City to the island. But in an attempt to get traffic moving people will be allowed to leave Cornwall island to Cornwall POE and Massena POE. Marchers carrying the 6 Nations (Purple Flag).

[1] Dates/Times in Italics are unconfirmed. All times reported are local time.

Region Port of Entry/Location	Date/Time[1] Weather Forecast	Activity Type

Region Port of Entry/Location	Date/Time[1] Weather Forecast	Activity Type
		activist Frank Horn at POE At 0847 EST, Organizers will let the crowd decide at the staging location today if they will do both bridges or not. Protest activity commencing in Roosevelt, New York, proceeding by foot across Cornwall Island through CBSA Port of Entry to the City of Cornwall traffic circle. The demonstrators will then return to Cornwall Island. According to Facebook, 1,100 people have indicated they will participate and organizers are expecting a large number of participants. However, inclement weather and the requirement of demonstrators to be processed by CBSA may reduce the number of participants. Indications that criminally inadmissible persons may be part of the demonstration entering Canada. Indications of possible participation by members of the Mohawk Warrior Society, The bridge will be closed to vehicle traffic during the protest (4-6 hours).

SYNOPSIS | SYNOPSIS

Idle No More is an ongoing protest movement originating among the First Nations and other Indigenous Peoples in Canada. It has quickly grown and garnered worldwide support from other Indigenous Peoples as well as sympathetic non-Indigenous Canadians and Americans. It has consisted of a number of political actions worldwide, inspired in part by the hunger strike of Attawapiskat Chief Theresa Spence and further coordinated via social media. The movement claims that the Canadian government's omnibus bill C-45 infringes on a number of historical treaty rights, however, according to open sources, Chief Theresa Spence is not supporting these protests.

Large protests are expected to take place on January 5, 2013, in various regions, with the largest protest expected to occur at the Cornwall Port of Entry in Ontario. Other smaller protests may have a limited impact on CBSA operations at ports of entry in the Southern Ontario Region (Sarnia, Fort Erie and Niagara Falls); Northern Ontario Region (Fort Francis and Sault Ste. Marie); Pacific Region (Douglas, Osoyoos, Kingsgate and Victoria) and the Prairie Region (Boissevain and Carway).

The movement has gained support from other similar mass movements, including Occupy Canada and Council for Canadians as well as Greenpeace.

Although protests conducted under the Idle No More banner remain peaceful, there is the potential for violence the more they impact the public.

The Intelligence Operations and Analysis Division (IOAD) and Regional Enforcement and Intelligence Divisions (E&I) are continuing to liaise with partner agencies, including the Ontario Provincial Police (OPP), the Royal Canadian Mounted Police (RCMP), US Customs and Border Protection (US CBP), US Border Patrol, the Canadian Security and Intelligence Service (CSIS), the Integrated Terrorism Assessment Centre (ITAC), Transport Canada (TC) and the Sûreté du Québec to monitor and assess threats in relation to planned blockades.

« Idle No More » est un mouvement de protestation en cours d'origine entre les Premières Nations et d'autres peuples autochtones du Canada. Il s'est rapidement développé et il a recueilli un soutien dans le monde entier à partir des peuples autochtones ainsi que les Canadiens et Américains non autochtones, sympathique au mouvement. Il a consisté en une série d'actions politique dans le monde entier, inspirée en partie par la grève de la faim de la chef Thérèse Spence d` Attawapiskat et plus coordonnée via les medias sociaux. Le mouvement affirme que le projet de loi omnibus du gouvernement canadien C-45 viole un certain nombre de droits issus des traités historiques. Cependant, selon des sources ouvertes, la chef Theresa Spence ne soutient pas ces protestations.

De grandes manifestations devraient avoir lieu le 5 janvier 2013, dans différentes régions et la plus grande manifestation devrait avoir lieu au port d'entrée de Cornwall en Ontario. D'autres manifestations plus petites peuvent avoir un impact limité sur les opérations de l`ASFC aux points d'entrée dans la Région Sud de l`Ontario (Sarnia, Fort Erie et Niagara Falls); Nord de l`Ontario (Fort Francis et Sault Ste Marie); Région du Pacifique (Douglas. Osoyoos, Kingsgate et Victoria) et la région des Prairies (Boissevain et Carway).

Le mouvement a gagné l'appui de d'autres mouvements de masse similaires, y compris « Occupy Canada » et le Conseil des Canadiens, ainsi que Greenpeace.

Bien que les protestions menée sous la bannière d'inactivité « Idle No More » ont restées pacifiques, il y a un potentiel de violence qui ont plus un impact sur le public.

Les opérations de renseignement et de l'analyse (IOAD) et application régionale et les divisions du renseignement (E&I) continuent d'assurer la liaison avec les organismes partenaires, y compris la Police provinciale de l`Ontario (PPO), la Gendarmerie royale du Canada (GRC), US Customs and Border Protection (US CBP), la US Border Patrol, le service canadien du renseignement de sécurité (SCRS), le Centre d'évaluation intégrée terrorisme (ACTI), Transport Canada (TC) et la Sureté du Québec pour surveiller été évaluer les menaces pas rapport aux blocages prévus.

Activists vow new Idle No More protests

A rail blockade ended on Friday after a court-ordered injunction

Mi'kmaq activists say there will be more "Idle No More" protests in New Brunswick despite Prime Minister Stephen Harper's pledge to hold a meeting with the Assembly of First Nations later this week.

Amy Sock of the Elsipogtog First Nation helped organize a blockade of the Canadian National Rail tracks between Moncton and Miramichi late last week.

The rail blockade ended Friday night when CN won a court injunction, but Sock said she's already planning new protests for the coming week.

The blockade was in support for Attawapiskat First Nation Chief Theresa Spence, who is on her fourth week subsisting only on tea and fish broth.

The Ontario Cree chief has been on a hunger strike since early December to back her demand the prime minister meet with First Nation leaders.

Harper announced on Friday he would meet with aboriginal leaders, including Spence, on Jan. 11.

However, Sock said Harper's scheduled meeting with aboriginal leaders selected by the AFN is not enough.

"If they're going to meet just with Indian Act chiefs, you know, I'm not really too impressed with that," she said.

Sock, as well as other Idle No More activists, said band chiefs elected under federal legislation lack legitimacy.

Ottawa will deal with AFN

Norman Spector, who was prime minister Brian Mulroney's chief of staff during the Oka crisis and constitutional negotiations with aboriginal leaders, said Sock's view presents a challenge for the federal government.

He said the federal government has no choice but to deal with elected chiefs rather than grassroots activists.

"The wise government is going to deal with the AFN, and over time, if that process is successful, some of the more extreme elements will be

'The wise government is going to deal with the AFN, and over delegitimized, will have less support," Spector said.

But Sock said a process that doesn't include activists won't be widely accepted and won't contribute to long-term solutions.

> time, if that process is successful, some of the more extreme elements will be delegitimized, will have less support.'
> — Norman Spector

"We vowed that we will not stop, regardless of the Jan. 11 meeting, regardless of the Jan. 24 meeting, unless some of kind of resolution has been reached that everybody is comfortable with," she said.

Sock said she and others may return to Adamsville, north of Moncton, where they set up on Friday.

She said that is the location of a traditional Mi'kmaq trading post. However, if they return, they have no plans to block the CN line this time.

The Idle No More movement started about two months ago. The movement's mission statement reads, "Idle No More calls on all people to join in a revolution which honors and fulfils Indigenous sovereignty which protects the land and water."

(CONCLUDED – No further reporting)
At 1440 EST. Cornwall & Massena International Bridges on both sides of the border re-open. All marchers that returned to the USA POE presented themselves for inspection. CBSA Cornwall E&I and Cornwall POE are all clear.
At 1346 EST, Bridge still closed from USA and from Cornwall City to the island. But in an attempt to get traffic moving people will be allowed to leave Cornwall island to Cornwall POE and Massena POE. Marchers carrying the 6 Nations (Purple Flag).
At 1309 EST, Cornwall Community Police Service (CCPS) will re-open Brookdale to regular city traffic but the bridge is still closed until all marchers are off the roads and all vehicles with this group are parked and off the roads at the Peoples Fire on Cornwall Island. Then CCPS will make the call once Akwesasne Mohawk Police Service (AMPS) give the all clear that all is safe and the bridge will re-open. Presently the large group is moving fast but there are still a lot of smaller groups moving much slower back up the bridge. It will still be some time before the walkers are all off the bridge.
2 Emergency vehicles were facilitated during this march by Police and CBSA
At 1250 EST, All marched through toll booth heading back on Bridge to Cornwall Island. Any persons carrying the black flags that have covered faces who stay in Cornwall will be approached by CCPS.
At 1218 EST, all 300 or so marched through the POE. . The Group is staking 2 flags beside the existing polls in the traffic circle, the warrior flag and the 6 nations flag (Purple flag). Smaller groups arriving on foot and are reporting into POE properly. At 1150 EST, protesters are starting to arrive at the Cornwall POE.
At 1123 EST, march continuing to Cornwall. Approx. 300 people going North. Vehicles approx. 10-15. Media (CBC) is with them.Bridge closure. CBSA POE STILL OPEN Movement started from GM plant. Approx. 30 people on island and a lot of children. A few vehicles with warrior signs and a few known warriors. A few confirmed warriors and signs and flags. Lawyer and First Nations activist Frank Horn at POE
At 0847 EST, Organizers will let the crowd decide at the staging location today if they will do both bridges or not.
Protest activity commencing in Roosevelt, New York, proceeding by foot across Cornwall Island through CBSA Port of Entry to the City of Cornwall traffic circle. The demonstrators will then return to Cornwall Island. According to Facebook, 1,100 people have indicated they will participate and organizers are expecting a large number of participants. However, inclement weather and the requirement of demonstrators to be processed by CBSA may reduce the number of participants. Indications that criminally inadmissible persons may be part of the demonstration entering Canada. Indications of possible participation by members of the Mohawk Warrior Society, The bridge will be closed to vehicle traffic during the protest (4-6 hours).

More than 60 people are expected to gather at the sails in City Park this afternoon for a flash mob and round dance as the Idle No More movement makes it's way to Kelowna. The protest is part of a nationwide movement with at least three more demonstrations scheduled for today. In the South Okanagan 100 people are expected to meet at the Osoyoos border crossing for a drumming session. AM 1150

"Idle No More protest shut down by CN in New Brunswick"
An Idle No More protest that was blocking commercial trains on Canadian National Rail tracks between Moncton and Miramichi, N.B. on Friday has been shut down. CN Rail filed the order Friday afternoon. It stated that the dozen protestors from the Elsipogtog First Nation had to stop blocking the railway along Highway 126 in Adamsville immediately or face arrest. The group had planned to continue the blockade until Monday. The protesters peacefully left the picket lines, but said their fight isn't over. CBC News

"Idle No More activists to block Deh Cho Bridge'
Drivers who plan to N.W.T.'s Deh Cho Bridge this afternoon could have trouble as Idle No More activists plan to disrupt traffic. Event organizers say the prime minister's commitment to meet with First Nation leaders has only fuelled the Idle No More fire. Organizer Nellie Norwegian said they chose to block the recently opened Deh Cho Bridge to show, even though the federal and territorial governments built the link, it is still on Dene land. She said they do not expect the upcoming meeting to change any of the government's priorities. They hope to draw attention to the need for environmental protection for land and water in the North. The rally and a round dance are expected to block bridge traffic from 2 to 4 p.m., followed by a feast. CBC News

"Idle No More protests target bridges, roads across Canada"
The Idle No More protest movement continues to gain steam with more demonstrations Saturday, after Prime Minister Stephen Harper announced he would meet with a delegation of First Nations chiefs, including Attawapiskat Chief Theresa Spence, who is now on day 26 of a hunger strike. A number of groups have pledged to block bridges, several of which straddle the Canada-U.S. border. Police in Cornwall, Ont., closed the International Bridge for more than three hours in response to an Idle No More protest that began mid-Saturday morning. About 350 protesters crossed the bridge.The bridge reopened by 2 p.m. local time. And in Saskatchewan, RCMP say they've close off Highway 624 from Highway 1 to Highway 46 for safety precautions due to a protest of about 300 people. Back/Retour (#TableOfContents)

Idle No More is an ongoing protest movement originating among the First Nations and other Indigenous Peoples in Canada. It has quickly grown and garnered worldwide support from other Indigenous Peoples as well as sympathetic non-Indigenous Canadians and Americans. It has consisted of a number of political actions worldwide, inspired in part by the hunger strike of Attawapiskat Chief Theresa Spence and further coordinated via social media. The movement claims that the Canadian government's omnibus bill C-45 infringes on a number of historical treaty rights, however, according to open sources, Chief Theresa Spence is not supporting these protests.

Large protests are expected to take place on January 5, 2013, in various regions, with the largest protest expected to occur at the Cornwall Port of Entry in Ontario. Other smaller protests may have a limited impact on CBSA operations at ports of entry in the Southern Ontario Region (Sarnia, Fort Erie and Niagara Falls); Northern Ontario Region (Fort Francis and Sault Ste. Marie); Pacific Region (Douglas, Osoyoos, Kingsgate and Victoria) and the Prairie Region (Boissevain and Carway).

The movement has gained support from other similar mass movements, including Occupy Canada and Council for Canadians as well as Greenpeace.

Although protests conducted under the Idle No More banner remain peaceful, there is the potential for violence the more they impact the public.

The Intelligence Operations and Analysis Division (IOAD) and Regional Enforcement and Intelligence Divisions (E&I) are continuing to liaise with partner agencies, including the Ontario Provincial Police (OPP), the Royal Canadian Mounted Police (RCMP), US Customs and Border Protection (US CBP), US Border Patrol, the Canadian Security and Intelligence Service (CSIS), the Integrated Terrorism Assessment Centre (ITAC), Transport Canada (TC) and the Sûreté du Québec to monitor and assess threats in relation to planned blockades.

« Idle No More » est un mouvement de protestation en cours d'origine entre les Premières Nations et d'autres peuples autochtones du Canada. Il s'est rapidement développé et il a recueilli un soutien dans le monde entier à partir des peuples autochtones ainsi que les Canadiens et Américains non autochtones, sympathique au mouvement. Il a consisté en une série d'actions politique dans le monde entier, inspirée en partie par la grève de la faim de la chef Thérèse Spence d` Attawapiskat et plus coordonnée via les medias sociaux. Le mouvement affirme que le projet de loi omnibus du gouvernement canadien C-45 viole un certain nombre de droits issus des traités historiques. Cependant, selon des sources ouvertes, la chef Theresa Spence ne soutient pas ces protestations.
De grandes manifestations devraient avoir lieu le 5 janvier 2013, dans différentes régions et la plus grande manifestation devrait avoir lieu au port d'entrée de Cornwall en Ontario. D'autres manifestations plus petites peuvent avoir un impact limité sur les opérations de l`ASFC aux points d'entrée dans la Région Sud de l`Ontario (Sarnia, Fort Erie et Niagara Falls); Nord de l`Ontario (Fort Francis et Sault Ste Marie); Région du Pacifique (Douglas. Osoyoos, Kingsgate et Victoria) et la région des Prairies (Boissevain et Carway).
Le mouvement a gagné l'appui de d'autres mouvements de masse similaires, y compris « Occupy Canada » et le Conseil des Canadiens, ainsi que Greenpeace.
Bien que les protestions menée sous la bannière d'inactivité « Idle No More » ont restées pacifiques, il y a un potentiel de violence qui ont plus un impact sur le public.

At 1440 EST. Cornwall & Massena International Bridges on both sides of the border re-open. All marchers that returned to the USA POE presented themselves for inspection. CBSA Cornwall E&I and Cornwall POE are all clear.
At 1346 EST, Bridge still closed from USA and from Cornwall City to the island. But in an attempt to get traffic moving people will be allowed to leave Cornwall island to Cornwall POE and Massena POE. Marchers carrying the 6 Nations (Purple Flag).
At 1309 EST, Cornwall Community Police Service (CCPS) will re-open Brookdale to regular city traffic but the bridge is still closed until all marchers are off the roads and all vehicles with this group are parked and off the roads at the Peoples Fire on Cornwall Island. Then CCPS will make the call once Akwesasne Mohawk Police Service (AMPS) give the all clear that all is safe and the bridge will re-open. Presently the large group is moving fast but there are still a lot of smaller groups moving much slower back up the bridge. It will still be some time before the walkers are all off the bridge.
2 Emergency vehicles were facilitated during this march by Police and CBSA
At 1250 EST, All marched through toll booth heading back on Bridge to Cornwall Island. Any persons carrying the black flags that have covered faces who stay in Cornwall will be approached by CCPS.
At 1218 EST, all 300 or so marched through the POE. . The Group is staking 2 flags beside the existing polls in the traffic circle, the warrior flag and the 6 nations flag (Purple flag). Smaller groups arriving on foot and are reporting into POE properly. At 1150 EST, protesters are starting to arrive at the Cornwall POE.
At 1123 EST, march continuing to Cornwall. Approx. 300 people going North. Vehicles approx. 10-15. Media (CBC) is with them.Bridge closure. CBSA POE STILL OPEN Movement started from GM plant. Approx. 30 people on island and a lot of children. A few vehicles with warrior signs and a few known warriors. A few confirmed warriors and signs and flags. Lawyer and First Nations activist Frank Horn at POE
At 0847 EST, Organizers will let the crowd decide at the staging location today if they will do both bridges or not.
Protest activity commencing in Roosevelt, New York, proceeding by foot across Cornwall Island through CBSA Port of Entry to the City of Cornwall traffic circle. The demonstrators will then return to Cornwall Island. According to Facebook, 1,100 people have indicated they will participate and organizers are expecting a large number of participants. However, inclement weather and the requirement of demonstrators to be processed by CBSA may reduce the number of participants. Indications that criminally inadmissible persons may be part of the demonstration entering Canada. Indications of possible participation by members of the Mohawk Warrior Society, The bridge will be closed to vehicle traffic during the protest (4-6 hours).

"Idle No More Protest in Kelowna"

More than 60 people are expected to gather at the sails in City Park this afternoon for a flash mob and round dance as the Idle No More movement makes it's way to Kelowna. The protest is part of a nationwide movement with at least three more demonstrations scheduled for today. In the South Okanagan 100 people are expected to meet at the Osoyoos border crossing for a drumming session. AM 1150

"Idle No More protest shut down by CN in New Brunswick"

An Idle No More protest that was blocking commercial trains on Canadian National Rail tracks between Moncton and Miramichi, N.B. on Friday has been shut down. CN Rail filed the order Friday afternoon. It stated that the dozen protestors from the Elsipogtog First Nation had to stop blocking the railway along Highway 126 in Adamsville immediately or face arrest. The group had planned to continue the blockade until Monday. The protesters peacefully left the picket lines, but said their fight isn't over. CBC News

"Idle No More activists to block Deh Cho Bridge'

Drivers who plan to N.W.T.'s Deh Cho Bridge this afternoon could have trouble as Idle No More activists plan to disrupt traffic. Event organizers say the prime minister's commitment to meet with First Nation leaders has only fuelled the Idle No More fire. Organizer Nellie Norwegian said they chose to block the recently opened Deh Cho Bridge to show, even though the federal and territorial governments built the link, it is still on Dene land. She said they do not expect the upcoming meeting to change any of the government's priorities. They hope to draw attention to the need for environmental protection for land and water in the North. The rally and a round dance are expected to block bridge traffic from 2 to 4 p.m., followed by a feast. CBC News

"Idle No More protests target bridges, roads across Canada"

The Idle No More protest movement continues to gain steam with more demonstrations Saturday, after Prime Minister Stephen Harper announced he would meet with a delegation of First Nations chiefs, including Attawapiskat Chief Theresa Spence, who is now on day 26 of a hunger strike. A number of groups have pledged to block bridges, several of which straddle the Canada-U.S. border. Police in Cornwall, Ont., closed the International Bridge for more than three hours in response to an Idle No More protest that began mid-Saturday morning. About 350 protesters crossed the bridge.The bridge reopened by 2 p.m. local time. And in Saskatchewan, RCMP say they've close off Highway 624 from Highway 1 to Highway 46 for safety precautions due to a protest of about 300 people. "Protest underway at the Peace Bridge"

Several "Idle No More" protests are planned for today. Protestors have gathered at the Peace Bridge in Fort Erie for a rally, and a march will take place at 1p Saturday. The "peaceful" march will occupy one lane of traffic on the bridge. The single lane closure and is not expected to impact traffic movements or cause border delays. A gathering will be held at the Fort Erie Native Friendship Centre following the march. 610 CKTB

A planned Idle No More protest on the Trans-Canada Highway just outside of Regina has ended. The RCMP had previously advised drivers traveling on the Trans-Canada Highway to expect delays Saturday afternoon between noon and 3 p.m. CST because of the protest. About 150 protesters staged a slowdown blockade on Highway 1 near the Pilot Butte turnoff in the right westbound lane while RCMP directed traffic. CBC News

SYNOPSIS | SYNOPSIS

Idle No More is an ongoing protest movement originating among the First Nations and other Indigenous Peoples in Canada. It has quickly grown and garnered worldwide support from other Indigenous Peoples as well as sympathetic non-Indigenous Canadians and Americans. It has consisted of a number of political actions worldwide, inspired in part by the hunger strike of Attawapiskat Chief Theresa Spence and further coordinated via social media. The movement claims that the Canadian government's omnibus bill C-45 infringes on a number of historical treaty rights, however, according to open sources, Chief Theresa Spence is not supporting these protests.

Large protests are expected to take place on January 5, 2013, in various regions, with the largest protest expected to occur at the Cornwall Port of Entry in Ontario. Other smaller protests may have a limited impact on CBSA operations at ports of entry in the Southern Ontario Region (Sarnia, Fort Erie and Niagara Falls); Northern Ontario Region (Fort Francis and Sault Ste. Marie); Pacific Region (Douglas, Osoyoos, Kingsgate and Victoria) and the Prairie Region (Boissevain and Carway).

The movement has gained support from other similar mass movements, including Occupy Canada and Council for Canadians as well as Greenpeace.

Although protests conducted under the Idle No More banner remain peaceful, there is the potential for violence the more they impact the public.

The Intelligence Operations and Analysis Division (IOAD) and Regional Enforcement and Intelligence Divisions (E&I) are continuing to liaise with partner agencies, including the Ontario Provincial Police (OPP), the Royal Canadian Mounted Police (RCMP), US Customs and Border Protection (US CBP), US Border Patrol, the Canadian Security and Intelligence Service (CSIS), the Integrated Terrorism Assessment Centre (ITAC), Transport Canada (TC) and the Sûreté du Québec to monitor and assess threats in relation to planned blockades.

« Idle No More » est un mouvement de protestation en cours d'origine entre les Premières Nations et d'autres peuples autochtones du Canada. Il s'est rapidement développé et il a recueilli un soutien dans le monde entier à partir des peuples autochtones ainsi que les Canadiens et Américains non autochtones, sympathique au mouvement. Il a consisté en une série d'actions politique dans le monde entier, inspirée en partie par la grève de la faim de la chef Thérèse Spence d` Attawapiskat et plus coordonnée via les medias sociaux. Le mouvement affirme que le projet de loi omnibus du gouvernement canadien C-45 viole un certain nombre de droits issus des traités historiques. Cependant, selon des sources ouvertes, la chef Theresa Spence ne soutient pas ces protestations.
De grandes manifestations devraient avoir lieu le 5 janvier 2013, dans différentes régions et la plus grande manifestation devrait avoir lieu au port d'entrée de Cornwall en Ontario. D'autres manifestations plus petites peuvent avoir un impact limité sur les opérations de l`ASFC aux points d'entrée dans la Région Sud de l`Ontario (Sarnia, Fort Erie et Niagara Falls); Nord de l`Ontario (Fort Francis et Sault Ste Marie); Région du Pacifique (Douglas. Osoyoos, Kingsgate et Victoria) et la région des Prairies (Boissevain et Carway).
Le mouvement a gagné l'appui de d'autres mouvements de masse similaires, y compris « Occupy Canada » et le Conseil des Canadiens, ainsi que Greenpeace.
Bien que les protestions menée sous la bannière d'inactivité « Idle No More » ont restées pacifiques, il y a un potentiel de violence qui ont plus un impact sur le public.
Les opérations de renseignement et de l'analyse (IOAD) et application régionale et les divisions du renseignement (E&I) continuent d'assurer la liaison avec les organismes partenaires, y compris la Police provinciale de l`Ontario (PPO), la Gendarmerie royale du Canada (GRC), US Customs and Border Protection (US CBP), la US Border Patrol, le service canadien du renseignement de sécurité (SCRS), le Centre d'évaluation intégrée terrorisme (ACTI), Transport Canada (TC) et la Sureté du Québec pour surveiller été évaluer les menaces pas rapport aux blocages prévus.

January 5, 2012
(CONCLUDED – No further reporting)
At 1440 EST. Cornwall & Massena International Bridges on both sides of the border re-open. All marchers that returned to the USA POE presented themselves for inspection. CBSA Cornwall E&I and Cornwall POE are all clear.
At 1346 EST, Bridge still closed from USA and from Cornwall City to the island. But in an attempt to get traffic moving people will be allowed to leave Cornwall island to Cornwall POE and Massena POE. Marchers carrying the 6 Nations (Purple Flag).
At 1309 EST, Cornwall Community Police Service (CCPS) will re-open Brookdale to regular city traffic but the bridge is still closed until all marchers are off the roads and all vehicles with this group are parked and off the roads at the Peoples Fire on Cornwall Island. Then CCPS will make the call once Akwesasne Mohawk Police Service (AMPS) give the all clear that all is safe and the bridge will re-open. Presently the large group is moving fast but there are still a lot of smaller groups moving much slower back up the bridge. It will still be some time before the walkers are all off the bridge.
2 Emergency vehicles were facilitated during this march by Police and CBSA
At 1250 EST, All marched through toll booth heading back on Bridge to Cornwall Island. Any persons carrying the black flags that have covered faces who stay in Cornwall will be approached by CCPS.
At 1218 EST, all 300 or so marched through the POE. . The Group is staking 2 flags beside the existing polls in the traffic circle, the warrior flag and the 6 nations flag (Purple flag). Smaller groups arriving on foot and are reporting into POE properly. At 1150 EST, protesters are starting to arrive at the Cornwall POE.
At 1123 EST, march continuing to Cornwall. Approx. 300 people going North. Vehicles approx. 10-15. Media (CBC) is with them.Bridge closure. CBSA POE STILL OPEN Movement started from GM plant. Approx. 30 people on island and a lot of children. A few vehicles with warrior signs and a few known warriors. A few confirmed warriors and signs and flags. Lawyer and First Nations activist Frank Horn at POE
At 0847 EST, Organizers will let the crowd decide at the staging location today if they will do both bridges or not.
Protest activity commencing in Roosevelt, New York, proceeding by foot across Cornwall Island through CBSA Port of Entry to the City of Cornwall traffic circle. The demonstrators will then return to Cornwall Island. According to Facebook, 1,100 people have indicated they will participate and organizers are expecting a large number of participants. However, inclement weather and the requirement of demonstrators to be processed by CBSA may reduce the number of participants. Indications that criminally inadmissible persons may be part of the demonstration entering Canada. Indications of possible participation by members of the Mohawk Warrior Society, The bridge will be closed to vehicle traffic during the protest (4-6 hours).

There were no reported issues.
At 1344 EST, The Blue Water Bridge has been reopened following the conclusion of the Idle No More protest.
At 1221 EST, presence of a few Mohawk warrior flags, all peaceful at this time. POE SEN reporting temporary blockage of traffic, commercial trucks being diverted around protest group.
At 1133 EST, BWB is holding traffic coming into Canada and both CBSA and CBP is clearing any traffic in queue. Sarnia is reporting approximately 200 protesters – no extremist members observed.
According to the social media (Facebook) there is a possibility of 420 attending.
Participants are to gather at the 'Soul's Monument' located under the bridge at 1000 EST . Beginning between 1100-1130 EST, participants will march from the monument to Front Street via Venetian Boulevard. Previous information indicated participants will then enter onto Highway 402 and block traffic in both directions. As Highway 402 links directly to the Bluewater Bridge, a traffic stoppage affecting both directions of this highway will have a direct impact on bridge traffic. Information indicates that this event will include members of Aamjiwnaang First Nation and Kettle Point First Nation. Event organizers will also be advising Walpole Island First Nation, Chippewa of the Thames First Nation, Munsee-Delaware First Nation and Stoney Point First Nation should members of these communities wish to participate.

Information was received from organizers of today's demonstration of the potential of a "rogue" group planning a protest on Indian Road in Sarnia. This apparent protest is not being promoted by the Idle No More demonstration. The number of demonstrators, exact location and time is unknown.
At 0830 EST, No new information was reported.
Protest and march starting at 10:00 under the bridge, then proceeding to Highway 403 with the intention of blocking traffic, possibly affecting access to the Port of Entry. Sun Media is reporting that protestors plan to block the Canadian side of the Bluewater Bridge for one hour.

Back/Retour (#TableOfContents)

Idle No More is an ongoing protest movement originating among the First Nations and other Indigenous Peoples in Canada. It has quickly grown and garnered worldwide support from other Indigenous Peoples as well as sympathetic non-Indigenous Canadians and Americans. It has consisted of a number of political actions worldwide, inspired in part by the hunger strike of Attawapiskat Chief Theresa Spence and further coordinated via social media. The movement claims that the Canadian government's omnibus bill C-45 infringes on a number of historical treaty rights, however, according to open sources, Chief Theresa Spence is not supporting these protests.

Large protests are expected to take place on January 5, 2013, in various regions, with the largest protest expected to occur at the Cornwall Port of Entry in Ontario. Other smaller protests may have a limited impact on CBSA operations at ports of entry in the Southern Ontario Region (Sarnia, Fort Erie and Niagara Falls); Northern Ontario Region (Fort Francis and Sault Ste. Marie); Pacific Region (Douglas, Osoyoos, Kingsgate and Victoria) and the Prairie Region (Boissevain and Carway).

The movement has gained support from other similar mass movements, including Occupy Canada and Council for Canadians as well as Greenpeace.

Although protests conducted under the Idle No More banner remain peaceful, there is the potential for violence the more they impact the public.

The Intelligence Operations and Analysis Division (IOAD) and Regional Enforcement and Intelligence Divisions (E&I) are continuing to liaise with partner agencies, including the Ontario Provincial Police (OPP), the Royal Canadian Mounted Police (RCMP), US Customs and Border Protection (US CBP), US Border Patrol, the Canadian Security and Intelligence Service (CSIS), the Integrated Terrorism Assessment Centre (ITAC), Transport Canada (TC) and the Sûreté du Québec to monitor and assess threats in relation to planned blockades.

« Idle No More » est un mouvement de protestation en cours d'origine entre les Premières Nations et d'autres peuples autochtones du Canada. Il s'est rapidement développé et il a recueilli un soutien dans le monde entier à partir des peuples autochtones ainsi que les Canadiens et Américains non autochtones, sympathique au mouvement. Il a consisté en une série d'actions politique dans le monde entier, inspirée en partie par la grève de la faim de la chef Thérèse Spence d` Attawapiskat et plus coordonnée via les medias sociaux. Le mouvement affirme que le projet de loi omnibus du gouvernement canadien C-45 viole un certain nombre de droits issus des traités historiques. Cependant, selon des sources ouvertes, la chef Theresa Spence ne soutient pas ces protestations.
De grandes manifestations devraient avoir lieu le 5 janvier 2013, dans différentes régions et la plus grande manifestation devrait avoir lieu au port d'entrée de Cornwall en Ontario. D'autres manifestations plus petites peuvent avoir un impact limité sur les opérations de l`ASFC aux points d'entrée dans la Région Sud de l`Ontario (Sarnia, Fort Erie et Niagara Falls); Nord de l`Ontario (Fort Francis et Sault Ste Marie); Région du Pacifique (Douglas. Osoyoos, Kingsgate et Victoria) et la région des Prairies (Boissevain et Carway).
Le mouvement a gagné l'appui de d'autres mouvements de masse similaires, y compris « Occupy Canada » et le Conseil des Canadiens, ainsi que Greenpeace.
Bien que les protestions menée sous la bannière d'inactivité « Idle No More » ont restées pacifiques, il y a un potentiel de violence qui ont plus un impact sur le public.
Les opérations de renseignement et de l'analyse (IOAD) et application régionale et les divisions du renseignement (E&I) continuent d'assurer la liaison avec les organismes partenaires, y compris la Police provinciale de l`Ontario (PPO), la Gendarmerie royale du Canada (GRC), US Customs and Border Protection (US CBP), la US Border Patrol, le service canadien du renseignement de sécurité (SCRS), le Centre d'évaluation intégrée terrorisme (ACTI), Transport Canada (TC) et la Sureté du Québec pour surveiller été évaluer les menaces pas rapport aux blocages prévus.

Gents: next Friday shaping up to be a day of concentrated action likely across the Province for Idle No More (same day as PM Harper meeting). Can I ask you to speak with Brian Pittman in his role as Port Security head to be prepared for this? As it is their jurisdiction, I have copied VPD on this also.

Thanks,

Paul

Please be advised of the following events taking place in the NWT:

A blockage of the Deh Cho bridge took place on 2013-01-05 at 14:05 - 14:45. The event was organized out of Fort Providence and our members were liaising with the organizers before, during and after event with no incidents arising. The Department of Highways and the Territorial Government were consulted and updated as well.

The Deh Cho Bridge blockade was limited to North End only and no one crossed the bridge. There were 250 people participating and seven vehicles were delayed. There was a high media presence during the event.

A group out of Behchoko blocked highway 3 that goes though community 2013-01-05 also at 14:00 - 14:40. There were 30 people present with fifteen vehicles being delayed and one media person present.

There were no issues at either event and there was good communication with all parties.

Everyone,

Please see the attached CBC news article "Activists vow new Idle No More Protests - Mi'kmaq activists say there will be more "Idle No More" protests in New Brunswick despite Prime Minister Stephen Harper's pledge to hold a meeting with the Assembly of First Nations later this week. Amy Sock of the Elsipogtog First Nation helped organize a blockade of the Canadian National Rail tracks between Moncton and Miramichi late last week. The rail blockade ended Friday night when CN won a court injunction, but Sock said she's already planning new protests for the coming week."

Karen

>>> Karen Grover 2013-01-05 10:06 >>>
Good morning,

I found an article online from the Times and Transcript (attached) quoting John Levi saying that they intend on blocking the railway for 4 days, 24 hours per day. They indicate they will be allowing Via Rail passenger trains to pass and will only be stopping CN cargo trains, putting his truck across the tracks if he had to. He indicates that if the cargo train tries to force its way through, they will block the Via one as well.

Date: Information valid as of 06 Jan 2013, 08:00 (EST)

Description of current incident: A number of First Nations (FN) Protests have occured as a result of a grassroots campaign called "Idle No More" which is protesting Bill C-45, the government's omnibus budget legislation.

Source(s) of reporting: Aboriginal Affairs and Northern Development Canada, PS Regional Offices, Transport Canada, Canada Border Services Agency, media/open source reporting.

Current actions: GOC is monitoring the situation and has established contact with key partners in order to maintain cohesive information sharing. Event management of the protests falls under the purview of local jurisdictions and local law enforcement agencies, as appropriate.

On 04 Jan, the Prime Minister announced he will be meeting with a delegation of FN leaders, coordinated by the Assembly of First Nations (AFN), on 11 Jan. Media reporting indicates Chief Spence will take part in the meeting.

On 06 Jan at 00:02 EST, TC advised the FN rail blockade on the CN Rail Line through Tyendinaga was cleared. As of 07:15 EST on 06 Jan, TC reported that a CN freight train was able to travel through the affected area without incident. On 06 Jan, VIA Rail updated its travel advisory to indicate the FN rail blockade ended; all VIA services will gradually return to normal.

Assessment/Analysis: FN protest activities on 05 Jan were peaceful in nature. Some border operations and rail services were affected for a short period of time, including VIA service which affected approximately 1,200 passengers.

Although it may have a mitigating effect, it is unclear what implications the 11 Jan meeting between the Prime Minister and FN leaders, including Chief Spence, will have on planned protest activities.

Departments and Agencies with further information on this incident are asked to report to the GOC.

Additional situation reports: This will be the last situation report on this event; however, the GOC will continue to monitor and report on FN protest activities in the GOC Daily Brief.

Additional Products: Nil.

Unilateral Legislation Dealing with First Nations | 2013

A Summary of Current Federal Legislative Amendments Affecting First Nations

The Proposed Legislation	Why It Concerns First Nations
Bill C-599 First Nations Education Plan Act	• Incorporates and imposes Provincial Laws into First Nation Education on Reserves. • Violation of Treaty Right to Education. • The Feds wish to take the Treaty Right to Education – nationalize it, control it, legislate it. • Does not account for Education being chronically underfunded – even in comparison to the Province. • Schools located on reserve will belong to the Province, subject to Provincial jurisdiction. If a school was outdated, the Province could sell the land it resides on and the building to another company or person. • The Feds will vacate jurisdiction to the Province – not just stepping away from Treaty Obligations – but Funding Obligations. ("Want to apply for Post-Secondary? Go Apply for Provincial Scholarships." is coming)
Bill S-3 Gender Equity in Indian Registration Act	• Introduced in March 2010, was supposed to be the remedy but actually continued the discrimination because the status reinstated is of inferior status. Grandchildren born before September 4, 1951 who trace their Aboriginal heritage through their maternal parentage are still denied status while those who trace their heritage through their paternal counterparts are not
Bill C-10 Omnibus Crime Bill "Safe Streets and Communities Act"	• Imposes tougher sentences for a wide range of convictions including youth repeat offenders, and will impose mandatory minimum sentences for offences such as sexual assault and drug trafficking. • Any changes that trigger an increase in the prison population are bound to have a significant impact on First Nations. Aboriginals make up just 3.75 per cent of the general population but 18 per cent of federal prisoners come from aboriginal communities. With aboriginals already over-represented in the justice system, it is predicted C-10 will hit First Nations harder than the general population.
Bill C-48 Act to Amend the Income Tax Act Technical Tax Amendment Act First Nations Goods and Services Tax (FNGST)	• An agreement giving up tax relief under section 87 of the Indian Act. • This tax applies when the band council or other governing body of a First Nation passes its own law imposing FNGST. The Canada Revenue Agency administers FNGST on behalf of the First Nation. • FNGST has the same basic operating rules as the GST/HST. The FNGST only replaces the GST, the federal part of HST.

Current Stages of Legislation

A bill must go through a number of specific stages in the House of Commons and the Senate before it becomes law:

- notice of motion for leave to introduce and placement on Order Paper;
- preparation of a bill by a committee (where applicable);
- introduction and first reading;
- reference to a committee before second reading (where applicable);
- second reading and reference to a committee;
- consideration in committee;
- report stage;
- third reading (and passage);
- consideration and passage by the Senate;
- passage of Senate amendments by the Commons (where applicable);
- Royal Assent, and
- coming into force.

Current Bills at Royal Assent:

- Bill C-38, Budget Omnibus Bill #1, Navigable Waters Act
- Bill C-45, Budget Omnibus Bill #2, Jobs and Growth Act

Current Bills at 2nd Reading:

- Bill C-428, Indian Act Amendment and Replacement Act, December 05, 2012
- Bill S-207, Act to Amend the Interpretation Act, June 7, 2012
- Bill C-27, First Nations Financial Transparency Act, December 13, 2012

Current Bills at 1st Reading:

- Bill S-2, Family Homes on Reserve and Matrimonial Interests or Right Act, December 8, 2012
- Bill C-6, First Nations Election Act, May 4, 2012
- Bill S-8, Safe Drinking Water for First Nations Act, June 19, 2012
- Bill S-212, First Nations Self-Government Recognition Bill, November 1, 2012
- Bill C-48, An Act to Amend the Income Tax Act, The Excise Tax Act, The Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangement Act, The First Nations Goods and Services Tax Act"
  Technical Tax Amendments Acts 2012, November 21, 2012

Proposed:

- First Nations Private Property Ownership Act

A Summary of Current Federal Legislative Amendments Affecting First Nations

The Proposed Legislation	Why It Concerns First Nations
Bill C-38 Budget Omnibus Bill #1	• This 450 page bill changed more than 70 federal Acts without proper Parliamentary debate. • This bill dramatically changes Canada's federal environmental legislation, removing many protections for water, fish, and the environment. • The changes were made without consulting First Nations.
Bill C-45 Budget Omnibus Bill #2	• This second bill also exceeds 450 pages, and changed 44 federal laws, again without proper Parliamentary debate. • This bill removes many fish habitat protections and fails to recognize Aboriginal commercial fisheries. • Changes to the Navigable Waters Protection Act reduce the number of lakes and rivers where navigation and federal environmental assessment is required from 32,000 to just 97 lakes, and from 2.25 million to just 62 rivers. This means a shocking 99% of Canada's waterways lost their protection for navigation and federal enviro assessment purposes. • These changes were made without consulting First Nations.
Bill C-27 First Nations Financial Transparency Act	• This bill imposes standards on First Nations governments that far exceed those for municipal, provincial and federal officials in other jurisdictions. • It requires First Nation-owned businesses (unlike non-Aboriginal businesses) to publicly report income and expenses, thus undermining competitiveness. • It adds additional bureaucracy to the existing requirement that each First Nation provide Ottawa over 150 financial reports each year, contrary to the recommendations of Canada's Auditor General and the Treasury Board. • These changes are based on a common, racist assumption that First Nations' officials are all corrupt – an assumption that is factually and statistically incorrect.
The First Nations Private Property Ownership Act (Proposed)	• The government intends to introduce this legislation, but it hasn't yet. • The Act would permit private property ownership within reserve boundaries. Individual bands would be able to adopt the legislation on an optional basis. • A private property system is contrary to the goal of many First Nations to protect Aboriginal lands as a collective resource. • The Act would allow the small existing Aboriginally-owned land base to be sold to non-Aboriginal buyers, forever losing these lands as Aboriginal lands. This is particularly a risk for impoverished communities who may be forced by economic desperation to sell their own lands for short term gain. • First Nations need more options to use their lands for economic development purposes, but this simple 'one size fits all' fix is dangerous. The government should instead work with First Nations to address real self-sufficiency by ensuring Aboriginal control over resources extracted in their traditional lands, and addressing educational, health and other social development.

The Proposed Legislation	Why It Concerns First Nations
Bill S-2 Family Homes on Reserve and Matrimonial Interests or Right Act	• There are currently no laws that determine how property on reserve is divided up when married couples divorce. This bill addresses that "gap", but does so without recognizing First Nations' jurisdiction over reserve property. • There are many issues associated with matrimonial property on reserve, including violence against women, housing availability, self-government rights, capacity to develop and enforce laws, and access to justice. These issues have been disregarded in the interests of a "simple fix". • The provisional laws in this legislation will infringe on First Nations' inherent self-government rights. The legislation will also make it difficult for people to ensure the laws are enforced, as they would have to go to a provincial court, which can be difficult due to distance and expense.
Bill S-6 First Nations Elections Act	• This Bill provides an alternative elections regime under the Indian Act. • Although this will affect all First Nations, there was no consultation about it. • It is positive that this bill allows First Nations to opt into an alternative regime for elections. The Minister can, however, simply impose an election process against the will of a First Nation community, and at the discretion of the Minister (if the Minister decides there has been a problem with an election). This can lead to political interference with First Nations elections.
Bill S-8 Safe Drinking Water for First Nations Act	• This Act will allow Canada to over-ride First Nation by-laws, BCRs and policies that protect safe drinking water. • The Minister will now have the power to require First Nations to charge fees to members for receiving clean water. • The Act allows the government to annul or destroy Aboriginal rights and treaty rights "to the extent necessary to ensure safe drinking water." This is a limited power but is concerning in principle, especially when the government was not able to provide any justification why it needed this power.
Bill C-428 Indian Act Amendment and Replacement Act	• This is a private members bill that is a substantial piece of legislation which would impose sweeping changes to the Indian Act. Yet there has been no proper consultation with First Nations about it. • First Nations support the need to abolish the Indian Act. Any discussion about legislation to replace the Indian Act, however, needs to fully involve First Nations. Yet there has been no substantial consultation on this bill.
Bill S-207 An Act to amend the Interpretation Act	• This Bill says that no legislation will be interpreted as annulling or destroying Aboriginal or treaty rights. However, if another Act showed a clear intention of destroy such rights, this Act would not prevent that from happening.
Bill S-212 First Nations Self-Government Recognition Bill	• This legislation has been introduced for the fourth time. • This Act would make it possible for First Nations to take on much of the authority currently given to provinces (such as fisheries, wildlife and habitat management, education, child protection and adoption, and health care). • If the government intends to support or proceed with this Act, however, there must be consultation with First Nations as the impact on First Nation communities will be profound.

Mike, just came out on CBC in Nova Scotia

Aboriginal activists in Nova Scotia say they have no intention of abandoning the Idle No More movement despite Prime Minister Stephen Harper's promise to meet with native leaders.
Idle No More, which began in late October, is a grassroots movement made up of people who mainly want to stop Bill C-45, a second omnibus budget bill that will change the legislation contained in dozens of acts including the Indian Act, the Navigation Protection Act and the Environmental Assessment Act.
In addition to the legislative changes, those involved in the movement were angered by what they call a lack of consultation with indigenous peoples. Members of the movement have also expressed concern about other acts and bills from the federal government.
Cheryl Maloney, with the Nova Scotia Native Women's Association, said she jumped into the Idle No More movement at the Indian Brook First Nation to force the federal government to finally recognize the Marshall decision on native fishing rights (http://www.cbc.ca/news/background/fishing/marshall.html).Cheryl Maloney, with the Nova Scotia Native Women's Association, says she won't abandon the Idle No More movement. (CBC)
"They tied us up into five-year agreements," said Maloney.
"When those agreements ran out, it was silence. Dead silence. They just acted like the treaty right isn't there."
In 1996, Donald Marshall Jr. was convicted after he caught and sold 210 kilograms of eels out of season and without a licence. But Marshall successfully argued that an ancient treaty gave him the right to catch and sell fish for commercial purposes and in 1999, the Supreme Court of Canada ruled First Nations people had a treaty right to fish and sell their catch to earn what the court called "a moderate livelihood."
First Nations fishermen started exercising that right almost immediately after the top court's decision, which led to confrontations on water and on land as people began fishing with no regard for federal licencing, quotas or conservation plans.'They haven't moved on it'
Maloney said the five-year agreements that were worked out between bands and Fisheries and Oceans Canada were nothing more than delay tactics to keep peace and buy time.
She said what's needed now is federal legislation that permanently recognizes First Nations people's treaty right to fish.
"I have a fishing boat that's not fishing now. I should be able to go out and put the boat in the water and fish it for a moderate livelihood," said Maloney.
"We've been waiting for them to say, 'This is how we're going to manage it together.' They haven't moved on it."
Bruce Wildsmith, a legal advisor to the Assembly of Nova Scotia Mi'kmaq Chiefs, said he understands the frustration behind Nova Scotia's Idle No More movement.
"More than 13 years after the Donald Marshall case, there is no livelihood fishery operating in Nova Scotia. Why is that?" he asked.
"There appears to be no will on the part of Canada to actually provide a mandate and sit down and negotiate."
Aboriginal leaders from the Indian Brook First Nation and from communities all over the Maritimes are set to meet in Moncton on Tuesday for a meeting of the Atlantic Policy Congress of First Nations Chiefs Secretariat.
On Friday, Harper is set to meet with a delegation of First Nations chiefs including Attawapiskat Chief Theresa Spence, who has been on a hunger strike since Dec. 11 - the day after Idle No More's National Day of Action.

Good Afternoon Everyone,
This message is being sent on behalf of Supt. Rod McCann
Attached please find a copy of the 10th update of the Situational Assessment on "Idle No More" demonstrations.
Also attached is the updated "Idle No More" calendar of events.
Key Points:
* This past weekend saw significant protest activity around the province which included bridge blockades, highway blockades and rail disruption. The demonstrations where overwhelmingly peaceful.

* Upcoming Events

It was noted that the 11th of January will see a number of protests throughout Ontario which will coincide with the Prime Ministers meeting with AFN Chiefs in Ottawa.

Jan 16, 2013

This date has been identified as the launch date for "indefinite economic disruptions".

My apologies if you're receiving this twice,

Regards,

Tino

Native protesters gather as they take part in an Idle No More march at the Peace Arch border crossing between Canada ...You might want to mark January 11th on your calendars.
That will be the day that Prime Minister Stephen Harper meets with First Nations leaders in response to the ongoing Idle No More protests over Bill C-45 and its impacts on aboriginal communities.
It's also the day that protest organizers are planning a 'Global Day of Action ( https://www.facebook.com/events/461884363867603/?ref=22&suggestsessionid=58092671357577727)' with solidarity rallies ( https://docs.google.com/spreadsheet/ccc?key=0ArPmzCvg7OwXdFQ2Wko4MDVLM0czbERSbmI4Ulo4SFE#gid=0) in countries around the world.
So far, 35 intentional events are in the works: 31 in the United States and one in each of the UK, Portugal, Germany and New Zealand.
In the UK, activists are being asked to meet-up at the Canadian High Commission in London.

"The colonialist government of Canada is trying to pass these laws which will be disastrous for the indigenous people of Canada," notes the event's Facebook page (http://www.facebook.com/events/475865922455157/) which has 29 people committed to attending.
"What we are now seeing in Canada is the willful evil act of European settlers stealing land from First Nation People, who are part of the divided Indigenous people of the Western Hemisphere."
One of the bigger rallies will be in San Diego where 171 people have agreed to attend a "Round Dance" in support of hunger-striking Chief Theresa Spence and treaty rights.
Meanwhile there are 27 protests planned for Canada. Organizers in Ottawa (https://www.facebook.com/events/406023956144410/) are hoping to get over 10,000 people out to their day-long rally on Victoria Island where Chief Spence currently resides.

Here is the full statement from the 'January 11 -Idle No More' Facebook page ( https://www.facebook.com/events/461884363867603/):
To demonstrate your support for the rising global Indigenous Peoples Movement by taking action in your community with your event to run parallel to the meeting between PM Harper and the AFN.
The goal is to raise the profile of the movement, demonstrate our global presence, and give visibility to the growing momentum as a peoples' movement first.
As only a few AFN-determined representatives will be chosen to participate in the meeting with Harper, it will be important to show that the rest of the movement stands united with one voice, that it is not going anywhere, and that we here to demonstrate the strength and resurgence of our nations.
January 11 will also be in honour of Chief Theresa Spence to mark the 1-month anniversary of her hunger strike. As well as to honour the other chiefs and elders who have been on hunger strike with her.
All nations and all people from around the world are invited to join in celebrating and affirming their support for what is happening and the need to keep things moving forward together.
What Can You Do?
It is hoped that every community will take the opportunity to organize a #J11 event or action in their own way.
There is no specific action being suggested, just simply a framework and rallying point for all peoples to stand united—to offer a strong, loud and visible alternative to the AFN/Harper agenda and messaging.
Please spread the word and organize in your community.

On Twitter, use #J11 hashtag for your event.

Sir/Chief

A highway blockade is in the planning stages for January 16th, this pending the outcome of January 11th meeting with the PM. Plans are such that this time around, they want to have the opportunity to provide literature to motorist. I will consult with Brunway on what would be the safest way to provide WFN people that opportunity.

Passed on FYI.

UPDATE:

- I spoke with Wayne RUSSETT, and he wanted to point out that this meeting is NOT/NOT a meeting between the PM and "Idle No More". The PM is meeting with the Council Chiefs. While discussions might include some topics of concern for the "Idle No More" movement, this is not the purpose of the meeting. It appears as though the media and "Idle No More" have created a misconception that the PM is meeting with them directly.

Please note this information is only advance notice based on our discussion. Wayne will forward more as soon as he can, stay tuned.

ISSUE: Update on status of BC 'Idle No More' public awareness campaign in British Columbia among First Nations. (File EDIV 2013-083)

BACKGROUND:

- As per previous briefings the 'Idle No More' (INM) grassroots continues to hold peaceful, relatively brief public awareness demonstrations in relation to First Nations relations with the Government of Canada, as well as in solidarity with Chief Spence, currently holding a hunger strike in Ottawa.

- Over the preceding two weeks, demonstrations have been held at shopping malls, government and public facilities and FN Band Offices, but increasingly the focus of demonstrations have been targeting transportation infrastructure.

- To date, all the demonstrations have been peaceful and brief in nature, with attendees varying in some demonstrations from 200 - 400 people to very poor attendance (under 12 people) at some demonstrations. Some Chiefs and Bands openly do not subscribe to the movement and/or its principles.

- In response to the (various) issues and calls for engagement, Prime Minister Harper has agreed to meet with First Nations leaders (likely including Chief Spence) on January 11th, 2013 (this coming Friday). Notwithstanding, individual and small-scale INM events are being planned and Chief Spence has indicated she will continue to conduct the hunger strike.

- Previously and prior to the announcement of PM Harper's meeting, a 'Day of Action' had been communicated for January 16th, however discussion and planning for this event has ended and no further information specific to the 16th has been communicated (see next point).

CURRENT STATUS:

- Following the announcement of the meeting, INM social media communications have been focussed on a 'Day of Action' to coincide with the meeting on January 11th. This day and planning for events appears to have eclipsed the previously communicated day of action on January 16th (prior to announcement of FN meeting with the Prime Minister).

- The primary interest in organizing one larger, province-wide demonstration and focussed on key economic axes of transportation and infrastructure (ports, ferry terminals, airports, highways, railways),

- Thus far, information received has been concerning a demonstration at Vancouver City Hall and the Port of Vancouver on the 11th. A flash mob has been organized for downtown Vancouver at the CTV studio, and solidarity rally with Chief Spence at Victoria City Hall. This information has been shared with Vancouver and Victoria Police Departments, as well as E Division BIP/Ports and port security.

- Another event that has emerged in the last 24 hours, crossing different jurisdictions. A disruption of traffic is planned by INM participants on the Hwy 99/Hwy 1 corridor from Pemberton to Lillooet. RCMP ~~Detachments from Sea to Sky to Lillooet, as well as Stl'atl'imx Tribal Police have all be~~en advised and continue to monitor and prepare for this event. Another traffic blocking event has been identified in Lytton near/at Hwy 1, however this event is not sanctioned by the Band and does not appear to be gaining very much support. Further information is being gathered at the detachment level and through analysis on these events.

- a possible demonstration near the Ferry Terminal in Nanaimo and (a second) demonstration at Peace Arch border crossing. Further information will be shared once identified and collected.

- Any other information gathered on specific demonstrations will be disseminated through district command as received.

- There have been continuing efforts at organizing INM events around BC both before and after January 11th, and these are similarly being disseminated as received to the jurisdiction impacted. One such demonstration is scheduled for Chilliwack on January 13, 2013, and the First Nation is working with UFVD and city engineering to ensure maximum safety during the march, with an estimated time on the road that runs on Reserve Land as 15 minutes (only).

- All communication thus far has indicated IMN events will remain peaceful, cooperative and brief in nature (non-long term blockade). All responses to these demonstrations, including those that block transportation routes, highways and so on, will have a measured, consistent and appropriate response.

STRATEGIC CONSIDERATIONS:

- Comprehensive information gathering still remains with working level relations between First Nations and detachment/district-level resources.

- E Division Strategic Communications has transmitted a communications package to deal with media on local demonstrations, and retains ownership on questions covering larger issues or province-wide action.

- The most apparent vulnerable points for disruption in BC where protesters will maximize both protest message and publicity remain: Major Highways, Railway Routes, Marine Ports/Ferry Terminals, Airports and Government Buildings (DFO, Offices of MP's, CBSA, etc).

- RCMP OIC of Operational Readiness and Response has been in regular consultation with various federal and provincial emergency stakeholders, in the event of longer term/wide scale paralysis of infrastructure and necessary provincial coordination (including DEOC, if necessary).

- ECROPS and E Division APS continue to work with partners and within an MCM model to collate and disseminate information, as well as develop a strategic level operational plan is being developed in the event of a major, longer term demonstration or any provide-wide paralysis of transportation and/or infrastructure. In addition to Division-wide briefings, an up to date matrix is being finalized within E CROPS and will also be distributed regularly (Mon/Wed/Fri).

Subject: Attawapiskat chief won't attend PM meeting in GG's absence - 20 minutes ago (CBC)

FYI, as it could have a significant impact for Friday.

Attawapiskat Chief Theresa Spence says she won't attend Friday's "working meeting" between First Nations chiefs and Prime Minister Stephen Harper, because the presence of Gov. Gen. David Johnston is "integral" and he won't be there.

"We have sent a letter to Buckingham Palace and requesting that Queen Elizabeth II send forth her representative which is the Governor General of Canada," Spence said in a release. "I will not be attending Friday's meeting with the prime minister, as the Governor General's attendance is integral when discussing inherent and treaty rights."
The key demand of Spence, who has been declining solid food since Dec.11 as a form of protest, is a meeting between the Crown and First Nations to discuss what she characterizes as "treaty issues."
The Assembly of First Nations began holding strategy and planning meetings in Ottawa Tuesday to prepare for Friday's meeting. On Wednesday and Thursday, the AFN is expected to hold ceremonies and other forums to engage its membership and consult in advance of the talks.
Also on Friday, the grassroots protest movement Idle No More announced Tuesday that it's organizing a "one-day national dialogue" with indigenous chiefs to "discuss water, land, sovereignty and treaty relationships" at Fort Qu'Appelle, Saskatchewan's Treaty 4 Governance Centre.

Idle No More planned protests

ISSUE:
- To inform of the planned protests in New Brunswick aligned with the Idle No More movement.

BACKGROUND:
-Since late December 2012, there has been several protests across New Brunswick by several First Nations members. Our overall relationship with the individuals involved has been extremely positive and no violence nor any arrests have been generated from these protests.

CURRENT STATUS:
- A protest march is planned to take place tomorrow, January 9th, 2013, at noon in downtown Moncton from the Champlain Mall to City Hall. It is expected this action will cause significant disruption to traffic. A plan has been designed to manage the event and ensure overall public safety.
-Further, there is also a call for a non-violent protest in front of the office of MP Mike ALLEN in Woodstock on January 11th, 2013 by members of the Woodstock First Nation which is supported by the Chief. The Woodstock Town Police has been advised accordingly.
- As well there is a plan, by the same group, to block the Trans-Canada highway; however, this is suspended pending the outcome of the talks between the PM and the National Chief of First Nations.

Once again no violence is expected.

STRATEGIC COMMUNICATIONS:
Our Divisional media unit will prepare a strategy to deal with any media enquiries should these events take place as planned.

PURPOSE:
There have been several media and social networking reports of planned protests and potential blockades in support for the "Idle No More" Aboriginal-based solidarity movement. (U) These protests are being monitored for RCMP senior management situational awareness and public and police officer safety. (A)

This report will provide a summary of reported planned Canadian and international events within the last 24 hours, a list of known events being organized within the next 24 hours, as well as events planned until January 12th. These lists may not be complete as the environment is constantly changing, nor is it confirmed that these events have actually taken place. (U)

OVERVIEW:
There were several peaceful protests across Canada on January 5, 2013 in support of Idle No More. Some border operations and rail services were affected in various degrees for brief periods of time during the day, including VIA services between Toronto-Ottawa and Toronto-Montreal Media reports indicate the CN police are investigating the tampering of crossing signals during the blockade of rail lines east of Belleville, Ontario (ON). (U)

A meeting between Prime Minister Harper and Minister Duncan (Minister of Aboriginal Affairs and Northern Development) and a delegation of First Nations leaders, coordinated by the Assembly of First Nations (AFN), is set for Friday, January 11, 2013. The focus of this meeting will be treaty relationship and aboriginal rights and economic development. Media reports indicate Idle No More organizers have called for a global day of action on January 11 to coincide with this meeting; however, it is unclear what impact this meeting may have on future planned protests. (U)

Information received indicates two domestic events are organized for January 8, 2013, in North Bay, ON and Calgary, Alberta (AB). Reports indicate there is one event planned for January 9, 2013, in Moncton, New Brunswick (NB). There are 14 events planned between January 10 and 12 in AB, British Columbia (BC), NB, Nova Scotia (NS) and ON. (U)

Good Morning to all,

Yesterday at 16:30hrs. that there was going to be an info session that night at 19:00hrs about the Idle no more movement and that I was welcome to join them if I wanted.

Myself and Cst Christa Maktaak attended for the meeting. The meeting was from 19:00hrs to 21:00hrs. There were several handouts and a video on the Idle no more movement.

On Friday January 11th there will be protests in Fredericton at 11:30 at the MP's office. After the protest, the group will go to St Marys and have drumming and dancing and prayers for this cause.

On the same day, Woodstock First Nation will be going to MP Mike Allen's office and protest there followed by cultural activities

Tobique First Nation will be protesting again on the Trans Canada Highway at 11:30hrs at the same location as last time. There is talk that some from Tobique will go to Ottawa for the Protest on Parliament Hill Friday.

I was asked by the elders if I can contact Brunway again for them to set up the traffic cones and merge to one lane again. I advised I will advise Brunway of the Community plans. There may be snow that day and they said that the group will be there rain or shine.

Today, a group of the elder women are meeting to photocopy info to hand out and prepare a list of documents to share with community at a future meeting.

It has been acknowledged Nationally that Indians need to be education on the various treaty's and acts so as to be united in the message. So, the group here is preparing this to share with the group to educate everyone. There was conversation about what the National Chief is saying/doing and that "he doesn't represent Tobique". There is a lawyer working in Toronto who will be approached to help Tobique with a law suit that others in Alberta have filed.

There was no talk about what Kingsclear or Woodstock First Nation will be doing but the call was for Aboriginals to join the group in Fredericton.

If I hear more, I will advise.

Cheers,

Merl

Idle No More planned protests

ISSUE:
- To inform of the planned protests in New Brunswick aligned with the Idle No More movement.

BACKGROUND:
-Since late December 2012, there has been several protests across New Brunswick by several First Nations members. Our overall relationship with the individuals involved has been extremely positive and no violence nor any arrests have been generated from these protests.

CURRENT STATUS:
- A protest march is planned to take place tomorrow, January 9th, 2013, at noon in downtown Moncton from the Champlain Mall to City Hall. It is expected this action will cause significant disruption to traffic. A plan has been designed to manage the event and ensure overall public safety.
-Further, there is also a call for a non-violent protest in front of the office of MP Mike ALLEN in Woodstock on January 11th, 2013 by members of the Woodstock First Nation which is supported by the Chief. The Woodstock Town Police has been advised accordingly.
- As well there is a plan, by the same group, to block the Trans-Canada highway; however, this is suspended pending the outcome of the talks between the PM and the National Chief of First Nations.

Once again no violence is expected.

STRATEGIC COMMUNICATIONS:

Our Divisional media unit will prepare a strategy to deal with any media enquiries should these events take place as planned.

Please find attached our most updated event Matrix in both PDF and word format. Our Pros file 2012-1601206 contains a detailed account of our oversight for these matters in Manitoba.
We have two events planned that we expect to be peaceful with little impact on the RCMP.

The two events are at the Waywayseecappo and Pequis First Nations which are both RCMP jurisdictional matters, matrix refers.
There are a number of events expected in the City of Winnipeg

Thank You.

Just an update for the Restigouche Chaleur area of the province. As of this moment the following activities have been planned by First Nations communities:

1. The Listuguj Band, on the Québec side of the border will hold a peaceful march across Van Horne bridge into Campbellton on Friday. The protest is to start at 1 p.m. until approximately 3 p.m. with a short speach at the Alaqsite'w Gitpu School in Pointe à la Croix at 3:30 p.m.

2. The Eel River Bar First Nations Band is planning a peaceful march in the Village of Dalhousie. We are making arrangements this morning to meet with them to find out more with regards to their intentions.

3. Pabineau First Nations Band have been approached. They had initially indicated they would not participate but are now considering whether they should participate. We should have more information as the day progresses.

I have been in contact with MOT as well as the City of Campbellton. They will provide the assistance required during this event. The Listuguj Police Department are to respond back on their involvement with regards to having their end of the Van Horne bridge closed down so as to ensure pedestrian safety during the march.

Further information will be provided as it come forth.

Sir/Chief

A highway blockade is in the planning stages for January 16th, this pending the outcome of January 11th meeting with the PM. Plans are such that this time around, they want to have the opportunity to provide literature to motorist. I will consult with Brunway on what would be the safest way to provide WFN people that opportunity.

Passed on FYI.

There is conflicting information as there is also an e-mail account set up for Idle_No_More@rcmp-grc.gc.ca

I am clarifying with Karen Grover on who is included in the above noted e-mail group.

We need to streamline this and have the information in one point, whichever one that is as there is information coming in from everywhere and going out everywhere. Or, we need to clarify what information goes to which address and for which purpose.

Perhaps the information going into DEOC e-mail account can be used to create updates that will be sent to Idle_No_More e-mail account. Or vice versa.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

EVENTS, INCIDENTS and ITEMS OF INTEREST

DAILY BRIEF CLASSIFIED ADDENDUM: There is no classified addendum today

CURRENT

1. Significant Weather – NL: A low pressure system developing near the Gaspé Peninsula will intensify as it tracks across Cape Breton on 10 Jan. This low will continue to intensify as it tracks south of NL. Total snowfall amounts will range from 30 cm over the Bonavista Peninsula to near 70 cm over the Northern Avalon Peninsula. High winds, combined with the snow will give near zero visibility and blizzard conditions late on 10 Jan and into 11 Jan. Environment Canada has issued blizzard warnings southern NL.

UPCOMING

1. 11 Jan: First Nation Protests – Ottawa, ON: A peaceful rally is to be held to support the Idle No More movement in Ottawa. The event is scheduled to begin at 07:00 EST on Victoria Island followed by a march to Parliament Hill via Wellington Street beginning at 10:00 EST. Organizers anticipate between 1,000 and 5,000 participants and the event is expected to conclude by 17:00 EST. The Ottawa Police and Royal Canadian Mounted Police are aware of the planned event and have been engaged. Traffic disruptions in the area may be anticipated.

National Capital Region Situational Report "A" Division – Intel Sector 2013-01-10

Unclassified

January 11th 2013 - Global Day of Action

Background

The movement, under the banner "Idle No More" emerged from a grassroots movement that appeared in Saskatchewan. It began as an effort to educate First Nations people on the multitude of legislation being put forward by the Harper government that they feel is a direct attack on the rights of First Nations.

The organizers began by organizing "teach-ins" to inform people of impending changes that would impact First Nations people across Canada.

Since early December we have seen an influx of events being organized in support of "Idle No More" across the country.

Opposition by First Nations to Bill C-45 garnered national attention when 300 First Nations Chiefs marched on Parliament Hill, and several Chiefs, attempted to enter Parliament to deliver a message to the government. This refusal to allow First Nations leadership to respectfully enter the House of Commons triggered an even greater mobilization of First Nation people across the country.

Under what was called a "National Day of Action and Solidarity", First Nations and their supporters organized more than 13 nationwide rallies on Monday, December 10th, to express opposition to the legislation that the Harper Government has put forward in Bill C-45 and other bills. Nationwide, supporters came out in the thousands to support their cause. All events appeared to be peaceful; no reports of violence were located.

Chief Theresa SPENCE commenced a hunger strike in support of "Idle No More" on December 11, @ 0900hrs. Chief SPENCE is planning on spending her days on Parliament Hill and returning to Victoria Island for the evening. Three members of the Occupied Ottawa group attended to the media release held on the 10th. No issues have been noted.

The Idle No More protest movement cannot be viewed as a single movement. It is in fact a grassroots campaign with no centralized leadership. Media reporting and some government action have muddled this point by focusing on Attawapiskat Chief Theresa SPENCE's hunger strike near parliament Hill. The "Idle No More" organizers have made it clear that the traditional native leadership does not speak for them.

The protests as a whole must be viewed from the perspective of three different factions that are not necessarily communicating or working directly together:

1. The original Idle No More protesters (originated in Saskatchewan)
2. Attawapiskat Chief Theresa SPENCE and her demand to meet the Prime Minister
3. The traditional First Nations leadership (Grand chief Aleto etc)

Bills in Question

The following bills are what are believed to be in direct violation of Article 18, 19 & 20 of the United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples:

Bill C-45 Job and Growth Act (Omnibus bill includes Indian Act amendments regarding voting on-reserve, land surrender/designations)

Bill C-27 First Nations Financial Transparency Act

Bill S-2 Family Homes on Reserve and Matrimonial Interests or Right Act

Bill S-6 First Nations Elections Act

Bill S-8 Safe Drinking Water for First Nations

Bill C-428 Indian Act Amendment and Replacement Act This list is a list of Senate Public Bills:

Bill S-207 An Act to amend the Interpretation Act

Bill S-212 First Nations Self-Government Recognition Bill and the "First Nations" Private Ownership Act

J11 Day of Action

In response to PM HARPER agreeing to meet with Aboriginal leadership on January 11, there have been calls from the "Idle No More" movement to demonstrate their support for the rising by having events in their communities to run parallel to the meeting between PM HARPER and the Assembly of First Nations. Their goal is to raise the profile of the movement, demonstrate their global presence, and give visibility to the growing momentum as a peoples' movement first.

As a result, a new campaign event call "J11 Global Day of Action" is being pursued for January 11th, 2013. This event does not only have a Canadian focus but a worldwide focus.

People are being encouraged to use Social Media to organize their own events.

Participation

The J11 event appears to be rapidly gaining traction.
one bus from Akwesasne and one bus from Bancroft, Ontario are being organized for people wanting to attend this event in Ottawa. A flyer was found announcing the Six Nations elected council in Ohsweken, a reserve near Brantford, Ont., have paid for 2 buses heading for Ottawa, January 11th at 05:00 AM.

Audit Leaked

The long awaited audit into Attawapiskat reserve by the independent firm Deloitte reported a widespread financial mismanagement from 2005 until November. Of 505 transactions that were reviewed, over 400 lacked proper documentation. During this time frame, the reserve received $104 million in funding from the Federal government.

Chief Theressa SPENCE's supporters interpreted the timing of the leaked release of this report as an attempt to undermine her credibility ahead of the January 11th meeting. Chief SPENCE has not publically directly addressed the findings of the audit and her spokespeople have advised that she will not be speaking with the media.

Convergence of Protests

Global perspective

The website http://unify.org/ is currently tracking global "Idle No More" events occurring worldwide for January 11th. The webpage has a callout for everyone, everywhere, to join the world on a global day of action supporting "Idle No More" and #J11.

Violence

While "Idle No More" demonstrations have been and continue to be peaceful there is the potential for small interventions by law enforcement to spark violence amongst the protestors. The Tyendinaga Mohawks started a blockade on January 5th at about 1600hrs at the Wymans road rail crossing on the reserve which ended just after 2300hrs. During the blockade CN Rail had obtained an emergency court injunction from a Toronto judge to have them removed. The Ontario Provincial Police (OPP) did not serve the injunction but instead warned the Tyendinaga Mohawks they were under investigation for mischief after blocking the Via Rail main line between Toronto and Montreal. The demonstrators reacted by stating that if the police had serve the emergency court order against them, they would have made a point of staying longer. They also stated that if police had tried to make arrests, there would have been a fight. Although CN asked the local sheriff to serve the court order Saturday evening, because of the Mohawks reaction the OPP said it was too dangerous to do so.

Weather

Although this group is a highly motivated one, the weather has an impact on the number of people attending the rallies. During the last big rally for the "Idle No More" movement in Ottawa on December 21st, 2012, even though a good turnout was seen, many decided not to attend due to the snow storm. The weather prediction for Friday January 11th calls for a high of + 1. Apart from a bit of freezing rain in the afternoon, it will be a mild day for demonstrators to rally on Parliament Hill. The nice weather could potentially attract more people.

Chief Theresa SPENCE

A bulletin from the Attawapiskat First Nation was released on January 9 stating the Chief SPENCE will not be attending the meeting between the Prime Minister and the First Nations leaders on Friday. Her decision comes after an official response through the Governor General's office saying that David Johnston will not attend the working meeting on public policy issues. Chief SPENCE says the Governor General's attendance is integral when discussing Inherent and Treaty Rights. SPENCE's decision has created confusion and crisis within the AFN leadership.

Conclusion/ tactical consideration

Regardless of the meeting taking place on January 11th, it appears that this issue will likely dominate the First Nations people and the government for the near future. As a result it is not unexpected to foresee another large scale or series of protest taking place in the NCR in the near future. Given the complexity of the issues these protest have the potential to escalate in a short amount of time.

Frustration levels of Aboriginal Chiefs and community members appear to be high. The frustration is with all levels of Government for not consulting with the Chiefs and/or Community members on issues of major concerns which impact on our First Nations Communities.

It is not unusual for groups to organize themselves at the very last minute. Participants from outside of the NCR are expected to attend.

As it is been done in the past with large scale demonstrations in Ottawa, it is imperative that the police utilize a measured response to any protestor action. Any perceived excess use of force against protestors has the potential to escalate the situation and change the crowd dynamics from peaceful to violent.

http://www.afn.ca/index.php/en/news-media/latest-news/updated-assembly-of-first-nations-national-chief-atleo-and-members-of-

PLEASE NOTE: THIS PRESS CONFERENCE WILL NOW TAKE PLACE THURSDAY JANUARY 10, 2013 at 2:00 p.m. ET

DATE: Thursday January 10, 2013

TIME: 2:00 p.m. ET

LOCATION: National Press Theatre
150 Wellington Street, Ottawa, ON

"First Nation planning discussions and dialogue continue today. It is essential that this important dialogue continues, and we will set out objectives for Friday's meeting at a press conference Thursday," said AFN National Chief Atleo today from Ottawa.

National Chief Atleo and the AFN national executive have been coordinating planning efforts since last Friday's agreement by Prime Minister Harper to meet with a delegation of First Nation leaders January 11. This work includes developing clear expectations and benchmarks for outcomes of the meeting reflective of First Nation priorities and expectations for change.

Regional Chiefs Bellegarde and Wilson-Raybould are leading the national work in areas (Treaties and Lands and Economy) that will be the focus of Friday's working meeting.

The Assembly of First Nation is the national organization representing First Nation citizens in Canada. Follow us on Twitter @AFN_Updates and @AFN_Comms.

Good Afternoon Everyone,

This message is being sent on behalf of Supt. Rod McCann (OIC "O" Division CIB).

Attached please find a copy of the 12th update of the Situational Assessment on "Idle No More" demonstrations.

Also attached is the updated "Idle No More" Calendar of events.

In addition please note the following:

A blockade of the Ambassador Bridge is planned for Jan 16th.

Here is what we know so far.

16 Jan 2013 - 0930 hrs
They expect close to 300 people to meet at the west bound service centre near Tilbury OPP area. They will the convoy at hwy speed to a Mall at the Corner of Huron Church Line and Tecumseh Road they expect to arrive at approximately 1100 hrs.

1115 hrs
They will march north on the N/B lanes of Huron Church to an area to the Bridge Entrance. This trip should take approximately 15 to 30 mins. They will protest in this area for approximately 1 hour.

They then plan to leave the area and March back South to the Mall where they are expected to disperse without convoy back.

My apologies if you have received this twice.

"FOR LAW ENFORCEMENT ONLY"

Update 2013-01-09, 1530 hrs.

Wednesday 2013-01-09,
A Press Release was issued today by Chief Spence advising that she would NOT be attending Friday's meeting with the PM as the GG was not going to be present. The PM and other elected Chiefs will be meeting as planned.

Chief Spence is now in the process of drafting a letter to be sent to her Majesty the Queen with regards to this entire incident.

Given the new turn of events, it would appear that the hunger strike will NOT be ending this Friday. There is some frustration within the Camp from some of the volunteers when they were told that the Chief would not be meeting with the PM on Friday as previously planned.

This issue will probably escalate the feelings of frustration throughout the entire Aboriginal community.

Also with Tuesday Federal Court Ruling that Metis and Non-Status Indians have the same rights and protection as do Status Aboriginals, we may see much more supporters coming out on Friday's Rally. It is believed that there will be more in attendance than last Dec 21. 2012 Rally, which saw over 4,000 protesters attend the Idle No More event.

The media is still sitting outside the Compound awaiting anyone for anyone who will talk to them.

No further info available at this time.

Subject: IDLE No More Protest UPDATE

Please be advise that the IDLE No More protest is now set for Ottawa, more precisely at Parliament Hill for this Friday, January 11th, 2013. From reports read today, actions could be launched as soon as this Friday if the meeting with Prime Minister Harper isn't satisfactory.

Furthermore, as per the National Post, Attawapiskat Chief Theresa Spence says she is no longer attending her long-sought meeting with Prime Minister Stephen Harper on Friday because Governor General David Johnston will not be going.
"I will not be attending Friday's meeting with the prime minister, as the governor general's attendance is integral when discussing inherent and treaty rights," Spence said in a statement Wednesday after a morning of conflicting statements from her staff. Spence said they wrote to Buckingham Palace to ask the Queen to send her Canadian representative to Friday's meeting. She said Johnston officially turned down her request. This could create a protest in itself.

Quebec also has at the same approximate time, a similar event is supposed to go down at the Palais des Congrès in Montreal. Hard to say in what way that might alter participation from potential Québec protesters.

Sent for your information.

If your service has any new information about future protest including the one set for January 11th, 2013, please cc me in your e-mails. If information surface about a protest in Cornwall/Massena, a meeting will be called by myself at the Cornnwall RCMP Detachment.

ISSUE: Status update regarding BC 'Idle No More' public awareness campaign in British Columbia among First Nations. (File EDIV 2013-083)

BACKGROUND:

$ The 'Idle No More' (INM) movement continues to hold peaceful, relatively brief public awareness demonstrations regarding First Nations relations with the Government of Canada, as well as in solidarity with Attawapiskat Chief Spence who has held a hunger strike since December 11, 2012.

$ Over the past several weeks, demonstrations have been held at shopping malls, government and public facilities, roads and highways and FN Band Offices, but increasingly the focus of demonstrations have been targeting transportation infrastructure.

$ To date, all demonstrations have been peaceful and brief in nature, with varying attendance ranging from very few participants to 200 - 400 at other demonstrations.

$ In response to the (various) issues and calls for engagement, Prime Minister Harper has agreed to meet with First Nations leaders on Friday, January 11th, 2013. Notwithstanding, individual and small-scale INM events continue to be planned. Chief Spence has indicated she will continue her hunger strike until she is satisfied with the outcome of the meeting.

CURRENT STATUS:

$ Following the announcement of PM Harper's meeting, INM social media communications have been focussed on a >Day of Action= to coincide with the meeting on January 11th, 2013.

$ Chief Spence indicates that she will not attend the meeting between PM Harper and the delegation of AFN Chiefs, unless the Governor General is present; however, there are no plans for his attendance at this time.

$ The Federal Ministry of Aboriginal Affairs and Northern Development's release of an independent audit of the Attawapiskat First Nation's finances revealed a lack of accountability for the band council's expenditures of nearly $104 million in federal government funding between 2005 and 2011.

$ Chief Spence stated the AANDC audit release serves to distract from the "true issues" of the movement, designed to discredit her.

$ Upcoming 72 hours of Idle No More events (refer to attached timeline):

- $ January 10 – Victoria: University of Victoria Bus Exchange
- $ January 11 – Victoria: Victoria City Hall
- $ January 11 – Tofino/Ucluelet: Pacific Rim Highway Tofino - Ucluelet junction.
- $ January 11 – Surrey: Peace Arch Border Crossing
- $ January 11 – Vancouver: Port of Vancouver (postponed)
- $ January 11 – Vancouver: Vancouver City Hall
- $ January 11 – Vancouver: CTV Building located at Burrard and Robson
- $ January 11 – Lytton: Highway 1 corridor through Fraser Canyon
- $ January 11 – Mount Currie: Hwy 99 corridor from Pemberton to Lillooet
- $ January 11 – West Kelowna: Highway 97 or Royal Bank (tentative locations)
- $ January 11 – Cache Creek: Highway 97

- $ January 11 – Comox Valley: England Ave & 6th St, Courtney
- $ January 11 –Terrace: Highway 16 followed to City Hall.
- $ January 12 – Prince George: Prince George Civic Centre

- $ January 12 – Nanoose: Town Hall
- $ January 12 – Surrey: Surrey Centre Mall

$ This information has been shared with local detachments and public safety agencies including, Vancouver Police Department, Victoria Police Department, Stl'atl'imx Tribal Police, E Division BIP/Ports, CBSA, CN Police, CP Police and Ministry of Aboriginal Relations and Reconciliation (MARR).

$ Further information will be shared to impacted jurisdictions through District Command.

$ All communication thus far has indicated IMN events will remain peaceful, cooperative and brief in nature.

STRATEGIC CONSIDERATIONS:

$ While the outcome of the meeting with PM Harper may significantly impact the volatility of the INM movement, public order events are expected to continue.

$ Major Highways, Bridges, Railway Routes, Marine Ports/Ferry Terminals, Airports and Government Buildings (DFO, Offices of MP=s, CBSA, etc), are most vulnerable to disruption/protest.

$ ECROPS and E Division APS continue to work with partners within an MCM model to collate and disseminate information and develop an operational plan in the event of a major, long-term demonstration or any province-wide paralysis of transportation systems and/or infrastructure.

$ E Division APS are operating out of the Border Integrity Operations Centre (BIOC) located at the Surrey Federal Operations Building. All BC PRIME files currently being dispatched within the Province that include public disorder or demonstrations are being monitored in real-time.

PUBLIC SAFETY PROTOCOLS:

- On 2013-01-09, APS OIC Jacques Boissoneault discussed the Public Safety Cooperation Protocol with the First Nation Summit (FNS), the Union of BC Indian Chiefs (UBCIC) and BC Assembly of First Nations (BCAFN).

The following information was forwarded to me

Greetings,

Campus Security has been made aware of an Idle No More protest occurring at University and Union Sts. at noon hour tomorrow (Friday, January 11th). This is for information purposes only and we do not foresee any serious issues arising from this event at this time.

There is a possibility for some traffic disruption over the noon hour period depending on how many people show up to this event.

Notification Event/notification d'événement:
First Nations Blockades Highway 11 /Caramat substation, Longlac, ON – 9 January 2013

Description of the Event/description de l'événement:

Final Update: Transport Canada was advised that all protesters have left the site of the blockade. CN Police also advised that the tracks are clear. Inspection of the track is being performed now. Trains will be clear to run shortly. (Source: TC Surface and Intermodal Security)

Update 1: The blockade of the highway and Caramat Substation remains in place. Given the present weather conditions and indications from the protestors, it is believed that they will leave the track at 18:00 hrs EST as planned. This will result in an approximate delay of two hours to VIA Rail train #1. CN Police and Ontario Provincial Police are on site.
INITIAL: The First Nation protestors have now blocked both Highway 11 (Trans Canada Highway) and the Caramat Substation. They informed the OPP that the blockade would last 4 hours (18:00 EST). There are about 30 – 40 people on the track. 300 – 400 people in all participating in this protest.

SUBJECT / OBJET IDLE NO MORE 2013-01-09

CONTEXTE
De nombreux rapports et médias sociaux font état de mouvement de protestations en appui au mouvement autochtone Idle No More. Ce rapport se veut un récapitulatif des actions en cours ainsi qu'annoncées sur le territoire québécois, cela dans un but informatif et pour la sécurité de la population et des forces de l'ordre (PROS 2012-1617463). Il importe de mettre en garde que les événements peuvent rapidement changer et devenir obsolètes.

ÉVÉNEMENTS
Les informations nous indiquent l'événement suivant pour le 9 janvier 2013 :
- La subdivision Cascapedia de la Société du Chemin de Fer de la Gaspésie à Pointe-à-la-Croix est toujours bloquée pour le trafic de transport de marchandises près du point milliaire 11.8 (chemin Qospem). Jusqu'à maintenant, les trains de passagers de VIA Rail n'ont pas été touchés. Les chefs du conseil de bande et la SQ sont sur le site et effectuent une surveillance Une lettre, signée par les «First Nation leaders of Turtle Island» a été envoyée au Premier ministre Stephen Harper et le menaçait de sérieuses perturbations économiques à la mi-janvier (plus précisément le 16) s'il ne rencontrait pas les demandes de la chef d'Attawapiskat, Teresa Spence. Une rencontre a été annoncée entre le Premier ministre et les représentants des Premières Nations vendredi prochain le 11 janvier 2013. Dans un tel contexte, il est donc possible que les menaces ne soient pas mises en application (http://aptn.ca/pages/news/2013/01/01/first-nations-chiefs-contemplate-breach-of-treaty-declarations-indefinite-economic-disruptions/).

Pour le 11 janvier 2013, les actions suivantes seraient planifiées :
une manifestation au Palais des congrès de Montréal de 13h à 17h.

- Pendant la rencontre entre le Premier minisitre Harper et les chefs autochtones, la communauté de Listuguj organiserait une marche sur le Pont interprovincial J.C. Van Horne (Campbellton/Pointe-à-la-Croix).
- La fermeture complète du Pont Mercier serait toujours envisagée par la communauté mohawk de Kahnawake. Ce serait la Warrior Society qui planifierait cette action, possiblement le 11 janvier mais l'information n'est pas confirmée.

Jusqu'à présent, les manifestations ont été pacifiques même si elles ont causé l'interruption de services ferroviaires et de retards sur diverses routes.

Idle No More road closure surprises policeNorth Shore Bureau
Thursday, January 10, 2013 - 09:00
in News (http://www.chroniclejournal.com/topics/news/news)

Greenstone provincial police were caught off-guard Wednesday afternoon when an Idle No More protest resulted in the temporary closure of Highway 11 just west of Longlac.
Previous Idle No More protests in other parts of Northwestern Ontario have slowed traffic so that motorists can receive information leaflets, but traffic hasn't been stopped.
The highway was closed around 3 p.m. because of the high volume of protest participants on the road, said Greenstone OPP Const. Michael Oram.
It was reopened to one lane before nightfall.
"Our objective is to work to restore orderly flow in the safest manner possible," police said.
"The OPP and our partners appreciate everyone's patience in dealing with traffic disruptions respectfully."
For the last few weeks, Idle No More protests have been staged on railways and highways across the country to highlight native concerns about treaty rights and Bill C-45, a federal law that First Nations say will curtail their ability to have a say over lands and waterways.

Calling on Idle No More and allies. Ottawa Rally at Harper's meeting with our Chiefs- January 11th, 2013. Let's get 10,000 voices out to remind Harper whose land he is on. We will not be ignored. Mohawks of Kahnawake- Kanehsatake-Akwesasne. Anishinabek Nation. Algonquin. Chippewa/Ojibwe Nation. Oneida Nation. Lene Lenape/Delaware Nation. Odawa Nation. Potawatomi Nation. Cree Nation. The Six Nations. Mi'kmaq Nation, Haudensaunee, Maliseet, Blood Tribe. Dene Nation. Nuu-chah-nulth-aht. Shishalh. Lakota, Inuit, Metis....all Nations across Turtle Island- it's time to show this oppressive government that we stand together. United. Strong. Unbreakable. Bill C-45...nice try Harper, but your paper is no good here.

Ceremony. Songs. Dancing. March. Rally! Every step we take- every truth we voice, and every song we sing is creating change. This change has been foretold in prophecies around the world that are hundreds of years old, and the real cool part about these sacred prophecies- we're not only in it, we're leading it.

The government's arrogance will be their downfall. They underestimate you. They underestimate your strength, they underestimate your voice, they underestimate your unity. When people with good hearts put their minds together to do the right thing for the benefit of others- that creates powerful energy. You can feel it. In my lifetime, I am going to see justice that has remained elusive for two and fifty years.

Harper will have his day in our court on our land and we will win. We will win because their arrogance won't allow them to realize when they've lost until it's too late.

Chi-Miigwech. Yaw^ko. We stand united.

For Immediate Release

THE HONOUR OF THE CROWN IS AT STAKE

(January 9, 2013, Ottawa ON) Traditional territory of the Algonquian Peoples...the Dene Nation is announcing today that they are supporting Chief Theresa Spence in her position to have the Governor General attend and participate in the January 11th meeting to clarify the First Nations-Crown relationship.

"We insist that the Governor General be in attendance to help clarify the role of the Crown which includes legal obligations and commitments that need to be fulfilled in relation to the Treaties and the promises made to our Peoples." stated Dene National Chief Bill Erasmus.

The First Nations and Crown meeting was agreed to last Friday, January 4th. We assumed that the Governor General would participate as he did last year when First Nations leaders were in Ottawa for the inaugural meeting. The Governor General must assist in the follow up, as this is part of his role and responsibility to First Nations and the public.

"The Governor General role is more than symbolic when dealing with Inherent and Treaty Rights. The Dene entered into Treaty No. 8 and Treaty No.11 with Great Britain which clearly supports the international nature of this relationship. The Governor General is the official representative of the Crown and reports to the Queen. We welcome his presence and encourage him to assist and foster the discussion so that the respect of the Treaties occur. As the only allies to the creation of the state of Canada, the Governor General has a unique duty to First Nations." said Dene National Chief Erasmus.

"The Governor General has a pivotal role to play in this evolving treaty relationship with a treaty successor state of Canada. He must attend to uphold the Honour of the Crown and ensure there is fairness at the table. At this point, the Honour of the Crown has been sullied by the actions of the Government of Canada" concluded Dene National Chief Bill Erasmus.

January 11th 2013 - Global Day of Action

UPDATE

Please note Sgt. Gilbert SABOURIN will be on site tomorrow all day at NCRCC, TPOF.

J11 Day of Action

The march will start and leave Victoria Island around 1100hrs and proceed towards Parliament Hill (PH). The demonstration on PH is scheduled to start at noon. The demonstration will then move in front of the Langevin building (PMO office); exact time of this move is unknown. Wellington Street will be closed both ways during the demonstration in front of the Langevin building.

Of note, other events/blockades are being planned nationally on Wednesday January 16th.

An "Idle No More" demonstration is also planned at Queens University in Kingston, at noon hour, January 11th. No issues are foreseen with this event other than possible traffic disruptions.

Participation

Two free buses are being organized from Six Nations for people to attend the "Idle No More" rally in Ottawa on Jan. 11th, courtesy of the Six Nations Elected Council. Buses will leave Village Plaza at 0500hrs. There is no indication of the type of bus being utilized (coach or school bus).

Audit Leaked

No new information to communicate at this time.

Convergence of Protests

Global perspective

The website http://unify.org/ is currently tracking global "Idle No More" events occurring worldwide for January 11th. The webpage has a callout for everyone, everywhere, to join the world on a global day of action supporting "Idle No More" and #J11.

Violence

While "Idle No More" demonstrations have been and continue to be peaceful there is the potential for small interventions by law enforcement to spark violence amongst the protestors.

The Grand Chief Derek Nepinak held a news conference today. He warned Prime Minister Harper to meet the demands of aboriginal leaders and the "Idle No More" protest movement, which he said would involve nothing short of a transformative nation-to-nation relationship based on respecting treaty rights, or else "warriors" were ready to "bring the Canadian economy to its knees".

Weather

Although this group is a highly motivated one, the weather has an impact on the number of people attending the rallies. During the last big rally for the "Idle No More" movement in Ottawa on December 21st, 2012, even though a good turnout was seen, many decided not to attend due to the snow storm. The weather prediction for Friday January 11th calls for a high of + 1. Apart from a bit of freezing rain in the afternoon, it will be a mild day for demonstrators to rally on Parliament Hill. The nice weather could potentially attract more people.

Chief Theresa SPENCE

Despite yesterday's media release that the Governor General would not be in attendance at the working meeting, another media release was made stating that the Governor General would be hosting a ceremonial meeting with First Nations leaders at Rideau Hall after the working meeting with the members of the government. This statement was made public just after the Grand Chief's news conference. It has been confirmed that the Governor General will meet with Grand Chief Alteo and at 1800hrs, the Chiefs will join in. The approximate duration of the meeting will be 90 minutes, with no media allowed.

Conclusion/ tactical consideration

Regardless of the meeting taking place on January 11th, it appears that this issue will likely dominate the First Nations people and the government for the near future. As a result it is not unexpected to foresee another large scale or series of protest taking place in the NCR in the near future. Given the complexity of the issues these protest have the potential to escalate in a short amount of time.

Frustration levels of Aboriginal Chiefs and community members appear to be high. The frustration is with all levels of Government for not consulting with the Chiefs and/or Community members on issues of major concerns which impact on our First Nations Communities.

It is not unusual for groups to organize themselves at the very last minute. Participants from outside of the NCR are expected to attend.

As it is been done in the past with large scale demonstrations in Ottawa, it is imperative that the police utilize a measured response to any protestor action. Any perceived excess use of force against protestors has the potential to escalate the situation and change the crowd dynamics from peaceful to violent.

CONTEXTE

De nombreux rapports et médias sociaux font état de mouvement de protestations en appui au mouvement autochtone Idle No More. Ce rapport se veut un récapitulatif des actions en cours ainsi qu'annoncées sur le territoire québécois, cela dans un but informatif et pour la sécurité de la population et des forces de l'ordre (PROS 2012-1617463). Il importe de mettre en garde que les événements peuvent rapidement changer et devenir obsolètes.

ÉVÉNEMENTS

Les informations nous indiquent deux événements en cours pour le 10 janvier 2013.

Heure	Endroit	Description	Participation
	Pointe-à-la-Croix / Restigouche / Listuguj, QC	La subdivision Cascapedia de la Société du Chemin de Fer de la Gaspésie est toujours bloquée pour le trafic de transport de marchandises près du point milliaire 11.8 (chemin Qospem). Le groupe a décidé de bloquer tous les trains jusqu'à vendredi, inclusivement. À partir de vendredi, ils comptent débloquer la circulation ferroviaire et entamer d'autres moyens de pression.	Inconnue

Ce même jour, en Australie, les peuples papous comptent manifester ce vendredi devant les ambassades et consulats canadiens en support à Idle No More ce qui démontre l'étendue mondiale du mouvement. Des actions doivent également être attendues dans les jours suivants, particulièrement le 16 ainsi que le 24 janvier prochain (jour anniversaire du Sommet des Premières Nations).

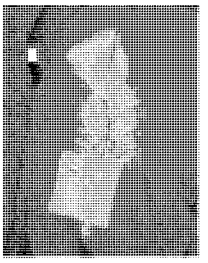
Jusqu'à présent, les manifestations ont été pacifiques même si elles ont causé l'interruption de services ferroviaires et de retards sur diverses routes.



D'ailleurs, quelques groupes étudiants vont se joindre aux manifestations du 11 janvier au Palais de Congrès à Montréal (Place Jean-Paul-Riopelle) en appui au mouvement. Comme clin d'œil à leur participation, la section québécoise du mouvement Idle No More a adopté le symbole de la plume rouge et les manifestants prévoient apporter aussi des casseroles.

While Stephen Harper prepares to meet with a delegation of First Nations chiefs, Idle No More supporters are gearing up for several demonstrations across Vancouver.

Later today, protesters are expected to set up a blockade at the Port of Vancouver. A march from the Native Education Centre to city hall is also planned.

Other big demonstrations have already taken place across Metro Vancouver and B.C.

Last weekend, hundreds of protesters from both sides of the border gathered at the Peace Arch Crossing.

Another demonstration was held in the Okanagan border town of Osoyoos.

The Idle No More movement is protesting the federal government's recent omnibus bill C-45, and is trying to draw attention to other aboriginal problems.

Prime Minister Harper's long-awaited meeting with First Nations leaders is planned for later today, but it's unclear how many of them will show up. Some chiefs have said they will not attend unless Governor General David Johnston is also at the meeting.

PURPOSE:
There have been several media and social networking reports of planned protests and potential blockades in support for the "Idle No More" (INM) Aboriginal-based solidarity movement. (U) These protests are being monitored for RCMP senior management situational awareness and public and police officer safety. (A)

This report will provide a summary of reported planned Canadian and international events within the last 24 hours and a list of known events being planned for January 11. These lists may not be complete as the environment is constantly changing, nor is it confirmed that these events have actually taken place. (U)

OVERVIEW:
A meeting between Prime Minister Harper and Minister Duncan (Minister of Aboriginal Affairs and Northern Development) and a delegation of First Nations leaders, coordinated by the Assembly of First Nations (AFN), is set for Friday, January 11, 2013. The focus of this meeting will be treaty relationship and aboriginal rights and economic development. Media sources report that Governor General David Johnston has agreed to meet with First Nations leaders at Rideau Hall following the working meeting with PM Harper. (U)

INM organizers have called for a global day of action on January 11 to coincide with this meeting. However, it is unclear what impact this meeting may have on future planned protests as the INM founders have expressed publicly their intention to "work outside of the systems of government", including the traditional AFN structure. According to media reports, the INM grassroots movement is calling on the AFN to walk out of the meetings scheduled for January 11. (U)

Between December 10, 2012 and January 9, 2013 (as of 1200 hrs EST), over 250 Aboriginal-based issues events have been identified nationally. These events have been held on or at shopping centres, government buildings, public facilities, roads and major highways, railway routes, and ports of entry, such as bridges and ferry terminals. (A)

Information received indicates eight domestic events are organized for January 10, 2013, in Alberta (AB), British Columbia (BC), and Ontario (ON). These actions include flash mobs, traffic slowdowns/blockades in AB; an interruption of bus service in BC; and, a flash mob in ON. Reports indicate there are numerous events of various types planned for January 11, 2013 across Canada.

- La manifestation à Québec pourrait être déplacé devant le Parlement du Québec

- Manifestation à Joliette au Centre de l'amitié de Lanaudière à 14h

- À Saguenay, le rassemblement est prévu à l'Université du Québec à Chicoutimi. Les manifestants doivent par la suite se déplacer à pied vers le centre commercial Place du Royaume. Cette manifestation est organisée par le même groupe qui a manifesté, la semaine dernière, devant le bureau du député conservateur Denis Lebel, à Roberval.
- En marge de la manifestation, Kairos, une coalition d'Églises du Canada, d'ONG à base ecclésiale et d'organismes religieux de solidarité essaie de rallier des participants à un jeûne pancanadien de 24h, par solidarité avec la chef Theresa Spence.

Mike,

the Nunatukavut Community Council is planning on a "gathering" on the Trans Labrador Highway tomorrow morning. the gathering will be peaceful and will be at the junction of the South Coast Highway.

The gathering will be in support of their aboriginal rights and in respect of the "Idle No More" movement. This group, the former Labrador Metis Association, has been in the media over the last day speaking about their new status due to the recent court decision regarding the Indian Act.

no idea how many people will show up but considering the recent court outcome there could be numerous people involved.

This group has also been a vocal opponent of the Muskrat Falls hydro project recently sanctioned by the provincial government following federal government granting of a loan guarantee. We have attended several protests in recent months and affected arrests including a respected Elder who sits on our CO's Aboriginal Advisory Committee.

To date all events have been peaceful and focused on media attention. As you can see we have a very open communications relationship.

We will be monitoring this activity and will report on the event tomorrow.

Andrew

Everyone,

Here is the latest update from Aboriginal Policing.

Good morning,

No new events to report at this time. Things in Ottawa re extremely unsettled and there continues to be concerns as to whether or not today's meeting will occur. The protest/march in Ottawa is growing steadily and has closed some streets and bridges.

There will be one or two deciding events today, I believe. First is whether or not the FN - Crown meeting actually occurs. Second, if that meeting occurs, what comes from it in the immediate aftermath.

I will provide a second update later this afternoon. If anything major appears to be developing in K Division in the meantime, I will advise.

Thanks,

Jackie

Good Morning Everyone,
This message is being sent on behalf of Supt. Rod McCann (OIC "O" Division CIB).

Please find attached a copy of the NOC situation report indicating J Division DEOC Activation,

Also attached is the updated information from Ottawa region.

"Please share this email with Detachment and Unit Commanders that report to you to ensure complete divisional coverage."

I apologize if you have received this twice.

Aboriginal and Ethnic Liaison A Div situational Update

Source: Royal Canadian Mounted Police Aboriginal & Ethnic Liaison Officer
A-Division, National Capital Region * Law Enforcement Only*

It appears that only 20 chiefs were allowed to attend the meeting with the PM. It appears that some Chiefs are starting to align themselves with INM. Still not known if the meeting will occur. I'm at the Camp where there is a meeting with Chief Spence and her people. Unsure if she will attend the meeting or dinner at this time...will advise in am the outcome.

End of Update

There is still no clear decision on the meeting today with the PM. The Chiefs want the PM to meet them on their own turf and on their agenda. The National Chief had a difficult time at last nights meeting trying to keep unity amongst the Chiefs.
IDM movement according to media is now marching up at 1000 to arrive PH at 1100. This has not been confirmed, at this time.

Pipe Ceremony still starting @0700, nothing apparently planned for any activities after that. Unsure what the plan is to hold the people on Victoria Island, till step off time for the march. .
Still no clear decision on Chief Spence's position on attending or not attend to days meeting and dinner. Volunteers all want her to end her hunger strike today.
End of update

While Stephen Harper prepares to meet with a delegation of First Nations chiefs, Idle No More supporters are gearing up for several demonstrations across Vancouver.

Later today, protesters are expected to set up a blockade at the Port of Vancouver. A march from the Native Education Centre to city hall is also planned.

Other big demonstrations have already taken place across Metro Vancouver and B.C.

Last weekend, hundreds of protesters from both sides of the border gathered at the Peace Arch Crossing.

Another demonstration was held in the Okanagan border town of Osoyoos.

The Idle No More movement is protesting the federal government's recent omnibus bill C-45, and is trying to draw attention to other aboriginal problems.

Prime Minister Harper's long-awaited meeting with First Nations leaders is planned for later today, but it's unclear how many of them will show up. Some chiefs have said they will not attend unless Governor General David Johnston is also at the meeting.

The prime minister's office has relented slightly and is letting Gov. Gen. David Johnston hold a ceremonial meeting with First Nations leaders Friday.
The ceremonial meeting will take place at 6:30 p.m. ET at Rideau Hall, following the working meeting, said Andrew MacDougall, a spokesman for Prime Minister Stephen Harper.
Johnston had said that he wouldn't attend a working meeting on public policy, despite demands by some First Nations leaders, including Attawapiskat Chief Theresa Spence, that he be there in his role as the Queen's representative in Canada.
Spence has limited her food intake for the past month, consuming only herbal tea and fish broth since Dec. 11. She says she will continue her protest until the meeting happens and said she wouldn't stop unless Johnston was at the meeting.
It's not clear yet whether a ceremonial meeting will meet those demands. A spokesman for Spence said before Johnston's announcement that she will not attend the meeting on Friday unless Harper, Johnston, Ontario Premier Dalton McGuinty and First Nations leaders are in the same room, having discussions together.
The meeting comes after nearly two months of Idle No More protests by First Nations people, as well as Spence's month-long hunger strike.'Nothing left to lose'
First Nations people in Canada have "nothing left to lose," Derek Nepinak told reporters Thursday morning, pointing to the problems with lack of housing, unsafe drinking water and poor health in the community.
"We're not here to make requests. We're here to demand attention. And to demand an end to 140 years of colonial rule," he said.
The Manitoba chiefs distributed a list of 10 treaty principles in advance, affirming their sovereignty and that Canada "has an on-going obligation to fulfill the treaty according to the spirit and intent."
The variety of First Nations stakeholder groups have brought mixed messages on what they're seeking from Friday's meeting.
Spence wanted Johnston to be at the meeting with Harper and other leaders, and refused to go there if Johnston wouldn't.
Assembly of First Nations National Chief Shawn Atleo will also speak to reporters Thursday to set out the expectations of his organization. He was supposed to hold a press conference on Wednesday, but delayed it by a day at the last minute.
Nepinak says he backs Spence's demand for Johnston to be at the meeting with Harper. Spence is also demanding Ontario Premier Dalton McGuinty be at the meeting.
Representatives from Idle No More have distanced themselves from the chiefs. The grassroots movement is also calling on the AFN to walk out of the meeting with Harper.

Subject: Idle No More January 11th - Communities Update - 2013-01-10

Whitehorse:

Sgt. Wyers advises that 'the group will be parading down second ave to Main then to the river and the Totem Pole. By- Law will meet the organizers at 2nd and Black shortly before noon to discuss the parade and what is required. By-Law manager, will speak with organizers today and set things up.' The plan is for a peaceful and lawful gathering and march.

Carcross:

Cst. Peters reports there are no plans for CTFN in Carcross. They will be sending a van to join the protest in Whitehorse.

Haines Jct:

Cpl. MacKellar reports that CAFN will be holding a BBQ at a local business (they have been granted permission) where they will have signs. No concerns.

KFN would not be blocking the highway but may be conducting a Check Stop and handing out pamphlets and/or information packages. No concerns.

Beaver Creek:

Cpl. DEVARENNES spoke with a community contact and he reports that ' WRFN plans to block the highway at the intersection of the WRFN entrance and Alaska Highway.... if they do, they would put a grader across the highway for 3-5 minutes at a time and then let traffic go through. They would do this for approx 30-60 minutes during the day... He said that if it does take place, it will be a peaceful demonstration and traffic will still have access to drive even if the road is blocked by detouring by the WRFN community entrance and come out on the street where the YTG Maintenance Garage is located.' No concerns.

Dawson City:

Sgt. Wallace spoke with the EA for the chief and Sgt. Wallace advises that 'TH is not doing anything formal in regard to "Idle no more".. some of the TH members have decided to do a walk from the Gazebo to the TH office then over to the City office... The walk is suppose to start at noon and will last for approximately 1/2 hour.' No concerns.

Pelly Crossing, Teslin, Old Crow, Watson Lake, Carmacks:

No plans.

Below you will find information received

Greetings,

This may be nothing but I thought I would pass it along in case it is relevant.

This morning the statue of Sir John A. MacDonald located at the corner of King and West Sts. was vandalized sometime over night. reported that the statue was covered in red and white paint and the plinth had the words "You stole our land" spray-painted on it.

This story appeared in yesterday's Whig-Standard:

http://www.thewhig.com/2013/01/09/party-ready-for-sir-john-a

As the Idle No More event scheduled for today coincides with the time the event is taking place at the statue (according to the article in the paper), I wanted to make everyone aware of both circumstances and any possible linkages between the two.

Aboriginal communities in Quebec are planning various protests across the province, as a meeting between Prime Minister Stephen Harper and Assembly of First Nations chiefs is expected to take place today in Ottawa.
In Montreal, a protest is planned for this afternoon near the Palais des Congrès.
Pressure tactics and protests are also planned by members of the Listuguj community in the Gaspé region and in Uashat, an Innu community near Sept-Îles.
The Idle No More movement, which began in November and quickly spread across the country, stemmed from discontent among First Nation's people towards the federal government's general stance on indigenous rights and, more specifically, omnibus Bill C-45 (http://www.cbc.ca/news/canada/story/2013/01/04/f-idlenomore-faq.html). Groups have expressed concern that the bill erodes the rights of native peoples and have been angered by what they say is a lack of consultation on changes to environmental protection regulations.
The grassroots movement gained a serious following and significant media attention through rallies (http://www.cbc.ca/news/canada/montreal/story/2012/12/22/montreal-oka-idle-no-more.html), teach-ins, and social media. The hunger strike of Attawapiskat Chief Theresa Spence has also drawn support to the cause.
The Facebook page of the movement says it wants to "stop the Harper government from passing more laws and legislation that will further erode treaty and indigenous rights and the rights of all Canadians."
Questions over who will attend today's meeting — and new demands about where it should be held — created confusion yesterday (http://www.cbc.ca/news/politics/story/2013/01/10/pol-first-nations-chiefs-day-before-pm-meeting.html).
Chiefs gathered at a meeting at the Delta hotel in Ottawa on Thursday evening, with some saying they will attend the meeting with the prime minister, but "many" saying they won't, Evan Solomon, host of CBC News Network's Power & Politics, reported via Twitter.
http://www.cbc.ca/news/canada/montreal/story/2013/01/11/montreal-quebec-protests-idle-no-more-harper.html

A meeting between Prime Minister Stephen Harper and Assembly of First Nations chiefs is in question amid demands that the Governor General be present at the gathering.
Questions over who will attend the meeting — and new demands about where it should be held — created confusion on the eve of the gathering called to discuss concerns about the relationship between the federal government and First Nations.
Chiefs gathered at a meeting at the Delta hotel in Ottawa on Thursday evening, with some saying they will attend the meeting with the prime minister, but "many" saying they won't, Evan Solomon, host of CBC News Network's Power & Politics, reported via Twitter.
"The meeting is up in the air," another Solomon tweet said at about 9:30 p.m. ET
As chief after chief got up to announce support for Attawapiskat Chief Theresa Spence's stance that the Governor General must attend, Atleo eventually took the microphone to plea for unity. He admitted he had made mistakes and that the membership of the Assembly of First Nations was divided. What he left unsaid was whether any meeting with Harper would take place at all, or how he would proceed.
"This is not a perfect organization and I am not a perfect person. I accept a share of responsibility and I have responded to criticisms from last January," Atleo told a rowdy crowded room of chiefs and delegates.
"We need to continue to stand united — chiefs, delegates.... If we are to be divided at a moment like this, the governments will see that."
He then left the conference hall, with insiders indicating he would work through the night with his executive in order to figure out the best way forward.
Some of his allies insisted he would meet with Harper and cabinet ministers as planned on Friday afternoon — in private, in the Prime Minister's Office with a relatively small delegation of chiefs.
"It is our intention to move forward with the meeting," said B.C. Regional Chief Jody Wilson-Raybould.
Atleo himself suggested he would hold the meeting, and then push for a broader meeting on Jan. 24, and a commitment to hold broad, open meetings with chiefs at regular intervals.
"We need them to commit to sit with you on a regular, ongoing basis, look you in the eye the way it was done in the treaty-making, in a sacred manner. And let's transform this relationship. Because our kids are dependent on every single one of us," he said.'Very dictatorial and unrelenting'
Grand Chief Stan Louttit, of the Mushkegowuk territory that includes Attawapiskat First Nation, told Solomon on his program Thursday that the chiefs were united in the belief that the meeting would be off unless both Harper and Gov. Gen. David Johnston were in attendance.
"That's what the chiefs debated this afternoon," Louttit said. "And there is unanimity on the floor from our meeting at the conference centre that we want both the Governor General and the prime minister at our meeting tomorrow."
Manitoba chiefs said they would not attend Friday's meeting unless it was moved to the hotel.
"Unfortunately, the prime minister has been very dictatorial and unrelenting in his position to control and set the agenda for this meeting," the Manitoba chiefs said in a release.
Meanwhile, Harper's director of communications, Andrew MacDougall, said the government will stick with the plan for Harper to attend the working meeting at his office, and for the Governor General to host a separate ceremonial meeting at Rideau Hall Friday evening.
Johnston had said that he wouldn't attend a working meeting on public policy, despite demands by some First Nations leaders, including Spence, that he be there in his role as the Queen's representative in Canada.

Spence has limited her food intake for the past month, consuming only herbal tea and fish broth since Dec. 11. She says she will continue her protest until the meeting happens and said she wouldn't stop unless Johnston was at the meeting.Spence's fast may continue

It's not clear yet whether a ceremonial meeting will meet those demands. Spence's spokesman, Danny Metatawabin, first told CBC News that the meeting with Johnston was a positive step, but then said if he isn't at the same meeting as Harper then it would be a failure.

Spence has maintained Harper, Johnston, Ontario Premier Dalton McGuinty and First Nations leaders must be in the same room, having discussions together. Louttit said on Power & Politics that Spence won't be attending.

McGuinty has an unrelated news conference in Toronto Friday morning and then leaves for a trade mission to China.

The working meeting is to be held at Langevin Block, the building that houses the Prime Minister's Office, and is closed to media, a spokeswoman for Harper said in an email.

The meeting, if it goes ahead, will start at 1 p.m. ET with remarks by Harper and Atleo, with a plenary session from 1:30 p.m. to 4 p.m. to discuss the treaty relationship, aboriginal rights and economic development.

Aboriginal Affairs and Northern Development Minister John Duncan and Treasury Board president Tony Clement will be at the plenary sessions.

Harper and Atleo will "engage in a dialogue" about the outcomes of the plenary session from 4 p.m. to 5 p.m.

NDP Leader Tom Mulcair was to meet with 20 national and regional First Nations chiefs Thursday night at Stornoway, the residence of the Opposition leader. However, that meeting was delayed and eventually cancelled due to the evening meeting at the Delta. Spence will not be at that meeting.'Poverty is killing First Nations people'

Earlier Thursday, the country's top chief said poverty is killing First Nations people, as he laid out goals for the meeting with the Harper.

Atleo said the AFN has heard the voices of Idle No More activists calling for action.

"We are absolute in our convictions and in our determination to achieve our rights," he said.

Referring to the number of missing and murdered aboriginal women, Atleo's voice caught as he recalled going with a family to a morgue after a 16-year-old girl was killed.

"This is what our people are saying. That poverty is killing our people. That the history of colonization and unilateral action on the part of governments will stop now," he said.

Atleo, along with regional chiefs Jody Wilson-Raybould and Perry Bellegarde, laid out a number of specific requests, including treaty implementation, treaty enforcement and a new financial relationship with the Crown. Bellegarde says one funding formula is 19 years old and hasn't kept up with either inflation or the total First Nations population.

Wilson-Raybould and Bellegarde both pointed to the need for a new division within the Prime Minister's Office or the Privy Council office to manage the policy changes they're asking for.

"The second point we talked about is, again, lands and resources being unilaterally developed without our involvement. That creates poverty. That's not good for our country. We need to deal with that," Bellegarde said, recommending Natural Resources Minister Joe Oliver should be working on that file with the AFN.'Poor in our own homelands'

The chiefs also mentioned disputes over changes to environmental legislation the Conservative government made in its two omnibus budget implementation bills in 2012.

"Our treaties were not meant to make us poor in our own homelands. But that's what we see," Bellegarde said.

Wilson-Raybould said the Indian Act needs to be fundamentally changed.

"Imposed solutions will not work," she said. "We have the solutions right across the country in terms of developing and extricating ourselves from the Indian Act."

The meetings comes after nearly two months of Idle No More protests by First Nations people, as well as Spence's month-long hunger strike.'Nothing left to lose'

First Nations people in Canada have "nothing left to lose," the grand chief of the Assembly of Manitoba Chiefs told reporters Thursday morning, pointing to the problems with lack of housing, unsafe drinking water and poor health in the community.

Derek Nepinak said the Idle No More movement has enough people to "bring the Canadian economy to its knees."

"It can stop Prime Minister Harper's resource development plan and his billion-dollar plan to develop resources in our ancestral territories. We have the warriors that are standing up now that are willing to go that far. So we're not here to make requests. We're here to demand attention and to demand an end to 140 years of colonial rule," Nepinak said.

The Manitoba chiefs distributed a list of 10 treaty principles in advance, affirming their sovereignty and that Canada "has an ongoing obligation to fulfil the treaty according to the spirit and intent."

À moins de 24 heures d'une rencontre avec le premier ministre Stephen Harper, le chef national de l'Assemblée des Premières Nations (APN), Shawn Atleo, a reconnu jeudi soir qu'il exitait des divisions entre les chefs autochtones, et que lui et son organisation avaient commis des erreurs.

Des négociations entre les représentants autochtones ont eu lieu jeudi soir et se poursuivront vendredi. Lors d'une conférence de presse, M. Atleo a souhaité que ceux-ci mettent de côté leurs différends pour éviter que les gouvernements fédéral, provinciaux et territoriaux en profitent.

En fin de soirée, le chef Bill Erasmus a affirmé au journaliste de CBC Evan Solomon que les chefs voulaient que le premier ministre et le gouverneur général soient tous deux présents à la réunion, dans un endroit suffisamment grand pour accueillir tous les chefs autochtones voulant y participer, et non seulement une délégation.

Plus tôt dans la journée, les chefs des Premières Nations du Manitoba et de l'Ontario ont annoncé qu'ils refusaient de participer aux discussions avec le premier ministre si le gouverneur général est absent. Le grand chef de l'Assemblée des chefs du Manitoba, Derek Nepinak, a insisté sur le fait que les communautés autochtones en ont assez (http://www.radio-canada.ca/regions/manitoba/2013/01/10/004-idle-no-more-nepinak-ottawa.shtml) et qu'elles n'ont plus rien à perdre. Le gouverneur général David Johnston

Pour le moment, le gouverneur général, David Johnston, a accepté d'être l'hôte d'une cérémonie protocolaire à sa résidence, Rideau Hall, vendredi soir, après la réunion du premier ministre et d'une délégation de chefs autochtones.
Le bureau du premier ministre a demandé au gouverneur général de rencontrer la délégation de chefs autochtones à la suite d'un entretien avec Shawn Atleo et les chefs régionaux de la Saskatchewan, Perry Bellegarde, et de la Colombie-Britannique, Jody Wilson-Raybould, membres du Comité exécutif national de l'APN.
La chef d'Attawapiskat, Theresa Spence, qui réclamait la présence du représentant de la reine (http://www.radio-canada.ca/nouvelles/National/2013/01/09/001-ottawa-autochtones-rencontre.shtml) à la réunion de travail, a fait savoir qu'elle poursuivrait sa grève de la faim. Plus tôt dans la journée, son porte-parole avait toutefois affirmé que la rencontre à Rideau Hall était un pas dans la bonne direction.
Mme Spence n'était pas présente à une rencontre entre 20 chefs autochtones et le chef de l'opposition officielle à la Chambre des communes, Thomas Mulcair, à la résidence officielle de ce dernier, Stornoway.

Les attentes des chefs autochtones

Toujours jeudi, les chefs autochtones ont fait le point sur leurs attentes. Ils estiment que la réunion de vendredi est cruciale pour l'avenir des relations entre le Canada et les Premières Nations.
« Nous sommes arrivés à un moment sans pareil dans l'histoire de nos peuples », a soutenu le chef national Shawn Atleo.« Les gouvernements doivent comprendre que notre détermination est inébranlable. » — Shawn Atleo, chef de l'APN

Le chef de l'APN était accompagné des chefs Bellegarde et Wilson-Raybould qui l'ont aidé à déterminer les priorités à présenter à la réunion.
Les chefs autochtones souhaitent insister sur trois points :
une mécanique de mise en oeuvre des traités signés, avec une implication du bureau du premier ministre;

le partage des revenus tirés des ressources naturelles;
un meilleur financement des programmes, qu'ils souhaiteraient voir indexés au coût de la vie et ajustés à leur taux de croissance démographique.

Le chef Atleo a expliqué que le contexte, avec la force du mouvement Idle No More et la grève de la faim de la chef d'Attawapiskat, fait en sorte que c'est, pour eux, le moment d'agir.« Notre peuple demande une transformation fondamentale de notre relation avec le gouvernement du Canada maintenant. Nous avons besoin de vraies solutions et d'un vrai changement pour notre peuple immédiatement. » — Shawn Atleo, chef national de l'APN

À huis clos

La réunion de travail de vendredi se tiendra dans l'édifice Langevin, à Ottawa. Les médias n'y auront pas accès.
Voici les activités prévues lors de la rencontre :
13 h - Séance d'ouverture et allocution du premier ministre Stephen Harper et du chef national Shawn Atleo;

16 h - 17 h - Le premier ministre, Stephen Harper, et le chef national, Shawn Atleo, dialogueront avec les présidents au sujet des résultats de la séance plénière.

Aboriginal and Ethnic Liaison A Div situational Update

Source: Royal Canadian Mounted Police Aboriginal & Ethnic Liaison Officer
A-Division, National Capital Region * Law Enforcement Only*

It appears that only 20 chiefs were allowed to attend the meeting with the PM. It appears that some Chiefs are starting to align themselves with INM. Still not known if the meeting will occur. I'm at the Camp where there is a meeting with Chief Spence and her people. Unsure if she will attend the meeting or dinner at this time...will advise in am the outcome.
End of Update

There is still no clear decision on the meeting today with the PM. The Chiefs want the PM to meet them on their own turf and on their agenda. The National Chief had a difficult time at last nights meeting trying to keep unity amongst the Chiefs.
IDM movement according to media is now marching up at 1000 to arrive PH at 1100. This has not been confirmed, at this time.

Pipe Ceremony still starting @0700, nothing apparently planned for any activities after that. Unsure what the plan is to hold the people on Victoria Island, till step off time for the march. .
Still no clear decision on Chief Spence's position on attending or not attend to days meeting and dinner. Volunteers all want her to end her hunger strike today.
End of update

Kingsclear First Nation RCMP District 2
2013-01-11: Peaceful protests will be held on Highway 102, across from Kingsclear First Nation. They will display flags and signs while staying on the shoulder portion of the road; they will not block the highway.
Red Bank First Nation RCMP District 6
2013-01-11 @ 1000hrs: Approximately 45 people have confirmed attendance at a peaceful demonstration in the parking lot of the new mini mall. they "usually block the bridge"; however, there has been no information to substantiate this at this time.
Listiguj First Nation Sureté du Québec – RCMP District 9
2013-01-11 @ 1400hrs-1500hrs: The Listuguj Band, on the Québec side of the border will hold a peaceful march across Van Horne bridge into Campbellton NB from 1400hrs – 1500hrs, followed by a speech to be held at the Alaqsite'w Gitpu School in Pointe à la Croix at 1530hrs.
Of interest, Chief Dean VICAIRE of the Listuguj Reserve was named head representing chief of the Mi'Maq Nations for Atlantic Canada and Eastern Quebec and has departed for the Ottawa meeting. He indicated that if the meetings didn't go well between Harper and the Chiefs, there would be a resulting effect, but it would not be immediate and given his new position, this would be a calculated approach with the other chiefs over the coming weeks.

Eel River Bar First Nation RCMP District 9
2013-01-11: Eel River Bar First Nations Band advises they have not organized any activity and that one band member, coming from Moncton was looking at gauging support for a peaceful march from the Dalhousie village hall to Eel River Bar. To date not much support received.
Pabineau First Nation RCMP District 9
2013-01-11: Pabineau First Nations Band has been approached. They had initially indicated they would not participate but are now considering whether they should participate.
Tobique First Nation RCMP District 10
2013-01-11 @ 11:30: Tobique First Nation will be protesting again on the Trans Canada Highway at the same location as the previous protest. Brunway will be advised of the plans. There may be some individuals from Tobique that will go to Ottawa for the Protest on Parliament Hill on the same day.
St Mary's First Nation Fredericton City Police
2013-01-11 @ 11:30: Protest activity to take place at the MP Keith Ashfield's office at 23 Alison Boulevard, then the group will go to St Marys First Nation for drumming, dancing, and prayers.

Please be advised that the NCRCC will be activated Friday, January 11th, 2013 from 0800 - 1800hrs.

Summary:

On 2013-01-11, Prime Minister of Canada will be meeting with Chiefs of Assembly of First Nation (AFN) and Chief Theresa Spence of Attawapiskat (currently on hunger strike against treaty violations by Canadian government) with respect to grassroot "Idle No More" movement. This meeting is scheduled to take place at the Prime Minister Office (PMO) at 80 Wellington Street, in Ottawa.

On this day, representative of Pays Plat First Nation has obtained permits from Canadian Heritage and City of Ottawa to march from Victoria Island to Parliament Hill at 10:00 am where they will hold a rally to support the Idle No More movement. The march will then congregate to the location of the meeting (PMO) between the Prime Minister and the Chiefs.

Permit is indicating the number of attendee at 1000-5000.

Security Event Report - Initial - Idle No More Protests - 11 January 2013
Protected A

Report Current as of: 1200hrs AST 10 January 2013

EVENT DESCRIPTION:

Protests are likely across Canada, including in New Brunswick, on 11 Jan 2013 linked to meetings between First Nations leaders and the Government of Canada in Ottawa.

SITUATION:

Idle No More associated activities have continued this week across Canada and in isolated locations in the United States.

Tomorrow, protest activity is expected to increase to coincide with national leaders meetings. Current information suggests supports peaceful local road and major highway protests. Some effects on road traffic are likely. While no information supports targeting, rail and ports-of-entry have been recent targets of similar protests.

While not forecast, protests could become unlawful or more confrontational.

In New Brunswick,

Woodstock: 1200h, 672 Main Street, Office of Mike Allen, Member of Parliament
Listiguj First Nation - Campbellton 1300hrs - 1530hrs: Listuguj FN will hold a peaceful march across Van Horne bridge into Campbellton NB followed by a speech to be held at the Alaqsite'w Gitpu School in Pointe à la Croix at 1530hrs. Hwy 2 - Hwy 105 1130h, Daylight Tobique First Nation will protest on the Trans Canada Highway, one lane may be closed on the TCH/Hwy 2.
Fredericton 1130h, Office of Minister Keith Ashfield, 23 Alison Boulevard, 1130h, then St Marys First Nation Cultural Centre for drumming, dancing, and prayers.

In Canada,

- Peaceful protests are expected across most jurisidictions.
- The largest will take place in Ottawa.

RCMP and local police agencies are working with protestors, municipalities and others to keep people safe and preserve the peace.

Current indications suggest that activity related to the "Idle No More" movement will last for some time, at different levels of intensity.

The food distribution/production, transportation, and energy sectors, emergency responders and processes depending on just-in-time delivery are the most likely to be impacted.

CURRENT AND POTENTIAL IMPACT:

- Local, short-term traffic and operational disruptions are expected.
- Traffic flow on the Trans-Canada near Perth-Andover could be impacted.
- A negative event at any protest in Canada could result in escalation more widely, including NB.NB, and due to geography Atlantic Canada, are more vulnerable to supply chain disruptions from protests. Critical goods and services impacts, along with economic impacts, can occur if protests escalate.

GOVERNMENT OF NEW BRUNSWICK ACTIONS AND AREAS OF INTEREST

DPS is coordinating planning and information-gathering within GNB, and with RCMP and federal partners.

The Idle No More protests have the potential of building support amongst aboriginal and non-aboriginal people across Atlantic Canada and the nation. While the focus is federal at the moment, similar concerns will impact NB on resource development, particularly natural gas and mineral exploration along with crude oil transportation.

ACTIONS TAKEN AND PLANNED

Ongoing monitoring in collaboration with RCMP and federal and provincial government departments

Communication with critical infrastructure owners/operator, Maine State and PQ officials

Should protests and impacts escalate, DPS will take more intensive steps to assess and mitigate impacts.

MEDIA AND PUBLIC INTEREST

NB protests approaching 11 January received strong play in national and social media. Social media presence regarding Idle No More, including NB protests, is significant.

POTENTIAL ASSISTANCE FROM OTHER JURISDICTIONS

RCMP and DPS are in communication with counterparts in Maine, NS and PQ.

FYI

Wayne, further to our phone conversation earlier, I just want to confirm that Nunatukavut Community Council is planning on a "gathering" on the Trans Labrador Highway tomorrow morning. the "gathering" will be peaceful and will be at the junction of the South Coast Highway. The "Gathering" will be in support of their aboriginal rights and respect of the "Idle no more" movement. contacted Department of Highways as well should there be traffic problems. no idea how many people will show up but considering the recent court outcome and his media campaign, I suspect there could be numerous people involved.

I will update you tomorrow.

Everyone,

Here is the latest update from Aboriginal Policing.

Good morning,

No new events to report at this time. Things in Ottawa re extremely unsettled and there continues to be concerns as to whether or not today's meeting will occur. The protest/march in Ottawa is growing steadily and has closed some streets and bridges.

There will be one or two deciding events today, I believe. First is whether or not the FN - Crown meeting actually occurs. Second, if that meeting occurs, what comes from it in the immediate aftermath.

I will provide a second update later this afternoon. If anything major appears to be developing in K Division in the meantime, I will advise.

Thanks,

Jackie

IDLE NO MORE 2013-01-11

CONTEXTE

De nombreux rapports et médias sociaux font état de mouvement de protestations en appui au mouvement autochtone Idle No More. Ce rapport se veut un récapitulatif des actions en cours ainsi qu'annoncées sur le territoire québécois, cela dans un but informatif et pour la sécurité de la population et des forces de l'ordre (PROS 2012-1617463). Il importe de mettre en garde que les événements peuvent rapidement changer et devenir obsolètes.

ÉVÉNEMENTS

Il y a des activités et des manifestations prévues partout au pays en marge de la rencontre entre le premier ministre et les représentants des Premières Nations qui doit débuter à 13h dans l'édifice Langevin, à Ottawa. Si le gouverneur général, David Johnston, ne participe pas à la réunion, il a toutefois accepté d'être l'hôte d'une cérémonie protocolaire à sa résidence à Rideau Hall après la rencontre. La présence de la chef Theresa Spence est toujours indéterminée et l'issue de la rencontre demeure incertaine.

Sur le plan international, le mouvement aurait des répercussions en Égypte où un rassemblement serait prévu à 14h devant l'ambassade canadienne au Caire.
Toujours à 14h (jusqu'à 17h), un rassemblement devrait se tenir à Sydney devant le Consulat général du Canada (au 1111 Harrington St.)
En Nouvelle-Zélande, le rassemblement doit se tenir devant l'édifice de la High Commission of Canada (125 The Terrace, Wellington).
En Angleterre, c'est devant la Maison Macdonald (1 Grosvenor Square à Londres) que devrait se tenir la manifestation. Les internautes peuvent trouver en ligne les autres endroits de rassemblement selon leur lieu de résidence.

Jusqu'à présent, les manifestations ont été pacifiques même si elles ont causé l'interruption de services ferroviaires et de retards sur diverses routes.

Les actes de violence auraient plutôt été engagés à l'encontre des autochtones, principalement contre les étudiants qui fréquentent des institutions hors réserves comme en témoigne un représentant de la nation Anishinabek. Ce dernier a affirmé que de nombreux rapports de commentaires racistes, de harcèlement et d'incidents violents avaient été remplis à travers le pays depuis le début du mouvement Idle No More.

Outre les groupes autochtones, plusieurs groupes écologistes québécois dont Greenpeace Québec ont fait un appel officiel à la manifestation au Palais de Congrès qui se tiendra aujourd'hui à Montréal car ils prétendent que les enjeux environnementaux touchent tout le peuple canadien. De plus, Kairos, une coalition d'Églises du Canada, d'ONG à base ecclésiale et d'organismes religieux de solidarité, tente de rallier des participants à un jeûne pancanadien de 24h, par solidarité avec la chef Theresa Spence

Idle No More Protests – Nova Scotia

Issue:

· To advise the Commissioner of the outcome for various rallies and protests relating to the Idle No More movement held today in Nova Scotia.

Background:

· The planned meeting between the Prime Minister and Aboriginal Leaders today in Ottawa sparked several rallies and protests in Nova Scotia relating to the Idle No More movement.

Current Status:

· A planned railway disruption at Millbrook First Nation near Truro, Nova Scotia was averted by advancing the train's schedule and departing prior to the blockade set up.
· A peaceful rally held in Antogonish had 50 people in attendance with no issues identified.
· A peaceful rally in Halifax (Halifax Regional Police area) had upwards of 200 protesters, the vast majority of whom were non-Aborginal, and no issues identified.
· There have been some reports that protestors at Millbrook First Nation may attempt to block the train on Saturday afternoon, 2013-01-11.

Recommendations/Strategic Advice:

· The District Policing Officers and senior managers are actively engaged in directing the response to these events.

· Community and Aboriginal Diversity Policing Services (CADPS) are actively engaged.
· RCMP Risk Managers, CN Police, municipal policing partners and key provincial stakeholders continue to be engaged.
· "H" Division Communications Strategists are aware and engaged.
· "H" Division Criminal Operations will continue to monitor these events.

Everyone,

This is the latest update. Some details very much in a state of flux

News

At time of writing, events and situations continue to appear very fluid and volatile. There is a meeting going on in Ottawa, but no confirmation as to which chiefs are attending. There are immense protests going on across the country, including the thousands of people in Ottawa, and many other major centres across Canada.

The meeting between the Prime Minister and a number of Chiefs is ongoing and is scheduled to last until 1700 hrs EST (1500 MST). It is expected to be followed by a ceremonial meeting with the Governor General.

We need to aware of the possibility of large reactive incidents over the weekend regardless of the results that come out of Ottawa this afternoon. As well, January 16 (next Wednesday) was identified as a day of action prior to this meeting being scheduled. I would anticipate that large scale events, if any, may be expected to occur on that date.

KINGSTON, ONT.—Police in Ontario are investigating after a Sir John A. Macdonald statue was vandalized overnight, saying it may have been politically motivated.
On what would have been the 198th birthday of Canada's first prime minister, the statue in a Kingston park was splattered with red paint and the words "This is stolen land," "murderer" and "colonizer" were sprayed on the statue's base.
Kingston police Const. Steve Koopman says city crews are working to clean the monument and an event at the statue site to mark the former prime minister's 198th birthday will continue as planned.
Koopman says a forensics officer is on the scene gathering evidence and that police intend to speak to nearby residents for information on who attacked the statue.
He says police are not ruling out a possible link with an Idle No More protest occurring in Kingston Friday, but that they currently have no evidence the two are connected.
Koopman says the defacement could be part of an effort to smear the aboriginal movement.
"It would look to be a political statement but at the same time people might be seeking that for political purposes," he said.
"We're going to be cautious as to what the motive is at this point."

Folks,

We're hearing on the TV that there may be civil unrest involving the 1st Nations members. They are threatening to blockade Canadian Ports and major corridors beginning Wednesday, if their request to meet with the PM and Secretary General are not met.

Good day,

Noted below are a number of protests/demonstrations that are planned or have occurred today for various locations throughout the Northwest Territories.

Yellowknife, NT.

An Idle No More demonstration was held on January 11th at noon in the downtown core of Yellowknife. A planned round dance took place at the intersection of 50th St. and 50th Ave, the dance lasted for thirty five minutes. Information sessions will also be held during this event, it is estimated between 100 and 125 people attended this event.

Fort Providence, NT.

There are tentative plans to block the Deh Cho bridge that spans the MacKenzie River near Fort Providence. It has been learned that this event will not take place.

Hay River, NT.

A peaceful demonstration took place at the Hay River Library on January 11th, 2013 at noon. Thirty people attended a peaceful demonstration.

NT/Alta. border.

A demonstration is being planned on the highway at the Northwest Territories/Alberta border on January 12, 2013 from 14:00 hrs to 16:00 hrs. It is anticipated that as many as a hundred people may attend.

peaceful protests are the themes that are being advocated Updates on protests will be provided as details are confirmed.

Please do not hesitate to contact me should you have any questions or concerns.

"Idle No More" Planned Protest Activities - Friday January 11, 2013
"J" Division Jurisdictions - 201329573

Kingsclear First Nation – CONCLUDED RCMP District 2

2013-01-11: Peaceful protests will be held on Highway 102, across from Kingsclear First Nation. They will display flags and signs while staying on the shoulder portion of the road; they will not block the highway.

UPDATE @ 1446hrs: Approximately a dozen protesters gathered on the side of Highway 102 in front of the Kingsclear First Nation at 0900 hrs. It was a peaceful protest, ending at 1130hrs.

Red Bank First Nation – ONGOING RCMP District 6

2013-01-11 @ 1000hrs: Approximately 45-50 people are expected to attend a peaceful demonstration in the parking lot of a local business. The demonstration will consist of handing out literature, speeches, drummers, etc. No march or blockades of highways are planned.

UPDATE @ 1440hrs: The protest is ongoing without issue. Protesters are handing out information to motorists, no blockade. Another update will be provided after 1630hrs. No problems are anticipated.

Listiguj First Nation – ONGOING Sureté du Québec – RCMP District 9

2013-01-11 @ 1400hrs-1500hrs: The Listuguj Band, on the Québec side of the border will hold a peaceful march across Van Horne bridge into Campbellton NB from 1400hrs–1500hrs, followed by a speech to be held at the Alaqsite'w Gitpu School in Pointe à la Croix at 1530hrs.

Of interest, Chief Dean VICAIRE of the Listuguj Reserve was named head representing chief of the Mi'Maq Nations for Atlantic Canada and Eastern Quebec and will be in Ottawa for the meeting. If the meeting does not go well, he indicates there will be resulting effect, but it would not be immediate, it would be a calculated approach with the other chiefs over the coming weeks.

UPDATE @ 1314hrs: We are now getting ready to assist with traffic and blockages of the Van Horne Bridge in Campbellton, NB. Sgt. Dibblee - RCMP will be in command post overlooking bridge with SQ and LPD members as of 1330hrs. The march and bridge closure is expected at 14h00hrs.

Eel River Bar First Nation – CONCLUDED RCMP District 9

2013-01-11 @ 1200hrs-1300hrs: March at Dalhousie Town Hall, approximately 50 people expected.

UPDATE @ 1314hrs: Approximately 18 people attended the Rotary Park in Dalhousie, NB. They marched on various streets escorted by members. The demonstration has completed and everyone has left.

Tobique First Nation – ONGOING RCMP District 10

2013-01-11 @ 1130hrs: Tobique First Nation will be protesting again on the Trans Canada Highway at the same location as the previous protest. Brunway will be advised of the plans. There may be some individuals from Tobique that will go to Ottawa for the Protest on Parliament Hill on the same day.

UPDATE @ 1227hrs: Approximately 20 people on site, very relaxed and passive. Protestors are taking up one lane of traffic with no intentions to completely block the highway. They are planning to stay on site until 1600hrs-1700hrs, or later, depending on how the meetings go in Ottawa.

UPDATE @ 1411hrs: Things remain calm overall; however, sporadically walking in the lone open lane of traffic heading westbound, causing vehicles to make sudden evasive maneuvers at low speeds. Cpl. Millier intervened and thus far the episode has not re-occurred. Should such actions continue, plans are to stop the flow of traffic completely prior to the demonstration site and negotiate with the demonstrators for safety reasons.

St Mary's First Nation – CONCLUDED Fredericton City Police

2013-01-11 @ 1130hrs: Protest activity to take place at the MP Keith Ashfield's office at 23 Alison Boulevard, then the group will go to St Marys First Nation for drumming, dancing, and prayers.

UPDATE @ 1402hrs: The peaceful protest began at 1130hrs and concluded at 1235hrs without issue. Approximately 120-150 people attended.

Eel Ground Miramichi Police Force
Burnt Church

2013-01-11 – Afternoon: Burnt Church and Eel Ground are in discussions for a combined protest in the city of Miramichi. Protestors would walk across the Chatham Bridge (the big bridge across the Miramichi River shared by provincial routes 11 and 8) to the exhibition grounds near the ball fields in Chatham.

Woodstock First Nation– CONCLUDED Woodstock Police Force - RCMP District 7

2013-01-11 @ 1200hrs: Woodstock First Nation will be going to MP Mike Allen's office and there will be a Flash Mob Round Dance, location 672 Main Street, Woodstock NB. The protest has been will be restricted to 1/2 hr and to the sidewalk. 32 people have confirmed and the protestors may be joined by a few people from NBCC.

UPDATE @ 1449hrs: The protest took place without incident. There were approximately 30 protesters in attendance and all have departed.

On 2013-01-16, there is a peaceful blockade scheduled to take place on the Trans-Canada Highway. This is currently on hold pending the outcome of the meeting at the National level.

M Division Update:

About 120 people participated in the march. It was very organized both with the INM group and with By-Law. They held a drumming circle within the intersection of 2nd Avenue and Main for several minutes which created no issues- By-Law did a great job with traffic control. Public response on the street was positive. The Group finished with a drumming by the Healing Totem Pole then dispersed.

Situation Report

Incident Number: ST003-13A

Incident: First Nations Protests – National Day of Action

Date: Information valid as of 13 Jan 2013, 10:30 EST

Description of current incident: As part of the ongoing First Nations (FN) engagement, a number of FN protests are anticipated as part of a "National Day of Action" planned for 16 Jan 2013.

On 16 Jan, several demonstrations are expected in various locations across Canada. Media has reported that the protestors are seeking to cause an "economic slowdown" by organizing blockades at border crossings and on railway lines. Marches, demonstrations and other forms of peaceful protest have been scheduled by various organizations under the "Idle No More" banner in order to raise awareness of FN issues.

Source(s) of reporting: Aboriginal Affairs and Northern Development Canada, PS Regional Offices, media/open source reporting.

Current actions:

The GOC continues to monitor the situation closely and has established contact with key federal departments/agencies and PS Regional Offices in order to maintain cohesive information sharing.

A consolidated events matrix is being maintained by the GOC and will be distributed periodically, as information becomes available.

Event management of the protests falls under the purview of local jurisdictions and local law enforcement agencies, as appropriate.

Future actions: The GOC will also be hosting a conference call with partners on Monday 14 Jan 2013 to coordinate efforts and to assess impacts.

Assessment/Analysis: The national "Day of Action" planned for 16 Jan is expected to cause interruptions to passenger and freight trains, disruptions to traffic and potential delays at border crossings/ports of entry. Based on past events related to the "Idle No More" movement; demonstrations are expected to remain peaceful.

Departments and Agencies with further information on this incident are asked to report to the GOC.

Additional situation reports: Further situation reports will be issued as more information becomes available.

Additional Products: An events matrix will be attached to a follow-on message.

Numéro d'incident : ST003-13A

Incident : Manifestations des Premières nations – Journée nationale de protestation

Date : Renseignements mis à jour le 13 janvier 2013, à 10 h 30 HNE

Description de l'incident : Dans le cadre de leur engagement en cours, les Premières nations ont organisé de nombreuses manifestations pour la Journée nationale de protestation, le 16 janvier 2013.

Le 16 janvier, diverses manifestations seront tenues dans plusieurs endroits du Canada. Selon les médias, les manifestants veulent causer un « ralentissement économique » en érigeant des barricades à des postes frontaliers et sur des voies ferrées. Des marches, des manifestations et d'autres types d'activités pacifiques de protestation ont également été prévues par des organisations du mouvement Idle No More afin de sensibiliser les gens aux enjeux avec lesquels les Premières nations doivent composer.

Mesures en cours :

Le COG continue de suivre la situation de près, et il a communiqué avec les ministères et organismes clés du gouvernement fédéral et avec les bureaux régionaux de SP afin d'assurer le caractère uniforme de l'échange d'information.

Le COG tiendra à jour une matrice complète des incidents qu'il distribuera au besoin, à mesure que de nouveaux renseignements deviennent disponibles.

La gestion de l'incident relève des administrations et des organismes d'application de la loi locaux, selon les besoins.

Mesures à venir : Le COG tiendra, lundi le 14 janvier 2013, une téléconférence des partenaires pour coordonner les efforts et évaluer les répercussions de ces incidents.

Analyse/évaluation : La journée nationale de protestation prévue pour le 16 janvier devrait entraîner des perturbations quant aux déplacements de trains passagers et de marchandises, des perturbations du trafic et des retards potentiels aux postes frontaliers et aux points d'entrée. Par contre, si l'on se fie aux activités précédentes qu'a organisées le mouvement Idle No More, les manifestations devraient rester de nature pacifique.

Les ministères et les organismes qui ont plus de renseignements au sujet de cet incident sont priés de communiquer avec le COG.

Daily Brief 12 January 2013

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

EVENTS, INCIDENTS and ITEMS OF INTEREST

DAILY BRIEF CLASSIFIED ADDENDUM: There is no classified addendum today

CURRENT

1. Significant Weather – NL: As of 06:00 EST on 12 Jan 2013, official and unofficial snowfall reports indicated widespread 25 to 55 cm snowfall accumulations with higher amounts likely over some areas. High winds gusting between 100 and 120 km/h were expected for Terra Nova, Clarenville, Avalon Peninsula North and Bonavista Peninsula regions, with further snowfall amounts of 5 to 10 cm. Blizzard conditions over eastern Newfoundland have tapered to light snow and freezing drizzle or rain and drizzle. Freezing drizzle in the onshore flow over northeastern Newfoundland is expected to persist until late in the day when temperatures will eventually rise above the freezing mark. High waves and pounding surf can be expected for the Bonavista and Avalon Peninsula. This will cause higher than normal water levels which could result in minor coastal flooding at high tide this morning. Newfoundland and Labrador Hydro provided an estimated restoration time of the power between 8:30 and 10:30 EST on 12 Jan. At 20:43 EST on 11 Jan, Transport Canada reports that the NOTAM has been extended and the runways at St. John's International Airport will remain closed until 10:30 EST on 12 Jan.

2. First Nation (FN) Protests: A number of FN protests, organized by a group called “Idle No More”, have occurred since 19 Dec 2012. To date, these protests have been peaceful in nature; however, some protest activities have resulted in interruptions at ports of entry, on rail services, and delays on highways.

On 11 Jan 2013, a number of FN leaders met with the Prime Minister in Ottawa, ON while several other FN leaders boycotted the meeting due to the lack of attendance of the Governor General. During these talks, approximately 1,000 protesters demonstrated in front of Langevin Block in Ottawa, causing traffic disruptions. On 12 Jan, events are planned in BC, NT and QC.

Significant Weather

National Outlook

A deep low pressure system will track northeastward through northeast ON and cause significant snowfall to many parts of northern ON, QC and Labrador and a mix of rain and freezing rain further south over ON and QC. In the wake of this deep system, blizzards will subside this morning over southern MB. A trough of low pressure persisting over southeast NL will create showers and strong winds.

Warnings

MB: Blizzards and winter storms over southern sections ending this morning.
ON: Winter storms over northern and northwest sections.
ON/QC: Freezing rain over northeast ON and central QC areas.
QC: Blizzard warning for northern QC.
NL: Freezing drizzle.

A blockade has been erected on the main CN Rail line which runs through the Millbrook First Nation. Approximately one dozen demonstrators are on site. A sport utility vehicle and a wooden pallet are blocking the railway tracks.

The blockade began at approximately 1300 hrs ADT. There is reports that it may remain up only until 1700hrs, but not confirmed.

ISSUE: Two Idle No More Demonstrations occurring in D Division resulting in highway closures

PURPOSE:

- To advise the Commissioner of peaceful demonstrations that occurred on PTH # 6 by members of the Misipawistik Cree Nation in Grand Rapids, Manitoba and by the Pinaymootang First Nation at the Fairford Bridge on Highway #6 Near Gypsumville, Manitoba

BACKGROUND:

- On 2013-01-23 at 17:05 hrs approximately 12 people initiated a one hour road closure of PTH # 6 approximately 100 metres South of the bridge that spans the Saskatchewan River in Grand Rapids.

- Members of Grand Rapids detachment attended the location to alert motorists and prevent any possible altercations between protestors and motorists.

- The road was re-opened at 18:05 hrs without incident.

- On 2013-01-11 at 14:30 hrs. members of Gypsumville detachment received information of a possible protest occurring on PTH #6 at the Fairford Bridge near Gypsumville.

- Members spoke to and were advised that it would be a peaceful protest and the highway would not be blocked.

- At 17:00 hrs. Gypsumville detachment received a report of approximately 40 persons blocking highway #6 at the Fairford Dam and traffic was not being allowed through.

- Gypsumville detachment members arrived approximately 20 minutes after the complaint was received. There were no protestors on the highway and no vehicles parked at the location

- members spoke to once back at the detachment and were advised that he was at the scene at approximately 16:00 hrs and observed 4 – 6 vehicles and approximately 15 people on the shoulder of the road.

CURRENT STATUS:

- Members are continuing with positive dialogue with the organizers and protestors.

- Information suggests that on January 16, 2013 further protests may be initiated at both locations.

STRATEGIC CONSIDERATIONS:

- Possibility of media attention.

STRATEGIC COMMUNICATIONS:

- Division MLO will respond to any media enquiries using HQ suggested media lines.

RECOMMENDATIONS/STRATEGIC ADVICE:

-Nil

IN CONSULTATION WITH:

- S/Sgt. Scott McMurchy – DANCO North District

Everyone,

This is the latest update. Some details very much in a state of flux

News

At time of writing, events and situations continue to appear very fluid and volatile. There is a meeting going on in Ottawa, but no confirmation as to which chiefs are attending. There are immense protests going on across the country, including the thousands of people in Ottawa, and many other major centres across Canada.

The meeting between the Prime Minister and a number of Chiefs is ongoing and is scheduled to last until 1700 hrs EST (1500 MST). It is expected to be followed by a ceremonial meeting with the Governor General.

We need to aware of the possibility of large reactive incidents over the weekend regardless of the results that come out of Ottawa this afternoon. As well, January 16 (next Wednesday) was identified as a day of action prior to this meeting being scheduled. I would anticipate that large scale events, if any, may be expected to occur on that date.

NOTIFICATION - INCIDENT NT003-13

Description of incident: As part of the ongoing First Nations (FN) engagement, a number of FN protests are anticipated as part of a "National Day of Action planned for 16 Jan 2013.

Demonstrations and marches are expected in various locations across Canada including in QC, ON, SK, AB and BC. These demonstrations are expected to not only raise awareness of FN issues but are also expected to have some impact on transportation routes, border crossings and businesses.

Current GOC actions: The GOC continues to monitor the situation closely and has established contact with its partner agencies, including AANDC, CBSA, RCMP and TC in order to maximize information sharing. As the situation develops, the GOC will be producing and sharing consolidated events lists. The GOC will also be hosting a conference call with partners on Monday 14 Jan 2013 to coordinate efforts and to assess impacts.

Departments and Agencies with further information on this incident are asked to report to the GOC.

Further products, such as geomatics products and situation reports, will be provided to you as the situation develops and more information becomes available.

AVIS - INCIDENT NT003-13

Description de l'incident : Dans le cadre de leur engagement en cours, les Premières nations ont organisé de nombreuses manifestations pour la Journée nationale de protestation, le 16 janvier 2013.

Des manifestations et des marches devraient se dérouler à divers endroits partout au Canada, notamment au Québec, en Ontario, en Saskatchewan, en Alberta et en Colombie-Britannique. Ces manifestations devraient non seulement sensibiliser les gens sur les enjeux touchant les Premières nations, mais aussi perturber quelque peu certaines routes et entreprises, ainsi que certains postes frontaliers.

Mesures actuelles prises par le COG : Le COG continue de suivre la situation de près, et il a communiqué avec ses partenaires, notamment Affaires autochtones et Développement du Nord Canada, l'Agence des services frontaliers du Canada, la Gendarmerie royale du Canada et Transports Canada, afin de maximiser l'échange d'information. À mesure que la situation évolue, le COG produira et divulguera des listes des activités prévues. Il tiendra un appel conférence avec ses partenaires lundi le 14 janvier 2013 pour coordonner les efforts et évaluer les répercussions de ces activités.

Les ministères et les organismes ayant d'autres renseignements au sujet de cet incident sont priés de les communiquer au COG.

D'autres documents, comme des produits de géomatique et des rapports de situation, seront transmis à mesure que la situation évolue et que d'autres renseignements deviennent disponibles.

RCMP Daily Situation Report – Protests: Aboriginal-based Issues
Date: 2013-01-11
Time: 1900 hrs (EST)
PROS File: 2012-1617463

PURPOSE:

There have been several media and social networking reports of planned protests and potential blockades in support for the "Idle No More" (INM) Aboriginal-based solidarity movement. (U) These protests are being monitored for RCMP senior management situational awareness and public and police officer safety. (A)

Due to the large volume of events expected to occur today, January 11, there will be two reports produced focusing solely on today's events – one for 1400 hrs., and one for 1900 hrs, which will include events between January 12 and 16. These lists may not be complete as the environment is constantly changing, nor is it confirmed that these events have actually taken place. (U)

OVERVIEW:

Demonstrations in support of the Idle No More (INM) movement took place in major cities across Canada. The grassroots INM movement has distanced itself from the current First Nations leadership and any of its potential actions, claiming it is ineffective in dealing with the needs of Aboriginal people. Media sources report that INM wants to escalate their activities with more marches, round dances and blockades as opposed to handing out pamphlets and doing teach-ins; however, these activities would remain non-violent. Idle No More participants are planning an "economic slowdown" next week, and intend to target the Ambassador Bridge in Windsor.

Media sources report that some 50-60 AFN Chiefs are discussing plans to launch country-wide disruptions by mid-January in support of Chief Spence. called for protestors to block major roads and rail lines in Ontario on Wednesday, January 16, if their demands are not met. (U)

Several INM events took place on January 11th, coinciding with a meeting arranged between the Prime Minister and representatives of the AFN Chiefs. Police estimate that 3,000 people gathered on Parliament Hill for a rally/demonstration, waving flags and briefly blocking the entrance to the Prime Minister's office. The Prime Minister was in attendance for the entire meeting, which ended at 1815 hrs. (U)

While Chief Spence maintained her refusal to attend today's meeting, because the participants did not include all First Nation Chiefs or the Governor General, she has declared her intent to attend the ceremonial meeting with the Governor General at 1830 hrs at Rideau Hall. More than 100 First Nations Chiefs plan to attend the ceremonial meeting with the Governor General. (U)

RCMP Daily Situation Report – Protests: Aboriginal-based Issues

The Assembly of First Nations Chiefs remained divided Friday morning over attending the meeting with the Prime Minister. AFN National Chief Shawn Atleo along with delegates representing Nova Scotia, Nova Scotia, Newfoundland and Labrador, New Brunswick, P.E.I., Quebec, Saskatchewan, British Columbia, Alberta, and Yukon chose to meet with the Prime Minister and federal officials. Other Chiefs, including large groups from Manitoba and Ontario, boycotted the meeting, and instead joined the protest on the Hill. (A)

As the National Chief, Atleo was elected to voice the opinion of the majority of Chiefs, and has no independent political authority. His decision to go against the majority and attend the meeting has caused dissent within the AFN and lead to criticism that the AFN has lost its representative voice. There have been calls from the Chiefs of Ontario and Manitoba for a non-confidence vote. (U)

The afternoon meeting with the Prime Minister was described by Minister John Duncan as a constructive discussion. No full agreements were reached on all of the eight demands put forward by the Chiefs; however, consensus on some issues was attained. The Prime Minister expressed a wish to carry out his duty to consult First Nations Communities. The Prime Minister and National Chief Atleo Shawn agreed to meet again within a month to continue their dialogue on comprehensive land claims. (U)

There were approx. 120 domestic events which occurred across Canada, today, January 11, 2013.

Reports indicate there are 15 events planned for January 12, 2013, in Alberta, British Columbia, Northwest Territories, Ontario, and Quebec. There are several events planned between January 13 and 16 in Alberta, British Columbia, Manitoba, New Brunswick, Ontario, and Saskatchewan.

Good Morning Lori,

I just noticed this morning that I had the date as 2013-01-23. Not sure how that happened but I will confirm that it should be 2013-01-11 and has already occurred. I apologize for the error.

As for information regarding the 2013-01-16, according to detachment sources at Grand Rapids information suggests that on January 16, 2013 another long term road closure may be initiated. It was not specific to this location.
Information provided to Gypsumville members indicated that the big protest is going to be on Wednesday January 16th, 2013 everywhere all over the country and in Fairford (near Gypsumville).

I have cc'd this email to Sgt. Jim Glavin as he is the INM coordinator for the Division and should any further concrete information surface, it will be provided accordingly.

Don

Good morning Sgt. Arsenault,

My name is Lori Schnittker. I work in Criminal Intelligence in Ottawa, and I have been tasked with preparing a daily situation report for D/Comm Cabana, as well as other members of senior management at NHQ, on the daily events/protests associated with Idle No More. We have received a copy of your BN from NOC, as they are forwarding relevant information to us through the Idle_No_More mailbox which we have created to collect information on protest/events around the country.

In the Background section of the BN, you mentioned two protests. The first, a road closure at PTH#6 near Grand Rapids involving about 12 people, and that it occurred on 2013-01-23 at 17:05 hrs.; the second, a possible protest near Gypsumville on 2013-01-11. There was obviously a typo in regards to the first event, and I would like to confirm if the closure near Grand Rapids was on the 11th of January or the 13th of January.

At the end of your BN under Current Status, it is indicated that information suggests further protests may occur at these locations on Jan 16th. This is information that we did not have previously, and I would like to indicate this in our list of upcoming events as possibly occurring. If you receive information that firms this up, I would appreciate it if you or someone in your area could drop us a line. Please send it to Idle_No_More.

I would appreciate confirmation of the date of the event at Grand Rapids as soon as your are able so that we can include it in our list of upcoming events.

Thanks
Lori

Mike - for your situational awareness. have engaged all of the police services here in Alberta in an email fan-out and distribution process. This is to ensure that we are all aware of any unfolding or serious events with respect to the protests in the province as we could see a ripple effect in other areas. We may witness the same situation here next week in Fort McMurray and Hwy 63 as protestors are threatening to block this busy highway and corridor. Will keep you informed. Marianne

Good Morning Everyone,
This message is being sent on behalf of Supt. Rod McCann (OIC "O" Division CIB).

Good morning. There will not be an "Idle No More" formal situational assessment update today or Sunday. Formal situational assessments and updated calendars will resume on Monday. However information concerning an ongoing event is mentioned below.

Also attached is the updated information from Ottawa region.

"Please share this email with Detachment and Unit Commanders that report to you to ensure complete divisional coverage."

Aboriginal and Ethnic Liaison A Div situational Update

A-Division, National Capital Region * Law Enforcement Only*

2013-01-11, 2010
A Division reports that yesterday's rally in Ottawa was very disorganized. There was a different atmosphere to the group compared to the 2012-12-21 rally. Some of the local aboriginal community members, removed themselves from the rally stating, "too much disrespect and real negative people in this group, this is more like a mob!".
There were more comments similar in nature made during Ceremony.

was making up the agenda as this event unfolded. The last minute change of plans was not intentional, there were no plans!

All day long Assembly of First Nations (AFN), were changing who was attending and who was not attending this evenings event at the GG's.

Rideau Hall staff and GG's Protective Staff were excellent to work with during all the last minute confusion this evening attempting to load the buses for the trip to Rideau Hall.

Chiefs, including Chief Spence have attended the GG's invitation to attend Rideau Hall. End of update.

 There is a great deal of media coverage this morning which is reflecting a schism amongst certain First Nation factions, * chief Spence will continue her hunger strike

O Division CIB and local CIS units continue to monitor the situation

"Idle No More" Planned Protest Activities – Week of 2013-01-14 – 2013-01-18
"J" Division Jurisdictions - 201329573

Elsipogtog First Nation RCMP District 5

2013-01-14: Possible protest activities are being discussed. Rexton (Exit 53) is the site for today if there is a protest. They would be expecting approximately 40-60 protestors. If they go ahead the protest is expected to last 4 days (24hrs). Elsipogtog aboriginals are meeting at 1000hrs today with Chief Council at the Band Hall they will advise law enforcement of their plans.

Woodstock First Nation RCMP District 7

2013-01-16: There is a peaceful blockade scheduled to take place on the Trans-Canada Highway by the Eagles Next near Woodstock. A complete blockage of the highway is not anticipated. There is a meeting planned for tomorrow evening at WFN for the Wednesday's day of action.

Sugarloaf Senior High School, Cambellton NB RCMP District 9

2013-01-14 – 2013-01-18: Information that the First Nation students may be planning to block access to classrooms from within the school in support of The Idle No More protest. A meeting is scheduled this morning to discuss the plans of the students.

Tobique First Nation RCMP District 10

2013-01-16 @ 0900hrs – All Day Event: Protestors will meet at the Tobique Bingo hall at 0900hrs. A pipe ceremony will take place and then the group will travel to the Trans Canada Highway at exit 115. They will be protesting on both the east and west (north/south) lanes. They plan to block one lane each direction and periodically they will likely completely block both sides. There was a request made to Edmundston, Madawaska First Nation, and residents of Perth to join the blockade. Some protestors indicated they want to get more violent but the elders indicate that it is going to remain peaceful.

St Mary's First Nation Fredericton City Police

2013-01-16 @ 0700hrs: There will be a sunrise ceremony @ 0700hrs at the old cemetery on Union Street. Protestors will then be marching across the Westmorland Bridge to the Lt. Governor's residence; they will enter onto the Bridge from the Devonshire on-ramp (Southbound) and march across the Bridge exiting to the St. Anne's Point Drive off ramp toward Woodstock Road and into the Lt. Governor's residence.

Eel Ground First Nation - Red Bank First Nation Miramichi Police Force

2013-01-28: Discussions are taking place regarding an event for Monday, 2013-01-28 as it is being referred to as a World Day of Action by the Idle No More founders. The plan is to organize a flash mob round dance and drumming at the downtown square in Miramichi NB, with no plans to march at this time; however, this may change. They would like to align the time with the same time the high school students get off for their lunch hour and bus them to our location so that they get the opportunity to witness and participate in this kind of activism.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

There is no classified addendum today.

CURRENT

1. Significant Weather – NL: As of 06:00 EST on 12 Jan 2013, official and unofficial snowfall reports indicated widespread 25 to 55 cm snowfall accumulations with higher amounts likely over some areas. High winds gusting between 100 and 120 km/h were be expected for Terra Nova, Clarenville, Avalon Peninsula North and Bonavista Peninsula regions, with further snowfall amounts of 5 to 10 cm. Blizzard conditions over eastern Newfoundland have tapered to light snow and freezing drizzle or rain and drizzle. Freezing drizzle in the onshore flow over northeastern Newfoundland is expected to persist until late in the day when temperatures will eventually rise above the freezing mark. High waves and pounding surf can be expected for the Bonavista and Avalon Peninsula. This will cause higher than normal water levels which could result in minor coastal flooding at high tide this morning. Newfoundland and Labrador Hydro provided an estimated restoration time of the power between 8:30 and 10:30 EST on 12 Jan. At 20:43 EST on 11 Jan, Transport Canada reports that the NOTAM has been extended and the runways at St. John's International Airport will remain closed until 10:30 EST on 12 Jan.

2. First Nation (FN) Protests: A number of FN protests, organized by a group called "Idle No More", have occurred since 19 Dec 2012. To date, these protests have been peaceful in nature; however, some protest activities have resulted in interruptions at ports of entry, on rail services, and delays on highways.

On 11 Jan 2013, a number of FN leaders met with the Prime Minister in Ottawa, ON while several other FN leaders boycotted the meeting due to the lack of attendance of the Governor General. During these talks, approximately 1,000 protesters demonstrated in front of Langevin Block in Ottawa, causing traffic disruptions. On 12 Jan, events are planned in BC, NT and QC.

UPCOMING

Nothing significant to report.

KINGSTON, ONT.—Police in Ontario are investigating after a Sir John A. Macdonald statue was vandalized overnight, saying it may have been politically motivated.
On what would have been the 198th birthday of Canada's first prime minister, the statue in a Kingston park was splattered with red paint and the words "This is stolen land," "murderer" and "colonizer" were sprayed on the statue's base.
Kingston police Const. Steve Koopman says city crews are working to clean the monument and an event at the statue site to mark the former prime minister's 198th birthday will continue as planned.
Koopman says a forensics officer is on the scene gathering evidence and that police intend to speak to nearby residents for information on who attacked the statue.
He says police are not ruling out a possible link with an Idle No More protest occurring in Kingston Friday, but that they currently have no evidence the two are connected.
Koopman says the defacement could be part of an effort to smear the aboriginal movement.
"It would look to be a political statement but at the same time people might be seeking that for political purposes," he said.
"We're going to be cautious as to what the motive is at this point."

Situation Report

Incident Number: ST003-13B

Incident: First Nations Protests – National Day of Action

Date: Information valid as of 14 Jan 2013, 16:00 EST

Description of current incident: As part of the ongoing First Nations (FN) engagement, a number of FN protests are anticipated as part of a "National Day of Action" planned for 16 Jan 2013.

On 16 Jan, several demonstrations are expected in various locations across Canada. Media has reported that the protestors are seeking to cause an "economic slowdown" by organizing blockades at border crossings, railway lines and highways. Marches, demonstrations and other forms of peaceful protest have been scheduled by various organizations under the "Idle No More" banner in order to raise awareness of FN issues.

Source(s) of reporting: Aboriginal Affairs and Northern Development Canada, PS Regional Offices, media/open source reporting.

Current actions:

The GOC continues to monitor the situation closely and has established contact with key federal departments/agencies and PS Regional Offices in order to maintain cohesive information sharing.

A consolidated events matrix is being maintained by the GOC and will be distributed periodically, as information becomes available.

Event management of the protests falls under the purview of local jurisdictions and local law enforcement agencies, as appropriate.

Future actions: The GOC will continue to work with federal and provincial partners to coordinate efforts and to assess impacts.

Assessment/Analysis: The national "Day of Action" planned for 16 Jan is expected to cause interruptions to passenger and freight trains, disruptions to traffic and potential delays at border crossings/ports of entry. Based on past events related to the "Idle No More" movement; demonstrations are expected to remain peaceful.

Departments and Agencies with further information on this incident are asked to report to the GOC.

Additional situation reports: Further situation reports will be issued as more information becomes available.

Additional Products: An events matrix will be attached to a follow-on message.

Numéro d'incident : ST003-13B

Incident : Manifestations des Premières nations – Journée nationale de protestation

Date : Renseignements mis à jour le 14 janvier 2013, à 16 h HNE

Description de l'incident : Dans le cadre de leur engagement en cours, les Premières nations ont organisé de nombreuses manifestations pour la Journée nationale de protestation, le 16 janvier 2013.

Le 16 janvier, diverses manifestations seront tenues dans plusieurs endroits du Canada. Selon les médias, les manifestants veulent causer un « ralentissement économique » en érigeant des barricades à des postes frontaliers, sur des voies ferrées, et des autoroutes. Des marches, des manifestations et d'autres types d'activités pacifiques de protestation ont également été prévues par des organisations du mouvement Idle No More afin de sensibiliser les gens aux enjeux avec lesquels les Premières nations doivent composer.

Mesures en cours :

Le COG continue de suivre la situation de près, et il a communiqué avec les ministères et organismes clés du gouvernement fédéral et avec les bureaux régionaux de SP afin d'assurer le caractère uniforme de l'échange d'information.

Le COG tiendra à jour une matrice complète des incidents qu'il distribuera au besoin, à mesure que de nouveaux renseignements deviennent disponibles.

La gestion de l'incident relève des administrations et des organismes d'application de la loi locaux, selon les besoins.

Mesures à venir : Le COG continuera de collaborer avec ses partenaires fédéraux et provinciaux pour coordonner les efforts et d'évaluer les impacts.

Analyse/évaluation : La journée nationale de protestation prévue pour le 16 janvier devrait entraîner des perturbations quant aux déplacements de trains passagers et de marchandises, des perturbations de la circulation et des retards potentiels aux postes frontaliers et aux points d'entrée. Par contre, si l'on se fie aux activités précédentes qu'a organisées le mouvement Idle No More, les manifestations devraient rester de nature pacifique.

Les ministères et les organismes qui ont plus de renseignements au sujet de cet incident sont priés de communiquer avec le COG.

Autres rapports de situation : D'autres rapports de situation seront diffusés à mesure que d'autres renseignements deviennent disponibles.

Autres produits : Une matrice des incidents sera jointe à un message subséquent.

Rail blockades, marches, highway shutdowns planned for Wednesday

By Jorge Barrera and Kenneth Jackson APTN National News The CP and CN rail lines in Manitoba will be targeted for blockades on Wednesday, says former Roseau River chief Terrance Nelson.

Blockades and marches in several provinces are also planned for the same day.

Nelson said a "small group" of people will be launching the rail blockades and they will wait to "let people react to it."

Nelson said the only way to get Prime Minister Stephen Harper to listen is to force him to negotiate with blockades in place.

"This isn't a round dance, this will have consequences," said Nelson. "It will block everything going east and west."

Nelson wouldn't disclose what locations would be chosen for Wednesday's action. He said the blockades are not being launched under the Idle No More banner.

Idle No More's founders and organizers have distanced themselves from plans to launch blockades in several provinces on Wednesday.

Harper met with Assembly of First Nations National Chief Shawn Atleo and a handful of First Nations leaders Friday. The meeting was hotly opposed by many chiefs who had urged Atleo not to go.

Atleo has since announced he was taking an about week-long leave on doctor's orders. The national chief is suffering from the after-effects of a bout with norovirus, according to the AFN.

Several actions are also planned for Ontario, Saskatchewan and New Brunswick Wednesday.

There are plans to block the Ambassador Bridge which links Windsor, Ont., to Detroit, Mich., for about an hour and a half.

Ron Plain, from Aamjiwnaang First Nation, said the truck traffic will be targeted by the temporary blockade.

"Every effort will be made to minimize the inconvenience to the car traffic of the bridge," said Plain, who was the spokesman for a rail blockade in Sarnia, Ont., which lasted from Dec. 21, 2012, to Jan. 2. "Our focus is on the truck traffic and educating all to the reasons behind Idle No More. This is for all Canadians and their future generations as it is ours."

The planned "Unity Walk" will travel to the border entrance of the Ambassador Bridge, according to a release from the London District Chiefs Council.

"We are uniting our people to send a clear message to the prime minister and the government of Canada that the time has come to implement the treaty promises," said Delaware Nation at Moraviantown Chief Greg Peters, who is also chair of the district chiefs council.

A northern portion of the Trans-Canada Highway near Nipigon, Ont., will also be shut down for about three hours as a result of a march by people from about 30 northern Ontario First Nations.

"Harper is lying, he is not going to follow through with what he said (after the meeting)," said Neskantaga First Nation Chief Peter Moonias. "Harper made that statement to recognize the treaty rights issue because he was under pressure by the public…I kind of feel he is not going to do anything about it like the last time, that is why we have to go continue with the protests until we get solid in writing that this is what is going to happen, this time, when and how."

In Akwesasne, there are also plans to again shut down the Canada-U.S. border crossing.

In New Brunswick plans are in the works to organize a march to the Centennial Bridge in Miramichi and possibly block it.

The Congress of Aboriginal Peoples, which represents the interests of off-reserve status, non-status and Metis people, issued a statement Monday saying letters had been sent to major Canadian police forces, including the RCMP and the Surete du Quebec, urging them to heed the "lessons learned" from the 1995 Ipperwash crisis in Ontario that left Dudley George dead from an OPP bullet.

"The letter points out that if complaints are given to police about threats of violence against peaceful protesters, they have a duty to fully investigate and prosecute offenders," said CAP vice-Chief Ron Swain. "True warriors protect the weak, and I ask our young people to not let frustration lead to unnecessary violence…The prime minister, every provincial premier and our law enforcement officials have an obligation to follow the rule of law. We need to remain calm. In time, I know, that our treaties and Aboriginal rights will be honoured."

Grand Chief Gordon Peters of the Association of Iroquois and Allied Indians told reporters last Friday that economic disruptions were in the works for Wednesday.

"We can't live in poverty anymore while Canadians live this great life," said Peters, whose organization is based in Ontario.

"We'll stop it the only way we can stop it…Stop the roads, stop the rails, stop the transportation of goods."

Onion Lake Cree Nation Chief Wallace Fox said during a chiefs' meeting Thursday night that economic disruptions loomed.

"No longer will the prime minister dictate to us. If we have to shut down this economy, then we will," said Fox, whose community is part of Treaty 6 in Saskatchewan.

Several First Nations chiefs have been discussing plans to launch blockades on Wednesday since at least Dec. 28, 2012.

"January 16 is being touted as a national day of action directed at industry, the economy and the government," according to minutes obtained by APTN National News from a Dec. 28 teleconference meeting between dozens of chiefs.

According to the minutes, blockades were being planned for "major roadways, rail lines."

Railway blockades have already hit in Nova Scotia, Quebec, Ontario and British Columbia.

In 2007, Nelson also called for blockades on a National Day of Action planned for June 29. He called off the rail blockades after he struck a deal with former Aboriginal Affairs Minister Jim Prentice.

Only the Mohawks from Tyendinaga launched any action on that day, blocking Ontario's Hwy 401 and the main CN rail line between Toronto and Montreal.

Nelson has since said he regretted making the deal.

News:

AFN Chief ATLEO is taking a brief "medical leave of absence".
Unknown what effects this may have.

There are calls for both 2013-01-16 and 2013-01-28 to be "National Days Of Action". There have been comments made regarding mass blockades across the country; none specific to K Division.

There continue to be many rumours of blockades on hwy 63; however, no dates or plans to be reported at this time.

All,

today's update. Should you have any information to add please forward same to Jackie Kennedy-Green.

News:

AFN Chief ATLEO is taking a brief "medical leave of absence".
Unknown what effects this may have.

There are calls for both 2013-01-16 and 2013-01-28 to be "National Days Of Action". There have been comments made regarding mass blockades across the country; none specific to K Division.

There continue to be many rumours of blockades on hwy 63; however, no dates or plans to be reported at this time.

Chief SPENCE continues her hunger strike/liquid diet.

Subject: Idle No More co-founder uneasy with Chief Spence - CBC (Saskatchewan 2013-01-14 21:39)

One of the originators of the Idle No More movement says she is concerned with how Attawapiskat Chief Theresa Spence has taken a leadership role in the campaign. "Idle No More is the face of all indigenous people, all grassroots people," Sylvia McAdam said Monday, following a forum with university students in Regina. "It's not just the face of one. We hardly have any communications with Chief Spence."

The Idle No More campaign originated on social media, first on Facebook and later with Twitter, when Sylvia McAdam, Nina Wilson, Sheelah Mclean and Jessica Gordon expressed concern about provisions of Bill C-45, which reduce the number of federally protected waterways. "We're going to get off the couch and we're not going to be idle any more," McAdam said about the nascent idea behind the movement. "And we said, 'Why don't we just call it Idle No More?' And it just stuck."

McAdam also questioned the actions of some First Nations planning blockades at border crossings and rail lines. "I think those portray a message of aggressiveness," McAdam said. "That's not peaceful. "We have to be careful with Idle No More that we don't go into areas where we're saying, 'Save the gophers,'" she added. "There has to be a purpose behind it."
She said she is worried about the movement's core message, about protecting land and water in Canada and promoting indigenous sovereignty.
But even McAdam was not precise when it came to defining sovereignty. "We're still talking about that," she said. "We're still defining it as we go." McAdam was also adamant that neither the Assembly of First Nations, nor individual chiefs, are in charge of the Idle No More movement. "History has shown that when movements like this happen, if leadership takes over it kills the movement," she said.
McAdam said the movement is keen to have a global Idle No More rally near the end of January.

http://www.cbc.ca/news/canada/calgary/story/2013/01/14/calgary-idle-no-more-latest.html
Some Idle No More organizers in Calgary are appealing to their fellow activists to avoid tactics like roadblocks.
It comes after a group of protesters effectively shut down the 14th Street bridge (http://www.cbc.ca/news/canada/calgary/story/2013/01/12/calgary-idle-no-more-saturday.html) on Saturday. Mayor Naheed Nenshi says he recognizes their right to protest, but says participants need to be more respectful.
"You have to be respectful and you have to make sure you're not disrupting people's lives," Nenshi said. "Both from a legal perspective, but also as a longtime activist, that's a bad way to get community support."
Not all of those involved with the Idle No More movement were on board with the idea of shutting down traffic on the bridge.
Chantal Chagnon, an Idle No More organizer, said she was not involved in the 14th Street bridge blockade.
"As soon as the blockade happened, I personally left and I know a lot of other people did," Chagnon said.
She also said organizers need to make sure the movement remains peaceful.
"This is a grassroots movement, but we have to remain peaceful ... one person can really spoil the bunch.... You just have to keep your intentions good," Chagnon said.Wrong direction Michael Smith, a Métis University of Calgary student, says the movement is heading in the wrong direction.
"As the protest goes on, (we're) moving farther from the ability to have constructive dialogue, not only between the prime minister and the First Nation chief at a high level, also between you and me on the street," Smith said.
Chagnon says more demonstrations are planned as protestors continue to call for the repeal of omnibus Bill C-45, which they say erodes the rights of aboriginal people.
Calgary police are still determining what, if any, charges will be laid against the protesters behind the 14th Street blockade on Saturday. Those charges could range from a city bylaw violation, traffic violation or a charge under the Criminal Code.

Press Release from Idle No More founders:

IDLE NO MORE Press Release: January 10, 2013 for immediate release

Idle No More grassroots founders and organizers from across Canada, in solidarity with Common Causes—a new initiative bringing together social justice, environmental, labour and other activist groups—are planning a national and worldwide day of action on January 28th, 2013. This day of action will peacefully protest attacks on democracy, Indigenous sovereignty, human rights and environmental protections when Canadian MPs return to the House of Commons on January 28th. As a grassroots movement, clearly no political organization speaks for INM. This movement is of the people for the people.
The vision of INM revolves around Indigenous ways of knowing rooted in Indigenous sovereignty to protect water, air, land and all creation for future generations. The Conservative government bills beginning with Bill C-45 threaten Treaties and this Indigenous vision of sovereignty. The goal of the movement is education and to revitalize Indigenous peoples through awareness and empowerment. INM has successfully encouraged knowledge sharing of Indigenous sovereignty and environmental protections. This message has been heard around the world and the world is watching how Canada responds to the message sent by many INM supporters. INM urges the government of Canada to repeal all legislation which violates Treaties, Indigenous sovereignty and subsequently environmental protections of land and water. INM is grateful to many leaders who have supported this vision and the movement of the grassroots people. “The Treaties are the last line of defense to protect water and lands from destruction,” stated Oren Lyons, Faithkeeper Turtle Clan, Onondaga Nation Council of Chiefs.

Kingsclear First Nation RCMP District 2

2013-01-16: Some information indicates that a protest will be taking place on Route 102/Chapel Road during the morning. It is unknown if they intend on blocking the road or if protestors will stay on the side of the road as they have been doing in previous protests. Other information indicates that members from Kingsclear First Nation will be joining the protestors from St. Mary's First Nation in Fredericton.
(Updated: 2013-01-14 @1649hrs and 2013-01-15@1321hrs)

St Mary's First Nation Fredericton City Police

2013-01-16 @ 0700hrs: There will be a sunrise ceremony @ 0700hrs at St. Mary's First Nation Powwow Grounds/Old Reserve on Union Street. At 1030hrs, protestors will gather and march across the Westmorland Bridge and exit to the Lt. Governor's residence. They may be marching to the legislature from there.
(Updated: 2013-01-15 @0950hrs and 2013-01-15 @1303hrs)

Elsipogtog First Nation RCMP District 5

2013-01-15 @ 1430hrs: was on a hunger strike in Ottawa with Chief Theresa Spence. Moncton airport today at 1430hrs where there will be a flash mob of native dancing and drumming to welcome him home. It will be a peaceful event.
(Updated: 2013-01-15 @0935hrs)

2013-01-16 @ 1000hrs-1600hrs: There will be a peaceful protest on Highway 11 at the Exit 53 (Rexton). They plan to slow down traffic and hand out pamphlets. There is no plan to block the highway.
(Updated: 2013-01-15 @0935hrs)

Elsipogtog, Red Bank, Eel Ground, Burnt Church, and Pabineau First Nations Miramichi Police Force

2013-01-16 @ 1200hrs: Members from various First Nations communities will gather between 1100hrs-1200hrs for a march across the Centennial Bridge in Miramichi. They are expecting a lot of protestors from various First Nations. One lane of traffic will be open at all times. They will probably start from the north side of the bridge, walk across, and return. They will be marching to Tilly Gordon's office.
(Updated: 2013-01-15 @1303hrs)

Eel Ground First Nation - Red Bank First Nation Miramichi Police Force

2013-01-28: Discussions are taking place regarding an event for Monday, 2013-01-28 as it is being referred to as a World Day of Action by the Idle No More founders. The plan is to organize a flash mob round dance and drumming at the downtown square in Miramichi NB, with no plans to march at this time; however, this may change. They would like to align the time with the same time the high school students get off for their lunch hour and bus them to our location so that they get the opportunity to witness and participate in this kind of activism.
(Updated: 2013-01-14 @1135hrs)

Woodstock First Nation RCMP District 7

2013-01-16: There is a peaceful blockade scheduled to take place on the Trans-Canada Highway by the Eagles Next near Woodstock. A complete blockage of the highway is not anticipated.

Sugarloaf Senior High School, Campbellton NB RCMP District 9

2013-01-16 @ 1200hrs: Sugarloaf Senior High School students are having a peaceful protest at the intersection near the Tim Horton's in Campbellton.

(Updated: 2013-01-15 @0950hrs)

Eel River Bar First Nation RCMP District 9

2013-01-16: The planned road block has been suspended as nobody attended the meeting yesterday.

Tobique First Nation RCMP District 10

2013-01-16 @ 0900hrs – All Day Event: Protestors will meet at the Tobique Bingo Hall at 0900hrs. A pipe ceremony will take place and then the group will travel to the Trans Canada Highway at exit 115 at approximately 1100hrs. They will be protesting on both the east and west (north/south) lanes. They plan to block one lane each direction and periodically they will likely completely block both sides. There was an invitation sent out for members of other First Nations to join them. Some protestors indicated they want to get more violent but the elders indicate that it is going to remain peaceful.

(Updated: 2013-01-14 @1340hrs, 2013-01-15 @0950hrs, and 2013-01-15 @1303hrs)

Moncton, NB Codiac RCMP

2013-01-16 @ 1200hrs: Protestors will meet in the Sobeys area of the Mall parking lot. They intend on marching through the lot to the highway past the Traffic circle on Wheeler Blvd where we will set up a peaceful blockade, Slowing of traffic and providing information handouts to traffic.

ISSUE: Status update regarding BC 'Idle No More' public awareness campaign in British Columbia. (File EDIV 2013-083)

BACKGROUND:

$ The 'Idle No More' (INM) movement continues to hold peaceful and brief public awareness demonstrations regarding First Nations relations with the Government of Canada, as well as in solidarity with Attawapiskat Chief Spence who has held a hunger strike since December 11, 2012.

$ Demonstrations have been held at shopping malls, First Nations and government buildings, roads and highways, and international border crossings. To date, all demonstrations have been peaceful with varying attendance.

$ Prime Minister Harper met with approximately 20 First Nations leaders on Friday, January 11th, 2013. A 'ceremonial meeting' with Governor General David Johnston followed.

$ An 'Idle No More' National Day of Action was organized to coincide with the January 11th meeting. Approximately 35 'Idle No More' demonstrations occurred in BC.

CURRENT STATUS:

$ "National Day of Action" on January 16, 2013 advocating to "disrupt the Canadian economy."

$ Upcoming 72 hours of Idle No More events (refer to attached timeline):

- $ January 16 – Saanich: Pat Bay Highway
- $ January 17 – Chilliwack: University of the Fraser Valley (educational forum)

$ This information has been shared with local detachments and public safety agencies

$ Further information will be shared to impacted jurisdictions through District Command.

STRATEGIC CONSIDERATIONS:

$ Several INM demonstrations continue to be organized and show no signs of abating.

$ "National Day of Action" including social justice, environmental, labour and other activists groups on January 28, 2013. To date, there are no events scheduled in BC.

$ Major Highways, Bridges, Railway Routes, Marine Ports/Ferry Terminals, Airports and

$ ECROPS and E Division APS continue to work with partners to collate and disseminate information and develop an operational plan in the event of a major, long-term demonstration or any province-wide paralysis of transportation systems and/or infrastructure.

PUBLIC SAFETY PROTOCOLS:

$ None to report at this time.

Karen,

Thanks for the updates. They are greatly appreciated. I'm currently reviewing the update that you sent this afternoon for the week of Jan 14-18. Could you please confirm that the event scheduled for the 16th at Woodstock FN is going ahead. Our previous information indicated that this event was on hold until the outcome of the meeting at the National level, which I assumed meant the meeting on Jan 11 with the PM.

Thanks

Situation Report

Incident Number: ST003-13C

Incident: First Nations Protests – National Day of Action

Date: Information valid as of 15 Jan 2013, 12:30 EST

Description of current incident: As part of the ongoing First Nations (FN) engagement, a number of FN protests are anticipated as part of a "National Day of Action" planned for 16 Jan 2013.

At this time, partners have identified one protest that is likely to have an impact. On 16 Jan 2013, protesters plan to slow down traffic at the primary entrance to the Ambassador Bridge, connecting Windsor ON with Detroit MI (USA), for approximately one hour between 12:00 EST and 13:00 EST.

In addition, there is potential for other protests across the country. Please refer to attached matrix for a list of known events by province.

Marches and demonstrations are expected to remain peaceful.

Source(s) of reporting: Aboriginal Affairs and Northern Development Canada, PS Regional Offices, Canada Border Services Agency, media/open source reporting.

Current actions:

The GOC continues to monitor and analyze the situation closely and has established contact with key federal departments/agencies and PS Regional Offices in order to maintain cohesive information sharing and to identify potential impacts.

A consolidated events matrix is being maintained by the GOC and will be distributed periodically, as information becomes available.

Event management of the protests falls under the purview of local jurisdictions and local law enforcement agencies, as appropriate.

Future actions: The GOC will continue to work with federal and provincial partners to coordinate efforts and to assess impacts.

Assessment/Analysis: The national "Day of Action" planned for 16 Jan is expected to cause interruptions to passenger and freight trains, disruptions to traffic and potential delays at border crossings/ports of entry. Based on past events related to the "Idle No More" movement; demonstrations are expected to remain peaceful.

Departments and Agencies with further information on this incident are asked to report to the GOC.

Additional situation reports: Further situation reports will be issued as more information becomes available.

Additional Products: An events matrix and geomatics product will be attached to a follow-on message.

Akwesasne Leadership: Bridge will remain open to respect Mid-Winter Ceremonies

TERRITORY OF AKWESASNE—A leadership meeting took place on Monday, January 14th between Saint Regis Mohawk Tribal Council, Mohawk Nation Council of Chiefs, and Mohawk Council of Akwesasne to discuss the following items:

- Concerns raised by community members regarding the International Bridge Crossing

- Update on events in Ottawa last week regarding meetings between Prime Minister and First Nation Chiefs.

- Announcement of Mid-Winter Ceremonies

It was acknowledged that any community events planned for this Wednesday, Jan. 16, would not include closure of the Three Nations Bridge. This is due in part to the planned Mid-Winter Ceremonies, being held at the Mohawk Nation Longhouse beginning on January 16 through January 23rd. Mid-Winter ceremonies are a spiritual, cultural practice held since time immemorial over seven days of ceremonies. It is a time for the community to come together and acknowledge that a new cycle of life has begun. This is also a time for medicine renewal, newborns to be named, and for sacred songs and dances to be performed acknowledging the cycle of life.

Other concerns raised by community members referred to students in school on both sides of the border who are currently writing exams. Additionally, ample time was not given to the planning of a peaceful demonstration that may have resulted in a bridge closure and therefore residents of Kawehno:ke were not properly consulted.

The leadership of Akwesasne also decided Jan. 14 that it is best to keep the bridge open at this time while discussion continues between national First Nations leadership and the Prime Minister's office as well as to support planned community events.

Prime Minister Harper has requested the next few weeks to properly respond to proposals brought forth by First Nations Chiefs and which have been identified as an 8-point Plan of priority at a meeting Jan. 11. The Prime Minister has agreed to consider the implementation of treaties as a top priority.

Akwesasne has identified three points in particular that are issues for our community. The first is for the full implementation of the Jay Treaty rights for the protection of border crossing rights.

The second is for a faster and smoother land claim resolution process to be implemented by the federal government. Commitment to an immediate high level working process with First Nation leadership for establishing framework, with necessary mandates, is necessary for the fair implementation and enforcement of treaties on a treaty-by-treaty basis.

The third issue is in regard to First Nations education. A commitment of additional funding for schools on First Nations territories is imperative to allow for proper cultural curriculum including language and history. It is also priority for First Nations to maintain control over their schools and curriculum.

These three points are priorities for Akwesasne and we are anxious to see how Canada will respond. Akwesasne leadership would like to acknowledge the grassroots Idle No More movement for their help in calling for action on these priority issues. It is time for leadership to work together and challenge the Canadian government to take immediate action on these points.

BILL C-45 IDLE NO MORE PROTESTS/DEMONSTRATIONS – MANITOBA
UPDATED 2013-01-15
LAST B/N 2013-01-11

ISSUE:

* First Nation communities have engaged in peaceful protests/demonstrations in Manitoba with plans for similar protests to occur in response to Bill C-45. A National Day of Action was called for on Wednesday, January 16, 2013.

CURRENT STATUS:

* D Division has noted protests in the planning phase for various locations throughout Manitoba for January 16th 2013. The gathering and dissemination of intelligence relating to these events continues to be coordinated by the D Division Emergency Preparedness office (PROS file 2012-1601206)

* RCMP continues to liaise with Winnipeg City Police in relation to protest planned in the City of Winnipeg.

* A protest matrix is being maintained to track all protests in Manitoba (see appendix to B/N).

* D Division members continue to establish direct communication with the protest organizers as well as local and provincial leaders at the earliest opportunity.

* D Division Emergency Operation Plans have been reviewed and the DEOC has been readied for activation if required.

* The Division response to planned or sudden protests tomorrow will be monitored by the DEOC and District Officers and resources will be deployed as required pending on site risk assessment.

* Sgt. Jim Glavin has been identified as the point of contact should any Division require information regarding the D Division planning/response. Sgt. Glavin can be contacted at (204)983-3182 or (204)229-0573.

Wednesday 2013-01-16,
New information was learned this morning that late last night a Northern Ontario Reserve from the Moose Factory Ontario area arrived in Ottawa to show support for Chief Spence and her hunger strike. The visitors were under the impression that there was to be a march on Wednesday 2013-01-16, (today) from Victoria Island to Parliament Hill. There are NO known permits for any such march. This being said there is a high probability that this visiting community may in fact march up to Parliament Hill this date, given the fact that they drove some 15 hours to get here for a march.
No knowledge of approximate numbers or times.

Possible "Round Dance" (social dance) slatted for today 2013-01-16, for approximately 1130 hrs, with drumming starting outside then at noon going into the World Exchange Plaza at 1200. (B/R)

Bonjour,
Il y aura une manifestation du mouvement Idle no More à Kanesatake (aujourd'hui) mercredi le 16 janvier à partir de 11h. Nous l'avons appris hier soir. Nous avons peu d'informations pour l'instant, sinon que le groupe se rassemble 10h30 dans la pinède, à 11h l'événement commence, qu'il y aura possiblement une marche, et que les organisateurs souhaitent que le tout dure jusqu'à 16h. l'organisation de la marche du 22 décembre, qui s'était bien déroulée.
Nous tenterons d'en savoir plus au cours des prochaines heures.

Cornwall border to stay open during National Day of Action: MCA AKWESASNE, Ontario

1/15/2013

Cornwall's border is expected to stay open tomorrow despite a National Day of Action by Canada's First Nations people. The demonstrations could lead to blockades and protests nationwide. However, the Mohawk Council of Akwesasne says the Seaway International Bridge will remain open. The First Nations group said in a release that it will keep the bridge open as they wait for the outcome of discussions between national First Nations leadership and the Prime Minister. Tomorrow's nation-wide demonstration was sparked by some aboriginal leaders who were frustrated that Gov. Gen. David Johnston was not at January 16th meeting between First Nations leadership and the Prime Minister.

Akwesasne will also be starting its mid-winter ceremonies tomorrow

Subject: National Response for January 16, 2013 - Day of Action/Réponse nationale pour la journée d'action - le 16 janvier, 2013

As we approach January 16, 2013, Deputy Commissioner Lang has asked that all Divisions pro-actively notify CAP through the "Idle No More" email account, (Idle_no_more@rcmp-grc.gc.ca) of incidents/protests/events as they develop or become known.

For more formal dissemination, continue to send your normal briefing notes to NOC in the usual fashion as per national policy OM 46.1 - http://infoweb.rcmp-grc.gc.ca/rcmpmanuals/eng/om/46/om46-1/om46-1.htm.

Additionally, for emerging events or actions that may draw significant or national attention, Deputy Commissioner Lang requests you report it in a timely fashion as an emerging event in a less formal fashion. Please send via email to Insp. Mike Lesage, Michael.LeSage@rcmp-grc.gc.ca for timely, national situational awareness.

If you have any questions, please fell free to contact Insp. Mike Lesage at 613-843-6757.

Étant donné que nous approchons le 16 janvier. 2013, le Sous-commissaire Lang demande que toutes les divisions informent de façon proactive le SPCA en leurs rapportant tous incidents / manifestations / événements au fur et à mesure qu'ils apparaissent ou qu'ils deviennent connus. Acheminez vos courriels à Idle_no_more@rcmp-grc.gc.ca

Veuillez continuer à envoyer vos notes d'information à la CNO de façon habituelle afin d'obtenir une diffusion plus formelle selon la politique nationale MO 46.1 http://infoweb.rcmp-grc.gc.ca/rcmpmanuals/fre/om/46/om46-1

En plus, pour les événements émergents ou actions qui pourraient attirer l'attention nationale ou importante, le Sous-commissaire Lang vous demande de signaler ceux-ci de façon informelle dans les plus brefs délais. Veuillez envoyer toutes informations reliées aux événements émergents par courrier électronique à l'attention de l'inspecteur. Mike Lesage, (Michael.LeSage @ rcmp-grc.gc.ca). Ceci nous aidera à maintenir une connaissance de la situation en cours.

Si vous avez des questions, n'hésitez pas à communiquer avec l'inspecteur. Mike Lesage au 613-843-6757.

Subject: Possible C.N. Rail Blockade Gitwangak/Kitwanga.

ISSUE:

there may be a blockade at the C.N. Rail Line at Kitwanga on 2013-01-16. This expected blockade is part of the Idle No More movement.

Kitwanga is approximately 45 kms west of New Hazelton where Highway 16 meets with Highway 37. In the New Hazelton area separate from seven elected Chief and Councils, there are 60 to 80 different Hereditary Chiefs depending on the assessing source.

BACKGROUND:

informed Sgt. PELLEY that the blockade in Kitwanga is to be between 1000 hours and 1800 hours where "fork lifts" will be placed on the tracks.

-It is unknown how many people are expected for the blockade.

believed to be a part of the Idle No More movement.

Strategic Considerations:

-Additional Briefing Notes forthcoming as intelligence develops as it is currently unknown if this blockade is going to occur.

Strategic Communications:

None at this time.

District Management Team Comments:

District is monitoring the situation
Detachment will be patrolling the area this evening and into the night to determine if there is any activity.
Detachment members will attend with CN police in the AM to further assess the situation.

Update 2013-01-15, 1410 hrs.

Monday 2013-01-14,
A Division reports that the majority of volunteers and peace keepers have returned to their own provinces to commence school or return to work, they were all tired and hoped all would end soon in a positive note.

Tuesday 2013-01-15,

There is much dissension amongst Chief Spence's camp, Chiefs and volunteers. Many think Chief Spence should end her hunger strike now, due to all the negative feelings, moods that are beginning to surface. It WAS believed that her administrative people may be working on a positive exit strategy to end her hunger strike at this time. However, NEW information has been learned that she is now planning to continue her hunger strike (liquid diet) until she obtains International recognition.

Subject: Update from Windsor Re Protest Activity- Injunction preventing Bridge Blockade

Good Evening Everyone,
This message is being sent on behalf of Supt. Rod McCann (OIC "O" Division CIB).

Please share this email with Detachment and Unit Commanders that report to you to ensure complete divisional coverage."

The Bridge Company has served the Protest Group with an Injunction that forbids them from blocking access to the Bridge.

The Bridge Authority will allow the protesters to move into a Parking area on Bridge property to do their ceremonies and speeches.

Information from PLT is that Chief Peters is satisfied with this change and will abide by the injunction.

All this being said the blocking of access was a big part of the demonstration and we don't know how some of the crowd coming will react to this. Sometimes injunctions raise the tempers.

The next point is Chief Peters has estimated the Crowd he is expecting could reach 1000.

As we know numbers are generally exaggerated by the group protesting. But we should be ready for larger numbers than we were expecting.

Apologies if you have received this twice

Idle No More – Highway 2 Blockade
Edmonton, Alberta
2013-01-16

ISSUE:
On 2013-01-16 from 1300-1500 hours, supporters of the Idle No More movement enacted a full and later partial blockade of the northbound lanes of the Queen Elizabeth II Highway near Gateway Park in Edmonton, Alberta.

CURRENT STATUS:

Approximately 100 people participated in this demonstration.

The blockade occurred within the Edmonton city limits (Edmonton Police Service jurisdiction) but very near the border of Leduc RCMP Detachment.

A coordinated response to this blockade was undertaken with the Edmonton Police Service assuming command.

"K" Division CROPS, Central Alberta District Management, Leduc, Devon, Beaumont detachments, "K" Division Integrated Traffic Services, and Alberta Department of Transportation were all engaged with response plans in place.

Traffic was diverted intermittently at various locations in response to the initial full blockade.

STRATEGIC CONSIDERATIONS:

Primary access to the Edmonton International Airport is south of the blockade and was not significantly affected by backlogged or diverted traffic.

STRATEGIC COMMUNICATIONS:
Edmonton Police Service assumed responsibility for protester media communications.

"K" Division Strategic Communications Unit members were engaged and assisted with media releases pertaining to traffic disruption.

RECOMMENDATIONS/STRATEGIC ADVICE:
Ongoing communications with Senior Edmonton Police Service and on site RCMP command.

A review with the Edmonton Police Service will be undertaken to determine best practices in the event of future similar occurrences.

BRIEFING NOTE TO — NOTE D=INFORMATION

Criminal Operations D Division

PURPOSE: To advise the Officer in Charge of "D" Division Criminal Operations and District Commander Manitoba West District of updates to Idle No More demonstrations in the area.

ISSUE: Idle No More - Day of Protest
Demonstration – Portage La Prairie – Central Plains Area.

BACKGROUND: On January 14th, 2013 the Portage la Prairie RCMP received information that a railway blockade was being planned to block east and west bound rail line traffic in conjunction with the "Idle No More" movement. This demonstration is being scheduled to take place Wednesday, January 16th, 2013

CURRENT STATUS: The Central Plains Area has just completed a briefing reviewing the OPS plan for the potential railway blockade today.

- CN policy is to seek an injunction where a railway is blocked.
- A number of media vehicles are staged at Hwy #1 and Hwy #16.
- Intel suggests that protestors are prepared to be arrested and more will replace them.
- Potential indictable charges include Mischief, Intimidation (obstruct roadway), and Trespass under the federal Railway Safety Act (section 26.1) Actual wording is enter on land on which a line work is situated (Dual).
- Protestors just arrived on site at approximately 11:30 and CN police have initiated contact as a train is coming.

STRATEGIC CONSIDERATIONS: 1) Oi/c Portage Det enroute and will begin negotiations with the leaders/protest groups

Executive Summary

The blockade of traffic through the Ambassador Bridge in Windsor, ON by First Nations protesters, while peaceful, is causing significant delays to outbound traffic. Other road and rail blockades, including blockades of the CN and CP rail lines in Portage la Prairie, MB and by the Tyendinaga First Nation in Southern Ontario are also expected to cause delays.

As part of "National Day of Action", there are a number of other rail and road blockades and slowdowns, in addition to other protests across the country. All are expected to remain peaceful.

Please find attached ST003-13D – First Nations Protests – National Day of Action and corresponding Events Matrix and Geomatics product. Information valid as of 16 Jan 2013, 12:30 EST. For your convenience, new information has been bolded.

Jim;

Attached BN refers. Portage Det advises that Protestors are now gathering at both CN and CP rail sites west of Portage . They have indicated that their intentions are to block the railways but will not interrupt with vehicle traffic and will remain peaceful. Representatives from Portage Det and CN Rail are in contact with the various leaders/demonstrators at both sites. Media is present.

Situation Report

Incident Number: ST003-13D

Incident: First Nations Protests – National Day of Action

Date: Information valid as of 16 Jan 2013, 12:30 EST

Description of current incident: As of 12:30 EST, 16 Jan 2013, a number of peaceful FN protests are underway across the country as part of the "National Day of Action".

As of 12:30 EST, 16 Jan 2013, a peaceful protest is underway at the main entrance of the Ambassador Bridge (Windsor ON), blocking the main truck artery onto the bridge and causing delays to outbound traffic. As of 12:30 EST, border queues extend to approximately 3 km. The protest is scheduled to last until 14:00 EST, at which time protesters are expected to disperse.

Other ports of entry potentially affected by protests, at least temporarily, on 16 Jan 2013 include the Sault Ste. Marie International Bridge and the Three Nations Crossing Bridge in Cornwall ON.

Other road and rail blockades also have the potential to impact Critical Infrastructure. Protesters in Portage la Prairie plan to blockade CN and CP railway lines, as well as the Trans-Canada Highway. Moreover, media is also reporting that protesters from Tyendinaga FN are also planning to shut down CN and CP railway lines at 13:00 EST.

There are a number of other rail and road blockades and slowdowns, in addition to other protests across the country. All are expected to remain peaceful.

Please refer to attached matrix for a list of known protest events by province.

Source(s) of reporting: Aboriginal Affairs and Northern Development Canada, PS Regional Offices, Canada Border Services Agency, Transport Canada, media/open source reporting.

Current actions:

The GOC continues to monitor and analyze the situation and has established contact with key federal departments/agencies and PS Regional Offices in order to maintain cohesive information sharing and to identify potential impacts.

A consolidated events matrix is being maintained by the GOC and will be distributed periodically, as information becomes available.

Event management of the protests falls under the purview of local jurisdictions and local law enforcement agencies, as appropriate.

Future actions: The GOC will continue to work with federal and provincial partners to coordinate efforts and to assess impacts.

Assessment/Analysis: The ongoing impacts are likely to include interruptions to passenger and freight trains, disruptions to road traffic and potential delays at border crossings/ports of entry. The severity of these impacts will be determined primarily by the duration of the planned road, rail and border blockades, particularly those of CN and CP main lines, which at the moment have an indefinite end time. Based on past events and recent FN protests; demonstrations are expected to remain peaceful.

Departments and Agencies with further information on this incident are asked to report to the GOC.

Additional situation reports: Further situation reports will be issued as more information becomes available.

Additional Products: An events matrix and geomatics product will be attached to this message.

Situation Report

Incident Number: ST003-13E

Incident: First Nations Protests – National Day of Action

Date: Information valid as of 16 Jan 2013, 18:30 EST

Description of current incident: On 16 Jan 2013, a number of peaceful FN protests took place across the country as part of the "National Day of Action".

In Manitoba, at approximately 13:00 EST, protesters in Portage la Prairie established two blockades on CN and CP railway lines. The blockade of the CN rail lines, by approximately 20 protesters, has resulted in the stoppage freight traffic, causing the back-up of train traffic throughout Manitoba. CN has obtained a court injunction against the blockade and has ordered protesters to leave. As of 18:30 EST, protesters remain on-site. The blockade of the CP rail line, by approximately 6 protesters, lasted less than an hour and ended with minimal disruptions to rail traffic.

In Ontario, at approximately 14:00 EST, several protesters from Tyendinaga FN established blockades on the main CP and CP railway lines east of Belleville ON, including the CN line used by VIA Rail. These blockades have resulted in delays to freight and passenger train traffic. VIA Rail estimates that the blockades will affect between 10 to 20 trains travelling between Toronto-Montréal and Toronto-Ottawa. VIA Rail has begun making alternate arrangements for its passengers. As of 18:30 EST, the blockades remain in effect.

Beginning at approximately 11:00 EST, a peaceful protest at the main entrance of the Ambassador Bridge (Windsor) took place. The protest, which ended at approximately 14:00 EST, blocked the main truck artery onto the bridge, causing delays of approximately 2 hours to outbound traffic. United States-bound traffic at the Rainbow Bridge in Niagara Falls, ON was also momentarily blocked as protesters performed a ceremonial Round Dance in front of the bridge's entrance.

In British Columbia, at approximately 15:30 EST, approximately 45 FN protesters have blocked the CN main rail line by Kitwanga, between Prince George and Prince Rupert. As of 18:30 EST, the blockade remains active and has resulted in the delay of one VIA Rail train.

A number of other blockades and slowdowns, in addition to other protests, took place across the country without incident and with minimal impacts.

Source(s) of reporting: Aboriginal Affairs and Northern Development Canada, PS Regional Offices, Canada Border Services Agency, Transport Canada, media/open source reporting.

Current actions:

The GOC continues to monitor and analyze the situation and has established contact with key federal departments/agencies and PS Regional Offices in order to maintain cohesive information sharing and to identify potential impacts.

A consolidated events matrix is being maintained by the GOC and will be distributed periodically, as information becomes available.

Event management of the protests falls under the purview of local jurisdictions and local law enforcement agencies, as appropriate.

Future actions: The GOC will continue to work with federal and provincial partners to coordinate efforts and to assess impacts.

Assessment/Analysis: Ongoing rail blockades, particularly those in Ontario and, Manitoba are affecting economically important rail corridors and, if they continue for prolonged periods, have the potential to result in significant economic losses.

Thus far, impacts from other protests have included interruptions to passenger and freight trains, disruptions to road traffic, and delays at border crossings/ports of entry, including significant delays at the Ambassador Bridge, Canada's busiest border crossing. To date, all protests have been peaceful.

Departments and Agencies with further information on this incident are asked to report to the GOC.

Additional situation reports: Further situation reports will be issued as more information becomes available.

Additional Products: A geomatics product will be attached to this message.

Subject: ADVANCE MESSAGE 201362308 IDLE NO MORE PROTEST

Good evening everybody. I am forwarding an advance message regarding an IDLE NO MORE protest that occurred here in Grand Falls-Windsor this afternoon. The protest was not problematic and has ended. However it was felt that it would be best to forward an advance message as similar IDLE NO MORE events are planned elsewhere.
Staff Sgt. Freeborn, Sgt. Jullien and Sgt. Tiller have also been included in this message due to similar events that may be occurring in their areas of responsibility.
Chad.

1) File # 201362308
2) IDLE NO MORE protest

4) At approximately 5:30 P.M. this date, a group of natives were conducting a protest inside the mall. asked the group to leave the premises as they had been banging drums and shaking tambourines inside the mall. Cst. Jeff Green attended the scene and was then joined by Grand Falls-Windsor District Operations NCO, Sgt. Rus Thibault. Cpl. Norman then attended. Shortly after Cpl. Norman's arrival, (total of 6-7 individuals in the group). this event was not a protest as such but part of the IDLE NO MORE movement. they were trying to fight (Prime Minister) Harper and that they were concerned over environmental degradation. a drastic decline in the number of protected lakes in Canada and a proposed clear cutting of much of the island of Newfoundland as examples of this trend. that this was not a native event however he did indicate that the media was making it look as if IDLE NO MORE was a native movement. Members discussed the situation for about 20 minutes and received no indication of any intentions of violence or public disruption. they were actually preparing to depart the scene to get a meal before returning to Conne River.
there are a number of other IDLE NO MORE events occurring in the near future. The largest that referred to was in Ottawa. it as a " mega " event there would be another similar event in Gander on the 28th (of this month) also.
Members departed the scene after speaking with mall security and confirming that there were no criminal offences being reported. No further complaints were received during the remainder of the night in relation to this protest.
5) Staff / Sgt. Brushett was advised of the situation. Sgt. Thibault and Cpl. Norman were also on scene.
6) Investigators: Cst. Jeff Green and Cpl. Chad Norman
7) There is no intention to communicate with the media in this matter.

Executive Summary

Ongoing rail blockades by First Nations protesters near Belleville, ON, Portage la Prairie, MB, and Kitwanga, BC continue to cause delays to freight and passenger rail traffic.

Earlier in the day, the temporary and peaceful blockade of traffic through the Ambassador Bridge in Windsor, resulted in significant delays to United States-bound traffic.

A number of other blockades and slowdowns, in addition to other protests associated with the "National Day of Action", took place across the country, without incident and with minimal impacts.

Please find attached ST003-13E – First Nations Protests – National Day of Action and corresponding Geomatics product. Information valid as of 16 Jan 2013, 18:30 EST. For your convenience, new information has been bolded.

Tim: At this time - there are about fifty First Nation protesters at the Capital Power Sandusk location (Nanicoke, Ontario).

You may already know but the HDI are tagging alone (my term: "using") the INM movement to influence their position with Capital Power and their windmill generation farm. The HDI have served Capital Power on January 14th with a Cease and Desist order no doubt due to Capital Power having refused HDI's monetary demands on the windmill project.

Attached is the most up to date D Division matrix for this event. Attachment is in PDF and Office format. Pros file 2012-1601206.

There were many events throughout the RCMP jurisdiction this date as matrix noted and only one in the City of Winnipeg. All protest action has been peaceful to date. The only incident that remains active is the Portage La Prairie blockade which concentrated on the CN railway throughout most of the day. A small amount of protesters remain and situation is being monitored.

Thank You.

At approx. 17:00 hrs this date the Idle No More Protest took place as planned in Iqaluit. Approx. 25 - 30 protesters formed up at the 4 corners. S/Sgt LeComte expressed his expectations were for a peaceful walk advised that this would be the way it was. LeComte also advised her that one PC would lead, and one would follow and that By-law was going to block intersections so that no one was hurt or injured. very thankful for this approach. At 17:10 protesters stepped onto the street where traffic was disrupted for approx. 2 - 3 minutes before the march started. The march went past North mart and around ring road and lasted approx. 30 minutes and at the finish there was approx. 20 people left as they had been dropping out throughout the march.

All in all an uneventful event.

I expressed thanks to the By-law members in attendance on behalf of the RCMP.

ISSUE: Status update regarding BC 'Idle No More' public awareness campaign in British Columbia. (File EDIV 2013-083)

BACKGROUND:

$ The 'Idle No More' (INM) movement continues to hold peaceful and brief public awareness demonstrations regarding First Nations relations with the Government of Canada, as well as in solidarity with Attawapiskat Chief Spence who has held a hunger strike since December 11, 2012.

$ Demonstrations have been held at shopping malls, First Nations and government buildings, roads and highways, and international border crossings. To date, all demonstrations have been peaceful with varying attendance.

$ Prime Minister Harper met with approximately 20 First Nations leaders on Friday, January 11th, 2013. An 'Idle No More' National Day of Action was organized to coincide with the meeting. Approximately 35 'Idle No More' demonstrations occurred in BC.

- Another "National Day of Action" was organized on January 16th, 2013 advocating to "disrupt the Canadian economy."

CURRENT STATUS:

$ January 16th "National Day of Action" included
  $ New Hazelton: Blockade of CN/CP rail tracks – ongoing
  $ Saanich: Blockade of Pat Bay Highway – concluded without incident
  $ Vancouver: Rally at Sheraton Wall Center – ongoing

$ Upcoming 'Idle No More' events (refer to attached timeline):

  $ January 17 – Chilliwack: University of the Fraser Valley (educational forum)
  $ January 17 – Port Alberni: Island Community College (unconfirmed)
  $ January 17-24 – Vancouver: CTV Studios (coincide with main news hour)
  $ January 19 – Vancouver: Rogers Arena (first Canucks game)
  $ January 19 – Langley: Willowbrook Mall
  $ January 19 – Victoria: Mayfair Mall
  $ January 19 – Squamish: Highway 99
  $ January 19 – Port Alberni: Pacific Rim Highway
  $ January 19 – Campbell River: Discovery Harbour Mall
  $ January 20 – Surrey: Surrey Centre Mall
  $ January 22 – Vancouver: Intersection of Georgia & Granville St.

- On January 24, 2013, BC First Nations Chiefs are meeting in Vancouver in relation to the 'Idle No More' movement. Grand Chief Stewart Philip (UBCIC) and Grand Chief Ed John (First Nations Summit Group) are anticipated to attend. This information has not been independently corroborated.

- $ "National Day of Action" on January 28, 2013 to coincide with the re-opening of Parliament. This 'Day of Action' includes social justice, environmental, labour and other activists groups. To date, there are no events scheduled in BC.

- $ This information has been shared with local detachments and public safety agencies including, Vancouver Police Department, Victoria Police Department, Stl'atl'imx Tribal Police, E Division BIP/Ports, CBSA, CN Police, CP Police, Marine Security Operations Centre (MSOC) and Ministry of Aboriginal Relations and Reconciliation (MARR).

- $ Further information will be shared with impacted jurisdictions through District Command.

STRATEGIC CONSIDERATIONS:

- E-Division observed relatively minor demonstrations during today's 'National Day of Action.' However, 'Idle No More' events continue to be organized and show no signs of abating.

- FNP (First Nations Policing) Members are encouraged to proactively engage their communities and advise of upcoming public order events to District Command.

- $ Major Highways, Bridges, Railway Routes, Marine Ports/Ferry Terminals, Airports and Government Buildings remain the most vulnerable targets of disruption/protest.

- $ ECROPS and E Division APS continue to work with partners to collate and disseminate information and develop an operational plan in the event of a major, long-term demonstration or any province-wide paralysis of transportation systems and/or infrastructure.

PUBLIC SAFETY PROTOCOLS:

- $ None to report at this time.

"M" Division Update:
To date, Idle No More activities in Yukon have been peaceful and without injury, damage or significant disruption. "M" Division Criminal Operations has developed a productive working relationship with INM organizers at a territorial and local level and is being kept informed of new plans and developments.

The organization is emphasizing peaceful/respectful action under the guidance of respected elders.
Organizers have publicly emphasized that protests will be peaceful and respectful and they do not support economic disruption.
The next INM activity will be a 24-hour prayer circle starting today at 6 pm in the Kwanlin Dun Potluck House in Whitehorse.
"M" Division is maintaining direct and open communication with the primary organizers
With the support of the organizers, RCMP First Nations Policing, through CROPS, has committed to attending future rallies and events to enhance safety of protesters and to keep the peace.
Please see letter to local media from INM organizers and Whitehorse Star editorial in response.

At approx. 17:00 hrs this date the Idle No More Protest took place as planned in Iqaluit. Approx. 25 - 30 protesters formed up at the 4 corners. S/Sgt LeComte expressed his expectations were for a peaceful walk advised that this would be the way it was. LeComte also advised her that one PC would lead, and one would follow and that By-law was going to block intersections so that no one was hurt or injured. very thankful for this approach. At 17:10 protesters stepped onto the street where traffic was disrupted for approx. 2 - 3 minutes before the march started. The march went past North mart and around ring road and lasted approx. 30 minutes and at the finish there was approx. 20 people left as they had been dropping out throughout the march.

All in all an uneventful event.

I expressed thanks to the By-law members in attendance on behalf of the RCMP.

Peaceful demonstrations can be effective mechanisms (Editorial)

By Whitehorse Star on January 16, 2013 at 4:56 pm

Members of Idle No More – Yukon may be conducting their activities among people who are commonly mystified by the complexities of their discontent, but their comportment deserves kudos.

They can take satisfaction: in their own modest way, they contributed to the national agitations that eventually helped persuade Prime Minister Stephen Harper to become more personally engaged in helping aboriginal Canadians at least partially attain their goals.

Last Friday afternoon's march from Yukon MP Ryan Leef's office through downtown Whitehorse was surprisingly large in its number and strident in its power. An encouraging feature of its composition was the number of non-aboriginal Yukoners intent on supporting First Nations' activism.

What none of the walkers deserved was the appalling behaviour of an unknown man driving a blue pickup truck.

According to eyewitnesses and videotape, the driver revved his engine and swerved recklessly close to marchers, coming within mere inches of some. He then made a return pass, aggressively blasting his horn in his cowardly attempts to intimidate a mix of citizens who were fully entitled to exercise their democratic right to demonstrate.

The dangerous, distasteful incident shows the negative depth of feelings the Idle No More movement can provoke.

Instead of becoming rightfully rattled, organizers of the movement have calmly vowed to continue their quest for improved federal relations not with anger and violence, but determination and compassion.

Organizers of the campaign are under no obligation to move public relations to the forefront of their agenda. Nevertheless, they did just that on Monday, with the release of a statement summing up their intentions over the coming days and weeks.

They firmly eschewed such national tactics as blockading the Ambassador Bridge between Detroit and Windsor, Ont., or stopping trains on major railway lines.

"Organizers in Yukon follow the lead of Idle No More nationally, and we do not support Canadian economic disruptions," they said in a statement published in Tuesday's Star.

"We as Idle No More – Yukon will continue to engage in peaceful demonstrations to build awareness of the legislation being imposed and educate the public about indigenous issues in Canada."

The Yukoners shrewdly recognize that civil disobedience accomplishes little save eroding public sympathy for their cause and diverting the focus from the issues.

Some of the anonymous comments sent to newspapers' websites reflect a disturbing degree of ignorance and racism, underlining the importance of retaining the support of Canadians with more moderate views.

Despite the best, though not necessarily effective intentions of aboriginal and non-aboriginal governments alike, the lives of far too many First Nations citizens resemble those of people mired in Third World locales.

Harsh, inadequate shelter, insufficient sources of clean water, educational and employment shortcomings, health woes, spousal violence and chronic substance abuse issues continue to plague too many First Nations Canadians.

The ramifications are seen daily on the streets of the nation, which give rise to inaccurate and unfair stereotyping. Far too much suffering has been inflicted on citizens who did not deserve it, as has soberly been pointed out (again) in this week's Truth and Reconciliation Commission of Canada hearings in Whitehorse.

Only time will tell whether the Conservatives, in the 2 1/2 remaining years in their 2011 mandate, will simply pay lip service to the problems or make sincere attempts to work with aboriginal Canadians to remedy their complaints about the lastest omnibus legislation's effects on their constitutional rights and the health of their land and water.

Resource revenue-sharing arrangements with provinces, treaty talks and land claims settlement complications are at the heart of the national unrest, and require urgent resolution.

In fact, it's astounding that such fundamental questions of justice remain unresolved in the enlightened era of 2013 in one of the richest, most progressive countries on Earth.

In their own small way, from their own land vastly remote from Ottawa, determined Yukoners have helped spur the momentum toward frank and constructive dialogue. In that vein, their efforts can be judged a success.

We will not participate in events of this nature

Ed. note: Whitehorse residents Marilyn Jensen and Cherish Clarke of Idle No More – Yukon released this statement Monday.

Ed. note: Whitehorse residents Marilyn Jensen and Cherish Clarke of Idle No More – Yukon released this statement Monday.

Yukon realizes and respects that indigenous nations are separate and distinct.

They are represented by different languages, cultures, treaties, bands and self-governments.

Idle No More – Yukon will not criticize or create divisiveness among First Nations leaders who chose to go to the meeting of Jan. 11th vs. those who did not.

On both sides, their decisions are valid and are done in the best interests of the people they represent.

On Jan. 11, several chiefs who did not participate in the meeting with the Assembly of First Nations and the prime minister called for economic disruption and blockades for Jan. 16.

Idle No More – Yukon will not be participating in events of this nature.

Organizers in Yukon follow the lead of Idle No More nationally, and we do not support Canadian economic disruptions.

We as Idle No More – Yukon will continue to engage in peaceful demonstrations to build awareness of the legislation being imposed and educate the public about indigenous issues in Canada.

We support and respect the vision of the four founding women of Idle No More by keeping this a peaceful movement, and remain united in solidarity.

"We will pray for unity in our peaceful movement of spiritual transformation and awakening. We will pray for 24 hours in constant prayer beginning together in a large circle to smudge, sing prayer songs and focus on our spiritual transformation." (Marilyn Jensen)

Résumé

Dans le cadre de la "Journée nationale d'action", un certain nombre de manifestations pacifiques des Premières nations, y compris des barrages routiers et ferroviaires et des ralentissements de circulation, ont eu lieu à travers le pays le 16 janvier 2013. Toutes les activités de protestation se sont déroulées sans incident majeur.

Le blocus temporaire et pacifique du trafic sur le pont Ambassador à Windsor, Ontario, a entraîné des retards de circulation en direction des États-Unis. Les blocages temporaires de chemin de fer par des manifestants des Premières nations près de Belleville, Ontario, Portage la Prairie, au Manitoba, et Kitwanga, Colombie-britannique, ont entraîné des perturbations pour le fret et le trafic ferroviaire de passagers.

Vous trouverez en pièce jointe le document ST003-13F FINAL – Manifestations des Premières nations – Journée nationale de protestation ainsi que la matrice d'événements correspondante pour les événements à venir. Les renseignements ont été mis à jour le 17 janvier 2013, à 15 h (HNE). Pour plus de commodité, la nouvelle information est en caractère gras.

There have been several media and social networking reports of planned protests and potential blockades in support for the "Idle No More" (INM) Aboriginal-based solidarity movement. These protests are being monitored for RCMP senior management situational awareness and public and police officer safety.

This report will provide a summary of reported planned Canadian events, a list of known events being organized, as well as events planned until January 24. These lists may not be complete as the environment is constantly changing, nor is it confirmed that these events have actually taken place.

A number of demonstrations, traffic disruptions, as well as highway and rail blockades, intended to cause economic disruption and raise awareness of Aboriginal issues, took place across Canada as part of the "National Day of Action" on January 16. Though many of yesterday's events took place under the Idle No More (INM) banner, INM organizers maintain they do not support blockades of railways and international bridges as well as economic disruption. Protestors blocked rail lines in Ontario, Manitoba, and British Columbia, resulting in delays to both passenger and freight traffic; caused traffic slowdowns on major highways in several provinces; and, impacted cross-border traffic at international bridges, such as the Ambassador Bridge in Windsor and the Rainbow Bridge in Niagara Falls. For the most part, protests on January 16 were peaceful and without incident.

The INM movement continues to plan activities in the days leading up to its call for a Global Day of Action, on January 28, to coincide with the return of MPs to the House of Commons.

A total of five events are planned for January 17 in British Columbia (BC), New Brunswick (NB), Nova Scotia (NS), and Ontario (ON). These direct actions include educational sessions in BC and NB; a concert/rally in NS; a rally in ON; and, a week-long rally in BC.

There are several events planned to occur between January 18 and 24.

Hi Tim,

I'm answering on behalf of Christine, and the team working on the briefings here in CI.

Protestors have indeed disrupted traffic flow in Manitoba and in Edmonton -- on highways --

There was a demonstration in BC where traffic was blocked on the Pat Bay (Patricia Bay) Hwy which apparently connects Victoria with the airport in and the Swartz Bay ferry terminal.

Hope that answers these questions.

Lori

1. The RCMP is a participant in the Government of Canada's Cyber Security Strategy and would conduct investigations related to criminal cyber activity on Critical Infrastructure Sectors if requested.

Public Safety Canada is the lead agency for the Government on Cyber Security and is continuously working with the critical infrastructure sectors to improve voluntary incident reporting and to expand situational awareness in an ever changing and high risk environment that the cyber environment poses.

The Canadian Cyber Incident Response Centre (CCIRC) operates within Public Safety Canada, and works with partners inside and outside Canada to mitigate cyber threats to vital networks outside the federal government. They support the owners and operators of systems of national importance, including critical infrastructure, and is responsible for coordinating the national response to any serious cyber incidents.

I have included Criminal Intelligence, who by default was assigned responsibility at the national level to monitor - not officially report - on the Idle-No-More movement,

Christine and Fred, are you able to respond to Neil's question re:

Subject: Questions ....

Good afternoon Gentlemen,

I fielded two phone conversations this afternoon that I thought our good friends at CIIT may be able to provide some insight ....

1. Does CIIT look after reporting cyber related occurrences that comes to your attention via the INSET's and NSES' s to the Canadian Cyber Incident Response Centre?

Thank you for any feedback you might be able to provide on these two topics.

Cheers,

Neil

(La version française sera envoyée sous pli séparé).

Executive Summary

As part of the "National Day of Action", a number of peaceful First Nations protests, including road and rail blockades and slowdowns, took place across the country on 16 Jan 2013. All protest activities occurred without major incident.

The temporary and peaceful blockade of traffic through the Ambassador Bridge in Windsor, ON, led to delays of United States-bound traffic. Temporary rail blockades by First Nations protesters near Belleville, ON, Portage la Prairie, MB, and Kitwanga, BC resulted in disruptions to freight and passenger rail traffic.

Please find attached ST003-13F FINAL – First Nations Protests – National Day of Action and corresponding Events Matrix for upcoming events. Information valid as of 17 Jan 2013, 15:00 EST. For your convenience, new information has been bolded.

Situation Report

Incident Number: ST003-13F FINAL

Incident: First Nations Protests – National Day of Action

Date: Information valid as of 17 Jan 2013, 15:00 EST

Description of current incident: On 16 Jan 2013, a number of peaceful FN protests took place across the country as part of the "National Day of Action".

In Ontario, a peaceful protest at the main entrance of the Ambassador Bridge (Windsor) took place between approximately 11:00 EST and 15:00 EST. The protest blocked the main truck artery onto the bridge, causing delays of about 2 hours to outbound traffic. United States-bound traffic at the Rainbow Bridge in Niagara Falls, ON was also momentarily blocked as protesters performed a ceremonial Round Dance in front of the bridge's entrance.

At approximately 14:00 EST, several protesters from Tyendinaga FN established blockades on the main CP and CP railway lines east of Belleville ON, including the CN line used by VIA Rail. These blockades, which lasted until approximately 19:00 EST, resulted in delays to freight and passenger train traffic.

In Manitoba, at approximately 13:00 EST, protesters in Portage la Prairie established two blockades on CN and CP railway lines. The blockade of the CN rail lines, by approximately 20 protesters, has resulted in the stoppage freight traffic, causing the back-up of train traffic throughout Manitoba. The CN rail blockade was lifted at approximately 22:00 EST. The blockade of the CP rail line, by approximately 6 protesters, lasted less than an hour and ended with minimal disruptions to rail traffic.

In British Columbia, at approximately 15:30 EST, about 45 FN protesters blocked the CN main rail line by Kitwanga, between Prince George and Prince Rupert. The blockade, which resulted in the delay of one VIA Rail train, was lifted at approximately 21:00 EST.

A number of other blockades and slowdowns, in addition to other protests, took place across the country without incident and with minimal impacts.

Source(s) of reporting: Aboriginal Affairs and Northern Development Canada, PS Regional Offices, Canada Border Services Agency, Transport Canada, media/open source reporting.

Current actions:

The GOC continues to monitor and analyze the situation and has established contact with key federal departments/agencies and PS Regional Offices in order to maintain cohesive information sharing and to identify potential impacts.

Event management of the protests falls under the purview of local jurisdictions and local law enforcement agencies, as appropriate.

Future actions: The GOC will continue to work with federal and provincial partners to coordinate efforts and to assess the impact of upcoming protests.

A consolidated events matrix will continue to be maintained by the GOC and will be distributed daily, or as required.

Departments and Agencies with further information on other upcoming FN protest activities are asked to continue reporting to the GOC.

The next event of significance is expected to be the 28 Jan 2013 "Idle No More International Call-to-Action."

Assessment/Analysis: Impact from "National Day of Action" related protests include interruptions to passenger and freight trains, temporary disruptions to road traffic, and delays at border crossings/ports of entry, including significant delays at the Ambassador Bridge, Canada's busiest border crossing. To date, all protests have been peaceful.

Additional situation reports: This will be the last situation report on this specific event; however, the GOC will continue to monitor and report on FN protest activities in the GOC Daily Operations Brief.

Additional Products: Nil.

Rapport de situation

Numéro d'incident : ST003-13F FINAL

Incident : Manifestations des Premières nations – Journée nationale de protestation

Date : Renseignements mis à jour le 17 janvier 2013, à 15 h (HNE)

Description de l'incident : Le 16 janvier 2013, les Premières nations ont organisé un certain nombre de manifestations pacifiques un peu partout au pays dans le cadre de la Journée nationale de mobilisation.

En Ontario, entre 11 h et 15 h (HNE) environ, une manifestation pacifique a eu lieu à l'entrée principale du pont Ambassador (Windsor). La manifestation a bloqué la principale voie d'accès au pont utilisée par les camions et a entraîné des retards d'environ deux heures pour la circulation sortant du pays. Au pont Rainbow, à Niagara Falls (Ontario), la circulation à destination des États-Unis a aussi été temporairement arrêtée pendant que les manifestants effectuaient une ronde cérémoniale devant l'entrée du pont.

Vers 14 h (HNE), plusieurs manifestants de la Première Nation de Tyendinaga ont érigé des barrages sur les voies ferrées principales de CP et de CN à l'est de Belleville (Ontario), y compris la voie de CN utilisée par VIA Rail. Ces barrages, qui ont pris fin autour de 19 h (HNE), ont retardé le trafic ferroviaire de marchandises et de passagers.

Au Manitoba, vers 13 h (HNE), des manifestants ont érigé des barrages sur les voies ferrées de CN et de CP à Portage la Prairie. Le blocage des voies de CN, par environ 20 manifestants, a interrompu le trafic des marchandises et a entraîné des bouchons ferroviaires dans tout le Manitoba. La levée du barrage de CN a eu lieu vers 22 h (HNE). Le blocage de la voie de CP, par environ six manifestants, a duré moins d'une heure et s'est terminé sans avoir fortement perturbé le trafic ferroviaire.

En Colombie-Britannique, vers 15 h 30 (HNE), environ 45 manifestants des Premières Nations ont bloqué la ligne ferroviaire principale de CN près de Kitwanga, entre Prince George et Prince Rupert. Le barrage, qui a retardé un train de VIA Rail, a été levé autour de 21 h (HNE).

Il y a eu, dans l'ensemble du pays, d'autres barrages et ralentissements, en plus d'autres manifestations, sans incident; ils ont eu des répercussions minimales.

Sources des renseignements : Affaires autochtones et Développement du Nord Canada, bureaux régionaux de SP, Agence des services frontaliers du Canada, Transports Canada, médias et information de sources ouvertes

Mesures en cours

Le COG continue de surveiller et d'analyser la situation de près; il a communiqué avec les principaux ministères et organismes ainsi qu'avec les bureaux régionaux de SP en vue d'assurer un échange d'information homogène et de recenser les répercussions possibles.

La gestion de l'incident relève des administrations et des organismes d'application de la loi locaux, selon le cas.

Mesures à venir : Le COG continuera de collaborer avec ses partenaires fédéraux et provinciaux pour coordonner les efforts et évaluer les répercussions des prochaines manifestations.

Le COG continuera de tenir à jour une matrice des évènements et la diffusera quotidiennement, ou au besoin.

Les ministères et organismes qui détiennent des renseignements sur les prochaines manifestations des PN sont priés de communiquer avec le COG.

Le prochain événement d'importance est prévu le 28 janvier 2013. Il s'agit d'un appel à l'action lancé à l'échelle internationale par le mouvement « Idle No More ».

Analyse/évaluation : Parmi les répercussions des manifestations associées à la journée nationale de mobilisation figurent la perturbation de trains de passagers et de marchandises, la perturbation temporaire du trafic routier et des retards aux postes frontaliers, y compris des retards importants au pont Ambassador, le passage frontalier le plus utilisé au Canada. Pour le moment, toutes les manifestations se sont déroulées dans le calme.

Autres rapports de situation : Il s'agit du dernier rapport de situation à propos de cet incident précis; toutefois, le COG continuera de surveiller la situation et de rendre compte des manifestations des Premières nations dans son rapport quotidien des opérations.

Autres produits : Aucun.

"Idle No More" Protests Situation Report
Since Sunday, December 9, 2012, approximately 309 protests have occurred as part of an announced program of activism called 'Idle No More', which is being promoted through traditional and social media.

Idle No More is partly a response to Bill C-45, the omnibus budget bill which includes changes to the Indian Act, the Fisheries Act and the Navigable Waters Protection Act and partly a call for changes to the broader relationship between Canada and First Nations.

On Tuesday, December 11, 2012, media reported that Chief Theresa Spence of the Attawapiskat First Nation (ON) had begun a hunger strike protest. Chief Spence is demanding a meeting between the Prime Minister, the Crown, and First Nations leaders to discuss "treaty issues for First Nations across the country".

On Friday, January 11, 2013, Chief Spence along with some of her fellow chiefs met with Governor General David Johnston for a ceremonial meeting. As of Friday, January 18, 2013, Chief Spence's hunger strike continues. This is the 38th day of her hunger strike.

All protests which have already occurred have been peaceful, however some have affected the transportation sector. To date, approximately 109 protests have resulted in either interruption to rail services and border crossings or delays on various highways, streets and bridges.

On Wednesday, January 16, 2013, the Government Operations Centre reported a number of peaceful protests took place across the country as part of the "National Day of Action". Rail blockades by First Nations protesters occurred near Belleville, ON, Portage la Prairie, MB, and Kitwanga, BC, that caused delays to freight and passenger rail traffic. This included temporary disruptions to road traffic and delays at border crossings/ports of entry.

Additionally, protesters blocked the Ambassador Bridge (Windsor, ON) at the main entrance to the bridge, causing delays of about 2 hours to outbound traffic. The protest occurred between 11:00 EST and 15:00 EST.

A number of other blockades and slowdowns, in addition to protests associated with the "National Day of Action", took place across the country, without incident and with minimal impacts.

The next event of significance for "Idle No More" is the International Call- to-Action (Global Day of Action) that is expected to occur on Monday, January 28, 2013.

During all full blockades of highways, law enforcement had been able to arrange for detours for traffic, and to notify the public of planned blockades. Emergency management issues related to the protests falls under the purview of local jurisdictions and local law enforcement agencies as appropriate.

While all protests have been peaceful, a significant number involved traffic disruptions: there were 18 partial blockades and 18 full blockades of either rail lines, highways, ferry stations, or bridges, as well as 25 traffic slowdowns of highways. Other protests (199) included peaceful demonstrations, marches, flash mobs in shopping centers or gatherings. There was also a one-day occupation of the AANDC ON Region Thunder Bay Office.

Idle no More Protests - Update

As reported on Friday, January 18, 2013, a number of scheduled First Nation protests in support of the "Idle No More" grassroots campaign occurred over the weekend.

Public Safety Canada's Government Operations Centre (GOC) has reported that all First Nation protest activities were peaceful in nature.

At this time, it is unknown how many protestors participated in the various events.

Updates will be provided if additional information becomes available.

Information on potential protest in Halifax, Halifax Regional Police have also been advised.

Mi'kma'ki Global Days Of Action!

We'll begin our March on Sunday, Jan 27th at the Shubenacadie Residential School Grounds. We'll begin our rally there with singing, drumming and ceremony for all those we've lost and pray for our survivors. We'll march in solidarity from Shubenacadie to Halifax. The walk will be broken up into two days where we walk till Sundown, and then continue the next day where we'll march across the McDonald Bridge, up to Citadel and have the biggest Round Dance Halifax has ever seen!

The Residential School Grounds is a symbolic and powerful place for us to begin our Trail. Citadel Hill is where the proclamation stems from Governor Cornwallis making it legal for settlers to hunt and scalp Mi'kmaqs. This proclamation was still legal in the 1990s so this place is also symbolic to us. We need to take our power back, round dance, sing and pray there to remind Canadians that this movement is not going anywhere! Not until our history is revealed, not until Bill C-45 is repealed and not until our issues are dealt with!

Bring your drums, regalias, flags, posters and voices!! Everyone is welcome!!!

RCMP will be involved while marching from Shubenacadie to Halifax to assure the safety of everyone. If weather is too harsh, we will rally at the Shubenacadie Residential School Grounds on Sunday and convene the next day at Citadel Hill.

Also, for those of you can't march with us, please join us at Shubenacadie Residential School Grounds on the 27th and meet us at the McDonald Bridge on the 28th to march the rest of the way with us to Citadel Hill. Your support is crucial and needed.

"Idle No More" Protests Situation Report

Since Sunday, December 9, 2012, approximately 309 protests have occurred as part of an announced program of activism called 'Idle No More', which is being promoted through traditional and social media.

Idle No More is partly a response to Bill C-45, the omnibus budget bill which includes changes to the Indian Act, the Fisheries Act and the Navigable Waters Protection Act and partly a call for changes to the broader relationship between Canada and First Nations.

On Tuesday, December 11, 2012, media reported that Chief Theresa Spence of the Attawapiskat First Nation (ON) had begun a hunger strike protest. Chief Spence is demanding a meeting between the Prime Minister, the Crown, and First Nations leaders to discuss "treaty issues for First Nations across the country".

On Friday, January 11, 2013, Chief Spence along with some of her fellow chiefs met with Governor General David Johnston for a ceremonial meeting. As of Friday, January 18, 2013, Chief Spence's hunger strike continues. This is the 38th day of her hunger strike.

All protests which have already occurred have been peaceful, however some have affected the transportation sector. To date, approximately 109 protests have resulted in either interruption to rail services and border crossings or delays on various highways, streets and bridges.

On Wednesday, January 16, 2013, the Government Operations Centre reported a number of peaceful protests took place across the country as part of the "National Day of Action". Rail blockades by First Nations protesters occurred near Belleville, ON, Portage la Prairie, MB, and Kitwanga, BC, that caused delays to freight and passenger rail traffic. This included temporary disruptions to road traffic and delays at border crossings/ports of entry.

Additionally, protesters blocked the Ambassador Bridge (Windsor, ON) at the main entrance to the bridge, causing delays of about 2 hours to outbound traffic. The protest occurred between 11:00 EST and 15:00 EST.

A number of other blockades and slowdowns, in addition to protests associated with the "National Day of Action", took place across the country, without incident and with minimal impacts.

The next event of significance for "Idle No More" is the International Call- to-Action (Global Day of Action) that is expected to occur on Monday, January 28, 2013.

During all full blockades of highways, law enforcement had been able to arrange for detours for traffic, and to notify the public of planned blockades. Emergency management issues related to the protests falls under the purview of local jurisdictions and local law enforcement agencies as appropriate.

While all protests have been peaceful, a significant number involved traffic disruptions: there were 18 partial blockades and 18 full blockades of either rail lines, highways, ferry stations, or bridges, as well as 25 traffic slowdowns of highways. Other protests (199) included peaceful demonstrations, marches, flash mobs in shopping centers or gatherings. There was also a one-day occupation of the AANDC ON Region Thunder Bay Office.

"D" Division RCMP HQ Building
Aboriginal Gathering
Saturday, January 19, 2013
11:00 – 14:00

D Division – HQ Building – Criminal Operations / Winnipeg Police Service

Operational Plan

PROS File#: 2013-64208

Prepared by: Sgt. J.E. Glavin 39831

Approved by: Supt. Garth Patterson

1.0 SITUATION

As part of recent continued Aboriginal discontent within Canada since December of 2012, that has involved hunger strikes and various forms of peaceful public protests, organizing a public gathering in front of the "D" Division RCMP HQ at the intersection of Portage Avenue and Dominion Street in the City of Winnipeg, Manitoba.

These activities include engaging international agencies and activists to support a position that the Government of Canada mistreats First Nation people and does not respect the First Nation Governments.

the event is planned as a "Spiritual" gathering and there are no plans to interfere with traffic or with access to the RCMP HQ building. The size of the gathering is not predictable; but past events have been 50 persons or less. The gathering is planned to be three hours long and will consist of a one hour speech of how the RCMP are supposed to protect First Nation Treaty rights.

The second hour is planned to have First Nation Elders lead the gathering in a pipe ceremony and prayers for Mother Earth.

The third hour is planned to have a representative from the American Indian Movement (AIM) talk to the gathering about the death of Ty Jacobs in Alberta in 1998. Ty Jacobs died while in the care of non-Aboriginal foster parents and the discussion will focus on their opposition to First Nation children being apprehended by Government agencies and being raised in non-Aboriginal environments.

There will be short closing remarks and the gathering is to peacefully disperse.

the RCMP have had ongoing dialogue to share information and met on Thursday, January 17, 2013. The meeting was held to confer on the available information, discuss our basic roles and responses to the gathering on Saturday. The meeting confirmed the information as noted above and that the gathering was planned to be peaceful and non-disruptive to traffic as well as access to the RCMP HQ building. Winnipeg Police Service will be responsible for activity outside the RCMP HQ building. The RCMP will be responsible for security of the RCMP HQ building from the inside.

The Winnipeg Police Service is aware that the RCMP may be a complainant should anyone from the gathering cause mischief to the RCMP Memorial Statue in honour of RCMP members who died in the line of duty. The RCMP will have a CAPS member inform the gathering of the statue's significance and consequences of mischief to it at the beginning of the gathering.

2.0 MISSION

To facilitate a safe workplace environment during the gathering, to protect public safety attending the RCMP HQ building, to minimize any unplanned disruption to the building, to prevent any unauthorized access to the building and to assist the Winnipeg Police Service with their mandate of responding to activity outside the building.

3.0 EXECUTION

Plan "A" – is designed to facilitate a peaceful gathering as it is planned to take place by the organizers and maintain normal operations at the RCMP HQ building

HQ staff will be advised by e mail on Friday, January 18th of the gathering the following day and be provided appropriate guidance if they will be in the building that day.

Good morning Sgt. Darling,

I am one of the intelligence analysts in Ottawa who has been tasked with preparing the daily situation reports for senior management at NHQ. We appreciate receiving the information you are forwarding. In your Briefing Note from Jan 18th, you listed some upcoming demonstrations (reprinted below) planned for various places across the Province. This would be useful information to include in the upcoming events portion of the daily situation report, even if the events are tentative. Would you, by any chance, have additional information on these demonstrations, as in a particular location, or a rough time?

Thank you,
Lori Schnittker

Subject: Atleo to return 'this week' amid renewed call for PM meeting (CBC - 2013-01-21 1655)

Top First Nations chiefs from across the country have set aside their differences for now and signed on to a request for yet another meeting with the prime minister — all in an attempt to bring the protest by Attawapiskat Chief Theresa Spence to an end.
The Assembly of First Nations' executive agreed to the request in writing and sent a letter to Stephen Harper on the weekend, calling for a meeting as soon as Thursday — a day by which Shawn Atleo could well be back on the job.
Atleo took a sudden sick leave after his controversial meeting with Harper 10 days ago amidst a leadership crisis within the AFN. He issued a statement Monday saying he would be back in the saddle "later this week."
Unlike the divisive Jan. 11 meeting, this week's proposed meeting with Harper would include a broad range of chiefs as well as Gov.-Gen. David Johnston, as requested by Spence.
"The intent behind it is to try to end Chief Spence's hunger strike," said Morley Googoo, regional chief for Newfoundland and Nova Scotia.
And unlike the previous meeting, Spence's spokesman says the Cree leader is onside.
"We all need to work together," said Danny Metatawabin, adding that Spence was feeling "well, chirpy, happy" on Monday morning despite having spent the last six weeks subsisting only on fish broth and medicinal tea.PMO expects 'one-on-one' meeting
There's nothing to suggest Harper is inclined to agree to the request, despite the newfound unity among chiefs. Andrew MacDougall, a spokesman for the prime minister, said Harper would respond to the AFN's letter "in due course."
"For us, the next step is (meeting) National Chief Atleo, one-on-one, to hammer out some of the detail on the way forward," MacDougall said.
The Governor General was not included in the previous meeting because it is the government that makes policy decisions in Canada, not the Queen's representative, he added. "And that's how we're still looking at the matter."
Still, MacDougall acknowledged that there is a great deal of pressure to show concrete results that will lead to material improvements for First Nations peoples.
"We have to keep up the momentum and keep showing that there is progress that can be made."
Googoo said the best way for Harper to show goodwill and immediate progress would be to agree to the Jan. 24 meeting, which would be in addition to the meeting with Atleo to work on treaty implementation and comprehensive claims.Anniversary of Crown-First Nations gathering
Thursday is the AFN's "preferred date" for a broader meeting, he said, because it is the one-year anniversary of a major summit between chiefs, Harper and Johnston that was supposed to reinvigorate the Crown-First Nation relationship. But the AFN realizes there may be a need for some flexibility on the date since it is so soon, Googoo acknowledged.
He said he hopes that a solid commitment to such a meeting would be enough to entice Spence to end her protest.
Harper agreed to a meeting with the AFN, but his exclusion of Johnston and his setting of the meeting agenda prompted Spence and many other chiefs to orchestrate a boycott and question the leadership of Atleo, who went into the meeting despite loud protests in the streets.
In his statement on Monday, Atleo called for unity and rational discussion of internal disagreements. But he also opened the door to structural changes within the national organization, just as conflicts in the past have led to restructuring.
"Many changes were made; many more conversations remain," Atleo writes.
"Let us ensure that those conversations are conducted with respect, respectful of our traditions, respectful of each other and respectful of our different approaches to winning progress for our peoples."
But while angry chiefs have muted their criticism of Atleo for now, they still harbour concerns about his leadership.
"For Ontario, we're just trying to maintain focus on what the objectives are.... There's a concern regarding leadership but there's a process and time for that," said Ontario Regional Chief Stan Beardy, who boycotted the Jan. 11 meeting.
"The sense of urgency there is that Theresa Spence has indicated that she'll continue on with her hunger strike until such time as a meeting takes place."

Subject: It does not copy well

by National Chief Shawn Atleo
January 21, 2013
First, let me express my sincere thanks to all of those who reached out to wish me well in the past week. Indeed, I am making good progress. I am keen to return to my full duties reinvigorated later this week.
As you know, we have reached a critical moment in our history. Recent events have helped to win our issues a higher priority among Canadians and with Canadian governments than at any time in recent years. The proud and determined voices of our peoples, their actions from coast to coast to coast have achieved this unprecedented attention.
The National Executive of the AFN and I are going to maintain this pressure on those governments, as it presents the greatest opportunity to make real progress for all of our peoples in too many years. Our demand for greater justice, fairness and political, social and economic development has never been closer to achievement.
It is important that we remain united behind these demands, the agenda adopted by our peoples in one Assembly after another. Some have been critical of that process, and critical of our decision-making structures. They are not perfect. Some reflect the colonial past we reject. They can be improved and that is a discussion we must have. Today's AFN is the creation of our Elders, building on earlier structures they knew needed reform. Tomorrow's AFN will continue that process.
As we engage in these discussions, we must ensure that dialogue does not prevent us from seizing this moment to achieve change. Our priority, our focus must remain seeking the changes we have fought for, for so long, in the lives of our peoples. Every First Nation, and every Treaty area, must make the choices that are best for them. Together we can lead the momentum to create this opportunity for all our peoples.
As you know, as we have reported in detail, we won progress in our January 11th meeting with the Government of Canada. Together, the Chiefs, leaders and Elders who joined that meeting achieved unprecedented movement on an issue essential to winning real progress on any of our issues. We won a commitment to political oversight and direction from the highest level of government – from the Prime Minister, his senior officials and those of the Privy Council Office. In addition, a mandate has been established to advance high level dialogue on fundamental matters of Treaty implementation as determined by Treaty nations, and on comprehensive claims reform. There was a frank exchange on each of the eight items presented and commitment to deliver on the promise of education that every First Nation child and parent can be proud of and action to address the appalling tragedy of our murdered and missing women.
On every one of our priorities, we will continue to press for justice, for fairness, for respect and for change as determined by First Nations. It is our responsibility to drive change for our children, grounded in our rights and culture, we must be prepared to seize every opportunity to achieve the future they deserve.
As a young leader of my community I had the privilege of learning from the wisdom of our Elders. As a leader in British Columbia, I had the honour to be counseled by Elders, from across Canada. As a leader at the national level for the past four years, I have learned from all our former leaders, from the current and former leaders of many diverse Nations. They have described the sometimes painful process of building our structures and our organizations.
At many different points, there have been periods of disagreement and discord. But, at each point, when our peoples have engaged in vigorous debate, we have also listened and respected one another. We overcame each of those challenges while respecting the autonomy of each Nation. We have always recognized that our peoples and their leaders are our decision-makers. As leaders, we come together to advocate, to fight for the achievement of the demands they have chosen.
That process always involved change. When we transformed the National Indian Brotherhood into the Assembly of First Nations, we did it during the politically charged atmosphere of the constitution talks. In December 1980, our Declaration of Nations was adopted creating the foundation for the transformation to the Assembly of First Nations.
We come together as the Assembly of First Nations, as it says in our Charter, "to respect our diversity, to practice tolerance and work together as good neighbours, to unite our strength to maintain our security, and to employ national and international machinery for the promotion of the political, economic and social advancement of our peoples."
In 2005, the AFN Renewal Commission encouraged us to look to the future and to establish the conditions that will ensure our organization is respected by all levels of Government, is rooted in our languages and cultures, is representative of the diverse Nations we serve and, most importantly, is responsive to the demands of our Nations and our peoples. Many changes were made, many more conversations remain.
Let us ensure that those conversations are conducted with respect, respectful of our traditions, respectful of each other, and respectful of our different approaches to winning progress for our peoples. With the wisdom of our Elders, and with the determination of our peoples, we can seize this moment of real opportunity. If we remain inspired and strengthened by the vision of a better day for every one of our children, we can win these victories together.
I look forward to our continued work together, to supporting and respecting one another, to serving our people...and most of all to achieving that better life for all our peoples together with you.

BY MICHAEL WOODS, POSTMEDIA NEWS
Stephen Harper won't commit to a Jan. 24 meeting demanded by some First Nations chiefs, but he will meet soon with Assembly of First Nations National Chief Shawn Atleo.
Manitoba First Nations chiefs said Friday they want a meeting with the prime minister and the Governor General on Jan. 24 on a "nation to nation" basis, echoing the demands of Attawapiskat Chief Theresa Spence, who is still on a protest fast.
Many chiefs opposed Atleo's decision to meet with the prime minister Jan. 11, demanding Gov. Gen. David Johnston's presence and a bigger venue, to accommodate more chiefs. Those conditions were reiterated on Friday.
"As we said following the meeting last week, the Prime Minister will be meeting with the National Chief in the coming weeks," Harper spokesman Carl Vallée said, adding that the prime minister's office has yet to receive a request from the AFN.
The AFN is said to be in the process of writing a letter to Harper requesting the meeting, which Assembly of Manitoba Chiefs Grand Chief Derek Nepinak said needs to be "on our terms."
"We will not bow down to prescriptive and predetermined agendas. We will not bow down to the types of meetings that we've had in the past with the prime minister," said Nepinak, who was among those protesting outside the Jan. 11 meeting.

Sgt. Glavin,

Be advised that on the above noted date an Idle No More demonstration was conducted in the community of Brokenhead Mb, 40 km northeast of Selkirk Manitoba. Approximately twenty protesters stopped traffic on provincial highway 59 between the hours of 1030 and 1300.

The submitted Operational Plan was initiated, and allowed for the uninterrupted flow of vehicle traffic around and beside the protest location. Media outlets from Winnipeg attended the location.

There were no indications of hostilities with/between protesters, community members, or the motoring public.

Good morning,

My name is Lori Schnittker and I am an intelligence analyst working at NHQ, tasked with providing a daily situation report to senior management.

I have a colleague, Stephanie Laplante, who is an intelligence analyst working with Protective Operations in Ottawa, and she would appreciate being added to the distribution list Would it be possible for you to add her name to the distribution list, as she is not part of "O" Division and therefore not receiving these reports?

Thank you

Good Day

CI Idle No More reporting for 2013-01-22.

According to a press release by the Assembly of First Nations (AFN) issued on January 21, National Chief Shawn Atleo will return to his full duties later this week, and will meet with the Prime Minister in the near future. However, January 24 has not been officially identified as the meeting date, nor has the form of, or attendees, at such an event been determined. Media reports indicate the Prime Minister has not yet received a formal request from the AFN for a meeting, and that the next step is a one-on-one meeting with National Chief Atleo to agree on a way forward. (U)

Furthermore, according to media reports, the Assembly of Manitoba Chiefs is meeting today and tomorrow (Jan 22-23) in Winnipeg, to discuss "opting out" of the AFN. Chiefs from Alberta, Northwest Territories, Ontario and Saskatchewan are also expected at that venue. (U)

Hey Stephanie,

I have requested that your name be added to the distribution list and received a response that it would be no problem. Hopefully, you should receive one this afternoon sometime between 3:00 and 3:30.

As there are several e-mails with imbedded documents, I will separate them into a couple of e-mails. Please find attached the reports that we starting receiving once we set up the Idle_No_More e-mail resource. I will look for previous ones, pre Jan 5th, in my own account and forward any I find from there.

Subject: Update H-Division Protest

Please find enclosed an update on two planned protest that are scheduled for January 27th and 28th.

Information on potential protest in Halifax has been passed onto Halifax Regional Police

Mi'kma'ki Global Days Of Action!

Sunday, Jan 27th at the Shubenacadie Residential School Grounds and will march to Indian Brook First Nation. They will begin there rally with singing, drumming and ceremony for all those we've lost and pray for our survivors. The march from Shubenacadie to Halifax will not take place as previously planned. Possible up to 300 protestors at this event.

Monday, Jan 28th. Protestors will meet at the Holiday Inn at Dartmouth which is located right beside the McDonald Bridge. They will proceed across the deck of the McDonald Bridge and proceed to Citadel Hill which is in the center of the City. They plan to have prayers at the top of Citadel Hill and they will proceed to the Halifax Commons and have the biggest Round Dance Halifax has ever seen!

To date we are expecting anywhere from 150-500 protestors for the march on Monday.

Both protest are expected to be peaceful.

FIRST NATIONS PROTESTS

UPDATE

Chief Theresa SPENCE

Chief Theresa SPENCE announced on Wednesday evening that she had agreed to end her hunger strike and scheduled a press conference for Thursday morning to make an official announcement. She inadvertently missed the scheduled press conference, but later attended a downtown Ottawa hotel to sign a 13-point declaration and address her supporters. This declaration is a commitment to address First Nations treaty rights; it seeks immediate improvements to native housing and education and full treaty implementation within five years.

Information received that Victoria Island is currently being cleaned up and that no one is staying overnight.

January 25th 2013: "Idle No More" Youth Forum

Today, an "Idle No More" Youth Forum will take place at the Ottawa Convention Center. This event is scheduled to start at 0900hrs and end at 1600hrs. The voices, actions and spirit of First Nations Youth have become an integral part of the world wide movement known as "Idle No More". To acknowledge the work done thus far in asserting First Nations sovereignty and protecting Treaty Rights of Indigenous People, First Nations Youth will be gathering in Ottawa today to continue to work, formulate plans and share ideas on how to keep the momentum of INM going.

The "Idle No More" Youth Forum will be the first of several planned across the country to be held over the coming weeks. The Ottawa-Gatineau forum will be a daylong event that will be broadcast live across the world through Spreecast. The forum comes in the midst of the "Idle No More" movement and will honour the hunger strikes conducted by Chief Theresa Spence and Elder Raymond Robinson. Part of the work will include encouraging First Nations Youth to write to their MPs, MLAs, the PMO and GG and collectively finding new ways for youth to contribute and be engaged in this movement.

Participation

January 26th-27th 2013: Peoples' Social Forum General Assembly

This event is taking place this weekend at the University of Ottawa, 120 University, Faculty of Social Sciences building, Room FSS-2005. It will see a convergence of several different workers and student unions along with "Idle No More" founders. will be speaking at 1330hrs on Saturday. The aim is to unite their movements against the right wing policies of the Harper Government. The militant Quebec student union, ASSE, will also be present and has expressed solidarity with "Idle No More".

Participation

Unknown number of participants at this time; however, the auditorium can hold up to approx. 225 people.

January 28th 2013: Global Day of Action "Idle No More"

On January 28th, the grassroots "Idle No More" organizers are setting up a Global Day of Action to coincide with the MPs returning to parliament. This day of action is to peacefully protest attacks on democracy, indigenous sovereignty, human rights and environmental protections. There are presently events scheduled throughout Canada. The demonstrators in Ottawa are anticipated to gather on Wellington Street at the Portage Bridge around 1030hrs and proceed east bound arriving on Parliament Hill around 1130hrs. Multiple speakers and Jingle Dress Dancers are expected to participate.

Participation

A caravan from Toronto to Ottawa is being organized. Buses are planned to arrive in Ottawa at 1300hrs and possibly depart from Ottawa at 1700hrs.

On January 28th, there will be a large scale number of smaller events across Canada, the USA and internationally.

Assessment:

With events being scheduled elsewhere, as well as the lack of organized transportation, attendance within the National Capital Region has the likelihood to be less than expected.

The information contained herein was obtained from open source reporting and does not represent fully evaluated intelligence. Please disseminate further as you see fit.

HOT SPOT SUMMARY

(New information has been bolded for your convenience.)

Except where otherwise stated, all information in this report was provided by AANDC Regional Offices.

ATLANTIC – NEWFOUNDLAND

Qalipu Mi'kmaq First Nation – Protest Demonstration – Band Council Office – Delays in Band Application Process
The Qalipu Mi'kmaq First Nation was created on September 26, 2011. It is a landless band whose members will have access to programs and benefits currently available to other Status Indians in Canada. The Band Council office is located in Corner Brook, Newfoundland.

On Monday, January 21, 2013, according to the media, a peaceful demonstration occurred in front of the Qalipu Mi'kmaq First Nation Band Council Office. Demonstrators were protesting delays in the application process to register for band membership before the agreement for recognition of the First Nation expires in March 2013.

The Minister of AANDC has appointed a special advisor to work with the Chief and Council to resolve this issue.

This will be the final notification unless significant developments occur.

QUEBEC

Long Point (Winneway) First Nation – Structural Fire with Fatalities
The Long Point First Nation (067), also known as Winneway, is located approximately 100km east of Ville-Marie, on the south bank of the river Winneway, near the Lac Simard with an on-reserve population of approximately 766.

On Monday, January 21, 2012, the AANDC QC Regional Office reported that a house fire had occurred within the community resulting in two fatalities.

Law enforcement partners are continuing to investigate.

This is the final notification unless significant developments occur.

ONTARIO

Poplar Hill First Nation (ON) – Power Outage - Diesel Generator Failure
The Poplar Hill First Nation (236) is located approximately 120 km north of Red Lake and east of Stout Lake, with an on-reserve population of approximately 418. It is accessible by winter road and air.

On Tuesday, January 22, 2013, at approximately 15:00 EST, the Health Canada Zone Director advised that, due to a generator malfunction, there was no power to most of the community, including the Health Station and nurses' residence. While one back-up generator was operational, it was not strong enough to meet the needs of the entire community. Maintenance staff set up two portable generators to provide heat only to the Health Station and the nurses' residence.

On Friday, January 25, 2013, the AANDC ON Regional Office indicated that power had been restored to the community.

This will be the final notification unless significant developments occur.

Wunnumin Lake - Diesel Generator System Malfunction
The Wunnumin First Nation (217) is located approximately 385 km northeast of Sioux Lookout with an on-reserve population of approximately 533. The First Nation is only accessible by fly-in or ice road in the winter. The ice road is currently in good condition.

On Thursday, January 24, 2013, the Wunnumin Lake First Nation reported that their second of two working power generators had stopped operating due to a serious malfunction. A third generator has not been operational since December 2012.

On Friday, January 25, the AANDC ON Regional Office reported that the service provider had arrived at the community and was assessing the repairs required. It is unlikely that the assessment results will be available until Monday, January 28, 2013.

The community requires additional funding in order to proceed with repairs.

The AANDC ON Regional Office continues to monitor the situation.

Updates will be provided as new information becomes available.

Gull Bay First Nation – Water Treatment Plant and Fire Prevention Operations
The Gull Bay First Nation (188) is located approximately 180 km north of Thunder Bay with an on-reserve population of approximately 343.

On Tuesday, January 22, 2013, the community reported that some essential services were affected due extreme cold weather and vandalism. The fuel lines from the external heating fuel tank to the Fire Hall were damaged, apparently due to fuel theft. This caused both the Reverse Osmosis (RO) unit, which the community relies on for drinking water, and the fire truck to freeze. It is unknown at this time if leaked fuel oil has caused ground contamination.

According to the AANDC ON Regional Office, it does appear that the RO unit can be repaired. Northern Water Works (NWW) has had one site visit and will return to the community to repair, clean and test the RO unit on Monday, January 28, 2013. Bacterial testing results should be available in 24 hours and it is anticipated that the RO unit will be functional by the end of next week.

Although the community's fire truck appears to be functional, it will need to be pressurized and assessed by a qualified technician. Currently, fire protection in the community is compromised as the current pumps would take at least one hour to fill the fire truck.

The First Nation have been advised to move the fuel tanks inside for protection from further theft and vandalism.

The community is currently using a water treatment plant which provides chlorination treatment without filtration; therefore, a boil water advisory is currently in effect. The AANDC ON Regional Office has contacted the Nokiiwin Tribal Council to arrange for the purchase and delivery of bottled water to the community at a cost of $5K per week.

Teleconferences have been held throughout the week between Health Canada, AANDC ON Regional Office, NWW, the tribal council and the community.

The AANDC ON Regional Office continues to monitor the situation.

Updates will be provided as new information becomes available.

SASKATCHEWAN

Standing Buffalo First Nation – Protest Occupation of Band Office - Governance Dispute
The Standing Buffalo First Nation (386) is located approximately 102 km northeast of Regina with an on-reserve population of approximately 443.

Since January 18, 2013, five members of the Standing Buffalo First Nation's Senate Council have occupied the First Nation's Band Council office. They have indicated that their occupation will continue until their decision to impeach the current chief and all but one of the band council is recognized.

Standing Buffalo First Nation is governed by its own custom election act. The First Nation's Senate Council received a complaint on December 21, 2012 about the level of salary and travel expenses received by Standing Buffalo's Chief and Council. On January 18, 2013, the Senate Council held impeachment hearings which resulted in the decision to remove of all but one of the elected officials, including the Chief.

On January 21, 2013, departmental officials met with Chief and Council and the First Nation Senate Council at the Band Office to explain the Department's position during a custom governance dispute is to ensure no disruption to AANDC programs and services, while the community to resolve its internal governance matters. Should the community be unable to resolve its dispute, then it is recommended they seek resolution in the courts.

Regional Health Canada (First Nation Inuit Health Branch) colleagues have been kept appraised of these developments and are monitoring delivery of health programs and services.

The AANDC SK Regional Office continues to monitor this situation.

Updates will be provided as new information becomes available.

"Idle No More" Protests Situation Report
Since Sunday, December 9, 2012, approximately 322 protests have occurred as part of an announced program of activism called 'Idle No More', which is being promoted through traditional and social media.

Idle No More is partly a response to Bill C-45, the omnibus budget bill which includes changes to the Indian Act, the Fisheries Act and the Navigable Waters Protection Act and partly a call for changes to the broader relationship between Canada and First Nations.

On Tuesday, December 11, 2012, Chief Theresa Spence of the Attawapiskat First Nation (ON) began a hunger strike protest on Victoria Island which lasted until Thursday, January 24, 2013.

All protests which have already occurred have been peaceful, however, some have affected the transportation sector. To date, approximately 83 protests have resulted in either interruption to rail services and border crossings or delays on various highways, streets and bridges.

While all protests have been peaceful, a significant number involved traffic disruptions: there were 23 partial blockades and 36 full blockades of either rail lines, highways, ferry stations, or bridges, as well as 24 traffic slowdowns of highways. Other protests (233) included peaceful demonstrations, marches, flash mobs in shopping centers or gatherings. There was also a one-day occupation of the AANDC ON Region Thunder Bay Office.

Please note that these numbers have been adjusted from prior situation reports; duplicate entries due to ongoing protests have been removed. A total of five protests (one traffic slowdown and four blockades) have lasted for more than one day.

The next event of significance for "Idle No More" is the International Call to Action (Global Day of Action) that is expected to occur on Monday, January 28, 2013.

Except where otherwise stated, all information in this report was provided by AANDC Regional Offices, Public Safety Canada and media reports.

Updates will be provided as new information becomes available.

Good Day

CI situational reporting for 2013-01-25.

Reports received indicate that nine events are currently planned for today, January 25 in Alberta, Ontario, British Columbia, and Quebec. Planned events include flash mobs/round dances, rallies, traffic interruptions, a youth forum and teach-in/ information sessions. There are seventeen events planned for January 26 and 27, in Alberta, British Columbia, Ontario, and Quebec.

Currently, there are thirty-nine events planned to occur across Canada on January 28. (U)

CIIT COMMENTS:

Supporters of the Idle No More aboriginal rights movement will hold nationwide protests on January 28. Demonstrations will take place at some government facilities in downtown areas of major cities; traffic and business disruptions may occur.

To date, most of the protest activity associated to Idle No More has been peaceful. However, protest actions have interfered with the lawful movement of people, traffic and goods.

Founders of Idle No More to attend People's Social Forum in Ottawa

Activists from across the country will be coming together this weekend in Ottawa to unite their movements against the right-wing policies of the Harper government. They are joined by two of Idle No More's founders. Jessica Gordon and Sheelah McLean are scheduled to address the meeting at 1:30 p.m. on Saturday January 26th.

At a general assembly set to take place at the University of Ottawa on January 26th and 27th, a number of activists from national social movements plan to launch a process that will pave the way towards a countrywide Canada-Quebec-Indigenous People's Social Forum scheduled for 2014. The forum's purpose is to establish a structure for uniting social movements against Harper's conservative policies. This weekend's assembly will feature Jérémie Bédard-Wien, spokesperson for the militant Québec student organization ASSÉ, as well as many representatives from national unions (Postal workers, Public Sector, Communications and Energy, etc.) and labour federations (Ontario Federation of Labour and Québec's FTQ, CSN and CSQ). The co-founders of the Québec branch of Idle No More, Widia Larivière and Mélissa Mollen Dupuis, will also be in attendance.

Almost a year ago, Quebec was deep into the Maple Spring. Today, the red feathers are sweeping the country. Both movements have been drawing closer, demonstrating the general will amongst social movements to join forces together and fight against Harper's policies.

"The student unrest we saw last year has really inspired us. We figure if collective anger can make a Premier disappear, then maybe it can have the same effect on Harper." - Mélissa Mollen Dupuis.

"Their movement [Idle No More] is an inspiration to Quebec students. It's clear that both movements can work together to defeawhat affects us both" - Jérémie Bédard-Wien (ASSÉ).

Michel Lambert, Executive Director of Alternatives, a national and international solidarity organization that is at the source of the project adds "our objective with this Ottawa gathering is to have social movements converge in order to create the largest alliance ever seen in Canada to oppose the most reactionary government in our history."

Subject: Idle No More updates for ""B" Division

Good afternoon,

The following is provided as an update on planned events that are anticipated to be occurring in "B" Division regarding the "Idle No More" January 28, 2013 Day of Action .

Labrador:
On Sunday January 27th, 2013 there will be a peaceful walk from the Elizabeth Goudie Building to the Labrador Friendship Center. The walk is only a few hundred meters in duration, advising to come on the walk and have coffee at the Friendship Center following the event.
There is no events planned for January 28th.
Newfoundland:

The Qalipu First Nations has a demonstration scheduled for Sunday January 27th, 2013 at the Sir Richard Squires Building in Corner Brook, NL. They may also have another demonstration in front of their own building on January 30th 2013, however, this has not been confirmed as going forward.
The City of Corner Brook, NL receives policing services from the Royal Newfoundland Constabulary and they have been advised of this information.l

There is no other information available at this time.

Lytton First Nations have changed their minds and they will not be blockading CN Rail, they do plan to set up on the highway as they did a couple of weeks ago. It's not known if they plan to blockade or just demonstrate.

HOT SPOT SUMMARY

(New information has been bolded for your convenience.)

Except where otherwise stated, all information in this report was provided by AANDC Regional Offices.

ATLANTIC – NEWFOUNDLAND

Qalipu Mi'kmaq First Nation – Protest Demonstration – Band Council Office – Delays in Band Application Process

The Qalipu Mi'kmaq First Nation was created on September 26, 2011. It is a landless band whose members will have access to programs and benefits currently available to other Status Indians in Canada. The Band Council office is located in Corner Brook, Newfoundland.

On Monday, January 21, 2013, according to the media, a peaceful demonstration occurred in front of the Qalipu Mi'kmaq First Nation Band Council Office. Demonstrators were protesting delays in the application process to register for band membership before the agreement for recognition of the First Nation expires in March 2013.

The Minister of AANDC has appointed a special advisor to work with the Chief and Council to resolve this issue.

This will be the final notification unless significant developments occur.

QUEBEC

Long Point (Winneway) First Nation – Structural Fire with Fatalities
The Long Point First Nation (067), also known as Winneway, is located approximately 100km east of Ville-Marie, on the south bank of the river Winneway, near the Lac Simard with an on-reserve population of approximately 766.

On Monday, January 21, 2012, the AANDC QC Regional Office reported that a house fire had occurred within the community resulting in two fatalities.

Law enforcement partners are continuing to investigate.

This is the final notification unless significant developments occur.

ONTARIO

Poplar Hill First Nation (ON) – Power Outage - Diesel Generator Failure
The Poplar Hill First Nation (236) is located approximately 120 km north of Red Lake and east of Stout Lake, with an on-reserve population of approximately 418. It is accessible by winter road and air.

On Tuesday, January 22, 2013, at approximately 15:00 EST, the Health Canada Zone Director advised that, due to a generator malfunction, there was no power to most of the community, including the Health Station and nurses' residence. While one back-up generator was operational, it was not strong enough to meet the needs of the entire community. Maintenance staff set up two portable generators to provide heat only to the Health Station and the nurses' residence.

On Friday, January 25, 2013, the AANDC ON Regional Office indicated that power had been restored to the community.

This will be the final notification unless significant developments occur.

Wunnumin Lake - Diesel Generator System Malfunction
The Wunnumin First Nation (217) is located approximately 385 km northeast of Sioux Lookout with an on-reserve population of approximately 533. The First Nation is only accessible by fly-in or ice road in the winter. The ice road is currently in good condition.

On Thursday, January 24, 2013, the Wunnumin Lake First Nation reported that their second of two working power generators had stopped operating due to a serious malfunction. A third generator has not been operational since December 2012.

On Friday, January 25, the AANDC ON Regional Office reported that the service provider had arrived at the community and was assessing the repairs required. It is unlikely that the assessment results will be available until Monday, January 28, 2013.

The community requires additional funding in order to proceed with repairs.

The AANDC ON Regional Office continues to monitor the situation.

Updates will be provided as new information becomes available.

Gull Bay First Nation – Water Treatment Plant and Fire Prevention Operations
The Gull Bay First Nation (188) is located approximately 180 km north of Thunder Bay with an on-reserve population of approximately 343.

On Tuesday, January 22, 2013, the community reported that some essential services were affected due extreme cold weather and vandalism. The fuel lines from the external heating fuel tank to the Fire Hall were damaged, apparently due to fuel theft. This caused both the Reverse Osmosis (RO) unit, which the community relies on for drinking water, and the fire truck to freeze. It is unknown at this time if leaked fuel oil has caused ground contamination.

According to the AANDC ON Regional Office, it does appear that the RO unit can be repaired. Northern Water Works (NWW) has had one site visit and will return to the community to repair, clean and test the RO unit on Monday, January 28, 2013. Bacterial testing results should be available in 24 hours and it is anticipated that the RO unit will be functional by the end of next week.

Although the community's fire truck appears to be functional, it will need to be pressurized and assessed by a qualified technician. Currently, fire protection in the community is compromised as the current pumps would take at least one hour to fill the fire truck.

The First Nation have been advised to move the fuel tanks inside for protection from further theft and vandalism.

The community is currently using a water treatment plant which provides chlorination treatment without filtration; therefore, a boil water advisory is currently in effect. The AANDC ON Regional Office has contacted the Nokiiwin Tribal Council to arrange for the purchase and delivery of bottled water to the community at a cost of $5K per week.

Teleconferences have been held throughout the week between Health Canada, AANDC ON Regional Office, NWW, the tribal council and the community.

The AANDC ON Regional Office continues to monitor the situation.

Updates will be provided as new information becomes available.

SASKATCHEWAN

Standing Buffalo First Nation – Protest Occupation of Band Office - Governance Dispute

The Standing Buffalo First Nation (386) is located approximately 102 km northeast of Regina with an on-reserve population of approximately 443.

Since January 18, 2013, five members of the Standing Buffalo First Nation's Senate Council have occupied the First Nation's Band Council office. They have indicated that their occupation will continue until their decision to impeach the current chief and all but one of the band council is recognized.

Standing Buffalo First Nation is governed by its own custom election act. The First Nation's Senate Council received a complaint on December 21, 2012 about the level of salary and travel expenses received by Standing Buffalo's Chief and Council. On January 18, 2013, the Senate Council held impeachment hearings which resulted in the decision to remove of all but one of the elected officials, including the Chief.

On January 21, 2013, departmental officials met with Chief and Council and the First Nation Senate Council at the Band Office to explain the Department's position during a custom governance dispute is to ensure no disruption to AANDC programs and services, while the community to resolve its internal governance matters. Should the community be unable to resolve its dispute, then it is recommended they seek resolution in the courts.

Regional Health Canada (First Nation Inuit Health Branch) colleagues have been kept appraised of these developments and are monitoring delivery of health programs and services.

The AANDC SK Regional Office continues to monitor this situation.

Updates will be provided as new information becomes available.

"Idle No More" Protests Situation Report

Since Sunday, December 9, 2012, approximately 322 protests have occurred as part of an announced program of activism called 'Idle No More', which is being promoted through traditional and social media.

Idle No More is partly a response to Bill C-45, the omnibus budget bill which includes changes to the Indian Act, the Fisheries Act and the Navigable Waters Protection Act and partly a call for changes to the broader relationship between Canada and First Nations.

On Tuesday, December 11, 2012, Chief Theresa Spence of the Attawapiskat First Nation (ON) began a hunger strike protest on Victoria Island which lasted until Thursday, January 24, 2013.

All protests which have already occurred have been peaceful, however, some have affected the transportation sector. To date, approximately 83 protests have resulted in either interruption to rail services and border crossings or delays on various highways, streets and bridges.

While all protests have been peaceful, a significant number involved traffic disruptions: there were 23 partial blockades and 36 full blockades of either rail lines, highways, ferry stations, or bridges, as well as 24 traffic slowdowns of highways. Other protests (233) included peaceful demonstrations, marches, flash mobs in shopping centers or gatherings. There was also a one-day occupation of the AANDC ON Region Thunder Bay Office.

Please note that these numbers have been adjusted from prior situation reports; duplicate entries due to ongoing protests have been removed. A total of five protests (one traffic slowdown and four blockades) have lasted for more than one day.

The next event of significance for "Idle No More" is the International Call to Action (Global Day of Action) that is expected to occur on Monday, January 28, 2013.

Except where otherwise stated, all information in this report was provided by AANDC Regional Offices, Public Safety Canada and media reports.

Updates will be provided as new information becomes available.

FYI:

CBC News:

The Idle-No-More protesters appeared to be regrouping for further demonstrations in the next week with only a few reports of protest activity across the country Saturday and Sunday.

Day of Action planned for Jan. 28

There has been talk of blockades and demonstrations against pipelines and mining development in hot spots across the country to draw attention to aboriginal economic problems. Facebook postings mention ramped-up protests planned for Wednesday and the movement's website calls for a global "Day of Action" for Jan. 28.
At the same time, the Assembly of First Nations is fractured, even as it is tasked to figure out if diverse regions can sit down and re-examine the treaties that have defined their relationship with the Crown for decades, or even centuries.

ISSUE: Status update regarding BC 'Idle No More' public awareness campaign in British Columbia. (File EDIV 2013-083)

BACKGROUND:

$ The 'Idle No More' (INM) movement continues to hold peaceful and brief public awareness demonstrations regarding First Nations relations with the Government of Canada, as well as in solidarity with Attawapiskat Chief Spence who held a 44-day hunger strike from December 11, 2012 to January 24, 2013.

$ Demonstrations have been held at shopping malls, First Nations and government buildings, roads and highways, and international border crossings. To date, all demonstrations have been peaceful with varying attendance.

$ On January 11th Prime Minister Harper met with approximately 20 First Nations leaders. An 'Idle No More' National Day of Action was organized to coincide with the meeting. Approximately 35 'Idle No More' demonstrations occurred in BC.

- On January 16th a "National Day of Action" was organized advocating to "disrupt the Canadian economy." Three relatively minor demonstrations occurred in BC.

CURRENT STATUS:

$ On January 24th Attawapiskat Chief Spence ended her hunger strike after other Chiefs and federal opposition parties signed a declaration addressing specific concerns made by Spence.

- On January 24th National Chief Shawn Atleo held a press conference where he reiterated his call for the federal government to improve relations with First Nations and praised the Idle No More movement in raising the issues to the Canadian public.

$ Today, another "National Day of Action" was scheduled to coincide with the re-opening of Parliament. Numerous peaceful demonstrations occurred in BC:

  - Vancouver: Aboriginal and Northern Development office
  - Kelowna: Sandman Inn (coincide with Enbridge NEB hearings)
  - Lytton: Highway 1
  - Vernon: Village Green Mall
  - Fort Nelson: Fort Nelson downtown
  - Terrace: George Little Park
  - Fort St John: Conservative MP Office
  - Nelson: Intersection of Ward St. and Baker St.
  - Castlegar: Castlegar City Hall
  - Port Alberni: North Island College
  - Nanaimo: Diana Krall Plaza

- Comox: Dyke Rd.
- Victoria: Centennial Square

$ Upcoming 'Idle No More' demonstrations (refer to attached timeline):

  $ January 31 – Vancouver UBC: Museum of Anthropology
  $ February 2 – Victoria: Centennial Square
  $ February 2 – Alert Bay to Victoria: March from Alert Bay to Parliament
  $ February 3 – Duncan: Quw'utsen Centre

$ CN Rail has court issued injunctions that are enforceable province wide.

$ This information has been shared with local detachments and public safety agencies including, Vancouver Police Department, Victoria Police Department, Stl'atl'imx Tribal Police, E Division BIP/Ports, CBSA, CN Police, CP Police, Marine Security Operations Centre (MSOC) and Ministry of Aboriginal Relations and Reconciliation (MARR).

$ Further information will be shared with impacted jurisdictions through District Command.

STRATEGIC CONSIDERATIONS:

$ The Idle No More movement has succeeded to garner political and media attention, however, efforts to raise awareness of First Nations issues remains. Demonstrations continue to be organised throughout the province.

- FNP (First Nations Policing) Members are encouraged to proactively engage their communities and advise of upcoming public order events to District Command.

PUBLIC SAFETY PROTOCOLS:

$ None to report at this time.

Innu community raise concerns over N.L. Government's decision to ban hunting of George River caribou

ISSUE:

· The Newfoundland and Labrador government announced a five-year ban on hunting caribou from the George River herd in Labrador. There has been significant public outcry from some within the Innu community regarding this announcement.

BACKGROUND:

· 2013-01-28 Newfoundland and Labrador Justice Minister, Environment Minister and Aboriginal Affairs Minister made a public announcement regarding the hunting ban of the George River caribou herd that will apply to all hunters, including aboriginals.

· A recent census put the population at less than 20,000 animals, a decline of more than 70 per cent since July 2010.

· The Métis and the Inuit leaders have agreed to stop hunting George River caribou for two years, but the Innu have always argued that their aboriginal rights trump the province's hunting laws and have indicated that they would continue to hunt.

· The NL Government has taken the position that conservation of the George River herd takes precedent over aboriginal rights to hunt.

· Innu leaders have raised concerns regarding the NL Government's lack of consultation prior to making this announcement and the fact that the hunting ban applies only when the herd is in Labrador. The Newfoundland and Labrador government has no control over the animals when they migrate into Quebec.

· will continue to hunt George River caribou despite a five-year ban announced. indicated that the ban will disrupt the culture of the Innu people in Labrador.

· Innu Nation, said that the ban is unjustified and it is a threat to their way of life.

· 2013-01-29 During a heated exchange between Simeon Tshakapesh and VOCM "Open Line" host Randy Simms, Tshakapesh indicated that this incident was indicative of bigger problems between the NL Government and the Innu Nation. He referenced evicting the Provincial Court from their building in the community of Natuashish.

· There is indication that made reference to seeking legal advice on the matter and bringing the "Idle No More Movement" to Labrador.

CURRENT STATUS:

· contacted the RCMP detachment in Natuashish on the evening of 2013-01-29 to inform the acting NCOi/c that he would be encouraging hunting activities as he did not feel the Innu had to respect this ban. declined an invitation to meet and discuss these matters further with the police.
· It has been confirmed

· Scheduled Court went ahead in Natuashish on 2013-01-30 without incident. The next court date is scheduled for the week of 2013-02-25 and there has been no further mention of court disruption.
· At present the Provincial Fish and Wildlife Enforcement division of the NL Department of Justice is the lead enforcement agency. The RCMP will continue to monitor the situation, gather intelligence and assist the Provincial Fish and Wildlife Enforcement Division as required.
· The RCMP will continue working with and engaging the Innu community, other stakeholders as well as our enforcement partners as this situation unfolds.

ISSUE: Status update regarding BC 'Idle No More' public awareness campaign in British Columbia. (File EDIV 2013-083)

BACKGROUND:

$ The 'Idle No More' (INM) movement continues to hold peaceful and brief public awareness demonstrations regarding First Nations relations with the Government of Canada, as well as in solidarity with Attawapiskat Chief Spence who held a 44-day hunger strike from December 11, 2012 to January 24, 2013.

$ Demonstrations have been held at shopping malls, First Nations and government buildings, roads and highways, and international border crossings. To date, all demonstrations have been peaceful with varying attendance.

$ On January 11th Prime Minister Harper met with approximately 20 First Nations leaders. An 'Idle No More' National Day of Action was organized to coincide with the meeting. Approximately 35 'Idle No More' demonstrations occurred in BC.

- On January 16th a "National Day of Action" was organized advocating to "disrupt the Canadian economy." Three relatively minor demonstrations occurred in BC.

CURRENT STATUS:

$ 14 relatively brief and peaceful demonstrations occurred on the January 28th "National Day of Action." To date, there is no information to suggest of another Day of Action.

$ Upcoming 'Idle No More' demonstrations (refer to attached timeline):

  $ January 31 – Vancouver UBC: Museum of Anthropology
  $ February 2 – Victoria: Centennial Square
  $ February 2 – Alert Bay to Victoria: March from Alert Bay to Parliament
  $ February 3 – Duncan: Quw'utsen Centre
  $ February 8 – Vancouver: CTV Studios
  $ February 8 – Terrace: Northwest Community College longhouse (tentative location)

$ CN Rail has court issued injunctions that are enforceable province wide.

$ On February 5th an Idle No More writing campaign requesting for the rescindment of Bill C-45 (Jobs and Growth Act) is scheduled.

$ This information has been shared with local detachments and public safety agencies including, Vancouver Police Department, Victoria Police Department, Stl'atl'imx Tribal Police, E Division BIP/Ports, CBSA, CN Police, CP Police, Marine Security Operations Centre (MSOC) and Ministry of Aboriginal Relations and Reconciliation (MARR).

STRATEGIC CONSIDERATIONS:

$ The Idle No More movement has abated somewhat, however, efforts to raise awareness of First Nations issues remains. A writing campaign is scheduled and demonstrations continue to be organised.

- FNP (First Nations Policing) Members are encouraged to proactively engage their communities and advise of upcoming public order events to District Command.

PUBLIC SAFETY PROTOCOLS:

$ None to report at this time.

Support the Youth of NunatuKavut

The youth of NunatuKavut will gather near Happy Valley-Goose Bay on Saturday February 2, 2013
in defense of their aboriginal rights
& in protest of the Muskrat Falls project.

As our youth gather, we urge each of you to come out and join with them!

NunatuKavut will provide a travel subsidy to help off-set the cost for any members outside of Happy Valley-Goose Bay who are interested in attending.

For details or to avail of the subsidy, please contact us at

Peace Regional Detachment has be advised of a First Nations protest planned for 2013-02-09 at 1430 hours. The event is to take place on 100th Street in the Town of Peace River, AB. At this time it is believed that the event will attract 30-50 persons walking from the River Drive Mall to the Boston Pizza and back. This is a 3 kilometer walk and they plan to use the sidewalks. Traffic will not be impeded. Peace Regional Detachment members have made contact with the organizer to discuss their intentions and to ensure the safety of the protestors and the general public. Peace Regional Detachment members will be on scene to monitor the protest and address issues accordingly.

NCO i/c Peace Regional Detachment and WAD District Commander have been advised. File 2013-120009 refers with detailed BN to follow.

NATIONAL

Idle no More Protests - Update
As reported on Friday, February 1, 2013, a number of scheduled First Nation protests in support of the "Idle No More" grassroots campaign occurred over the weekend.

Public Safety Canada's Government Operations Centre (GOC) has reported that all First Nation protest activities were peaceful in nature.

At this time, it is unknown how many protestors participated in the various events.

Updates will be provided as new information becomes available.

ONTARIO

Fort Severn First Nation – Water Main Break - School Closure - Update
The Fort Severn First Nation (215) is located north of Severn River on Hudson Bay with an on-reserve population of approximately 508. As a remote community, the First Nation is only accessible by air or ice road in winter.

On Tuesday, January 29, 2013, the AANDC ON Regional Office reported a water main break had occurred in the community, resulting in the decision to close the local school.

Although the community is making progress in remediating the issues resulting from this break, four homes are still without water. Work continues despite difficulties restoring the water main on account of cold weather. Two shipments of water have also been delivered to the First Nation by air.

This is the second water main break to affect the community in a month. The earlier water main break occurred on Thursday, January 17, 2012.

Additionally, the AANDC ON Regional Office reports that the community requires 13 plane loads of fuel to maintain heat and power until winter road delivery can begin. The community has also lost the use of one of its two sewage trucks.

Over the weekend the Ontario Regional Office reported that the water main break has been repaired and water is being provided to both reservoirs. It is estimated that these will be filled in the next seven days.

School classes have resumed as of Friday, February 1, 2013. As a result of the work being done on the water main, a water line was damaged to one teacherage and is currently being repaired. Water had been restored to all buildings except for one administration building.

Four homes are still without water. Work continues but there are still difficulties restoring water to the homes due to the cold weather. The First Nation's Band Manager advised that the situation was improving and that the occupants of these four homes are being accommodated within the community.

The First Nation required 13 plane loads of fuels to get by until winter roads are complete. The first plane load of fuel was delivered early Friday, February 1, 2013. The next plane load was expected on Sunday, February 3, 2013.

The existing sewage trucks are problematic and high maintenance; due to this a decision was made to purchase one new truck. AANDC approved funding on Thursday, January 31, 2013, to provide for the purchase and delivery of the new sewage truck.

The First Nation's winter road is close to completion. Road crews were expected to be in the community this weekend. Once complete, they estimate that it will take approximately 7 days to have good ice conditions.

AANDC and the First Nation are working together to ensure the health and safety of the First Nation community members are maintained. AANDC will hold a teleconference with the First Nation tomorrow, February 4, 2013 to obtain a status update on all issues.

The AANDC ON Regional Office continues to monitor the situation.

Updates will be provided as new information becomes available.

Mohawk tribal chief: protest without closing bridgeBy TIM FENSTER
JOHNSON NEWSPAPERS
SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 2013

MASSENA — Mohawk tribal leaders are now urging members not to engage in protests that block the Seaway International Bridge. They stated their position in a news release issued a month after a peaceful march closing the bridge between Massena and Cornwall, Ontario, drew criticism for halting traffic.
Town of Massena Supervisor Joseph D. Gray has called the bridge-closing protests "pointless," coming under criticism himself for his reaction to the tribe's protest of Canadian policies.
And now some tribal official are questioning demonstrations that impact travel across the border.
St. Regis Mohawk Tribal Chief Ron LaFrance said he would prefer demonstrators in the Idle No More movement pursue methods of protest that do not affect travelers.
He said while he supports the movement and the Jan. 5 march, "I believe there are other ways of holding a demonstration that do not include blocking the bridge."
The three Mohawk governing bodies issued a joint statement last week regarding the "Day of Action," which took place Monday in cities across the United States and Canada. While no demonstrations took place that day on the Mohawk reservation, some supporters of the Idle No More movement traveled to Ottawa, where hundreds gathered in a demonstration on Parliament Hill.
Tribal officials also asked demonstrators to exercise caution and foresight if they planned to block routes of transportation.
"The Mohawk Council of Akwesasne, Saint Regis Mohawk Tribe and Mohawk Nation Council of Chiefs do not — at this time — endorse any local rally or activity that could result in the closure of the Three Nations Bridge Crossing. While the leadership does support the Idle No More movement, activities which could result in a bridge closure must be planned well enough in advance for community members to make necessary arrangements," according to the statement.
Several days after the Jan. 5 march, Mr. Gray posted a blog charging the bridge closure was detrimental to the local economy. Mr. Gray has since apologized for the blog, saying he made some statements he wished he hadn't.
"Protests are an acceptable, meaningful way to get a point across, but I would hope we can find another way for protests to be as visible without closing the bridge," Mr. Gray said Jan. 10. "I think that message was lost in my original blog, and there were some words (in it) I shouldn't have used."
Village of Massena Mayor James F. Hidy, who held a news conference to show his support for Mr. Gray's position, applauded the tri-council statement, saying it helps promote unity between the Massena and Mohawk communities.
"I'm encouraged to see that tribal council officials can see other point of views in regards to demonstration," Mr. Hidy said. "It demonstrates how our two communities can work together to strive for a more effective region, economically and (in regards to) tourism."
Idle No More is a response to a Canadian federal budget bill that reduces some environmental protections and would allow private developers to buy tribal land.
Many tribal leaders say the bill violates their treaty rights.
According to tribe member Curtis H. White, the bill is just the latest in a long-running history of legislation meant to reduce the rights of Indian tribes in Canada and the United States. The Idle No More protests are a way of speaking out against these decisions. Mr. LaFrance noted the march was a grass-roots effort and the tribal council was not involved in organizing or staging the march.
Also in the weeks since Mr. Gray published his controversial blog, one of Idle No More's co-founders, Sylvia McAdam, has decried protests that block international routes of transportation, calling them "not peaceful" and saying they "portray a message of aggressiveness," according to CBC News in Canada.
However, Charles "Chaz" Kader, clerk of the Men's Council of the People of the Way of the Longhouse, believes Ms. McAdam's statements were broad in scope and may not necessarily have applied to the Akwesasne people, who are in a unique position in regard to the border.
"Different actions were taken at different (Idle No More) protests. (The march) was really to me an expression of the people of Akwesasne," Mr. Kader said. "Akwesasne politics will always be influenced by the border that runs through our land."
Mr. Kader was also surprised by the joint press release by the Mohawk councils, noting tribal officials do not play a role in planning or organizing Idle No More activities. He believes most in the Akwesasne community, including tribal government officials, support demonstrations that close the bridge, but only when it's in response to an issue of vital importance to the reservation's residents.
"I think the people here have the right to do whatever has to be done. And clearly the bridge is on Akwesasne land," Mr. Kader said. "No one I've spoken to is against closing the bridge for necessary reasons."

Mr. Kader expects some in the community may call for future bridge-closing demonstrations to speak out against the possible relocation of a Canadian customs checkpoint to the American side of the bridge.

HOT SPOT SUMMARY

(New information has been bolded for your convenience.)

Except where otherwise stated, all information in this report was provided by AANDC Regional Offices.

QUEBEC

Montagnais de Natashquan First Nation – Protest– AANDC QC Regional Office
The Montagnais de Natashquan First Nation (083) is situated at the mouth of the Natashquan River and the Gulf of St. Lawrence, approximately 336 km east of Sept-Iles, with an on-reserve population of approximately 963.

On Thursday, January 31, 2013, the AANDC QC Regional Office reported that the Chief and community members of the Montagnais de Natashquan First Nation had held two peaceful demonstrations. The first occurred on-reserve Wednesday, January 30, 2013, in front of the offices of the third party manager. The second occurred on Thursday, January 31, 2013, in front of the AANDC QC Regional Office. Both protests ended peacefully.

The Chief has indicated that protestors want a full investigation into how the band funds are used by the third-party manager.

This will be the final notification for this incident unless significant developments occur.

ONTARIO

Fort Severn First Nation – Water Main Break - School Closure

The Fort Severn First Nation (215) is located north of Severn River on Hudson Bay with an on-reserve population of approximately 508. As a remote community, the First Nation is only accessible by air or ice road in winter.

On Tuesday, January 29, 2013, the AANDC ON Regional Office reported a water main break had occurred in the community, resulting in the decision to close the local school.

Although the community is making progress in remediating the issues resulting from this break, four homes are still without water. Work continues despite difficulties restoring the water main on account of cold weather. Two shipments of water have also been delivered to the First Nation by air.

This is the second water main break to affect the community in a month. The earlier water main break occurred on Thursday, January 17, 2012.

Additionally, the AANDC ON Regional Office reports that the community requires 13 plane loads of fuel to maintain heat and power until winter road delivery can begin. The community has also lost the use of one of its two sewage trucks.

The AANDC ON Regional Office continues to monitor the situation.

Updates will be provided as new information becomes available.

Wunnumin Lake First Nation - Diesel Generator Failure

The Wunnumin Lake First Nation (217) is located approximately 385 km northeast of Sioux Lookout with an on-reserve population of approximately 533.

On Thursday, January 24, 2013, the community reported that both of their working generators had failed. A third generator has not been operational since December 2012.

On Wednesday, January 30, 2013, the AANDC ON Regional Office reported that two of the three generators have been repaired. The third will be repaired once cost estimates are received.

The AANDC ON Regional Office continues to monitor the situation.

This will be the final notification for this incident unless significant developments occur.

Gull Bay First Nation – Damage to Water Treatment Plant and Fire Prevention Equipment

The Gull Bay First Nation (188) is located approximately 180 km north of Thunder Bay with an on-reserve population of approximately 343.

On Tuesday, January 22, 2013, the community reported that some essential services were affected by extreme cold weather and vandalism. The fuel lines from the external heating fuel tank to the Fire Hall were damaged, possibly due to fuel theft. This caused both the Reverse Osmosis (RO) unit and the fire truck to freeze.

AANDC ON Regional Office reports that Northern Water Works (NWW) is scheduled to repair, clean and test the RO unit. Bacterial testing results should be available within 24 hours after repair and it is anticipated that the RO unit will soon be functional.

Although the community's fire truck appears to be functional, it will need to be pressurized and assessed by a qualified technician. Currently, fire protection in the community is compromised as the current pumps would take at least one hour to fill the fire truck.

A boil water advisory is currently in effect, and bottled water is being distributed.

AANDC ON Regional Office is in contact with Health Canada, NWW, the tribal council and the community.

No updates were available as of Friday, February 1, 2013. AANDC ON Regional Office expects to receive an updated report on the situation by next week.

The AANDC ON Regional Office continues to monitor the situation.

Updates will be provided as new information becomes available.

SASKATCHEWAN

Standing Buffalo First Nation – Protest – Occupation of Band Office - Governance Dispute

The Standing Buffalo First Nation (386) is located approximately 102 km northeast of Regina with an on-reserve population of approximately 443.

Since January 18, 2013, five members of the Standing Buffalo First Nation's Senate Council have been occupying the First Nation's Band Council office. They have indicated that their occupation will continue until their decision to impeach the current chief and all but one of the band council is recognized.

Standing Buffalo First Nation is governed by its own custom election code. The First Nation's Senate Council received a complaint on December 21, 2012 about the level of salary and travel expenses received by Standing Buffalo's Chief and Council. On January 18, 2013, the Senate Council held impeachment hearings which resulted in the decision to remove all but one of the elected officials, including the Chief.

On Tuesday, January 29, 2013, the AANDC SK Regional Office reported that there are no disruptions to essential programs, services and activities.

This is the final notification unless significant developments occur.

FINAL NOTIFICATIONS ISSUED THIS WEEK

Please note that all the events below have been closed; no further notifications will be issued unless significant developments occur:

- NIL

Since Sunday, December 9, 2012, approximately 419 protests have occurred as part of an announced program of activism called 'Idle No More', which is being promoted through traditional and social media.

Idle No More is partly a response to Bill C-45, the omnibus budget bill which includes changes to the Indian Act, the Fisheries Act and the Navigable Waters Protection Act and partly a call for changes to the broader relationship between Canada and First Nations.

All protests which have already occurred have been peaceful, however some have affected the transportation sector. To date, approximately 93 protests have resulted in either interruption to rail services and border crossings or delays on various highways, streets and bridges.

While all protests have been peaceful, a significant number involved traffic disruptions: there were 24 partial blockades and 41 full blockades of either rail lines, highways, ferry stations, or bridges, as well as 28 traffic slowdowns of highways. Other protests (326) included peaceful demonstrations, marches, flash mobs in shopping centers or gatherings. There was also a one-day occupation of the AANDC ON Region Thunder Bay Office.

Except where otherwise stated, all information in this report was provided by AANDC Regional Offices, Public Safety Canada and media reports.

Updates will be provided as new information becomes available.

NATIONAL

Idle no More Protests - Update

As reported on Friday, February 1, 2013, a number of scheduled First Nation protests in support of the "Idle No More" grassroots campaign occurred over the weekend.

Public Safety Canada's Government Operations Centre (GOC) has reported that all First Nation protest activities were peaceful in nature.

At this time, it is unknown how many protestors participated in the various events.

Updates will be provided as new information becomes available.

ONTARIO

Fort Severn First Nation – Water Main Break - School Closure - Update

The Fort Severn First Nation (215) is located north of Severn River on Hudson Bay with an on-reserve population of approximately 508. As a remote community, the First Nation is only accessible by air or ice road in winter.

On Tuesday, January 29, 2013, the AANDC ON Regional Office reported a water main break had occurred in the community, resulting in the decision to close the local school.

Although the community is making progress in remediating the issues resulting from this break, four homes are still without water. Work continues despite difficulties restoring the water main on account of cold weather. Two shipments of water have also been delivered to the First Nation by air.

This is the second water main break to affect the community in a month. The earlier water main break occurred on Thursday, January 17, 2012.

Additionally, the AANDC ON Regional Office reports that the community requires 13 plane loads of fuel to maintain heat and power until winter road delivery can begin. The community has also lost the use of one of its two sewage trucks.

Over the weekend the Ontario Regional Office reported that the water main break has been repaired and water is being provided to both reservoirs. It is estimated that these will be filled in the next seven days.

School classes have resumed as of Friday, February 1, 2013. As a result of the work being done on the water main, a water line was damaged to one teacherage and is currently being repaired. Water had been restored to all buildings except for one administration building.

Four homes are still without water. Work continues but there are still difficulties restoring water to the homes due to the cold weather. The First Nation's Band Manager advised that the situation was improving and that the occupants of these four homes are being accommodated within the community.

The First Nation required 13 plane loads of fuels to get by until winter roads are complete. The first plane load of fuel was delivered early Friday, February 1, 2013. The next plane load was expected on Sunday, February 3, 2013.

The existing sewage trucks are problematic and high maintenance; due to this a decision was made to purchase one new truck. AANDC approved funding on Thursday, January 31, 2013, to provide for the purchase and delivery of the new sewage truck.

The First Nation's winter road is close to completion. Road crews were expected to be in the community this weekend. Once complete, they estimate that it will take approximately 7 days to have good ice conditions.

AANDC and the First Nation are working together to ensure the health and safety of the First Nation community members are maintained. AANDC will hold a teleconference with the First Nation tomorrow, February 4, 2013 to obtain a status update on all issues.

The AANDC ON Regional Office continues to monitor the situation.

Updates will be provided as new information becomes available.

HOT SPOT SUMMARY

(New information has been bolded for your convenience.)

Except where otherwise stated, all information in this report was provided by AANDC Regional Offices.

QUEBEC

Montagnais de Natashquan First Nation – Protest– AANDC QC Regional Office
The Montagnais de Natashquan First Nation (083) is situated at the mouth of the Natashquan River and the Gulf of St. Lawrence, approximately 336 km east of Sept-Iles, with an on-reserve population of approximately 963.

On Thursday, January 31, 2013, the AANDC QC Regional Office reported that the Chief and community members of the Montagnais de Natashquan First Nation had held two peaceful demonstrations. The first occurred on-reserve Wednesday, January 30, 2013, in front of the offices of the third party manager. The second occurred on Thursday, January 31, 2013, in front of the AANDC QC Regional Office. Both protests ended peacefully.

The Chief has indicated that protestors want a full investigation into how the band funds are used by the third-party manager.

This will be the final notification for this incident unless significant developments occur.

ONTARIO

Fort Severn First Nation – Water Main Break - School Closure
The Fort Severn First Nation (215) is located north of Severn River on Hudson Bay with an on-reserve population of approximately 508. As a remote community, the First Nation is only accessible by air or ice road in winter.

On Tuesday, January 29, 2013, the AANDC ON Regional Office reported a water main break had occurred in the community, resulting in the decision to close the local school.

Although the community is making progress in remediating the issues resulting from this break, four homes are still without water. Work continues despite difficulties restoring the water main on account of cold weather. Two shipments of water have also been delivered to the First Nation by air.

This is the second water main break to affect the community in a month. The earlier water main break occurred on Thursday, January 17, 2012.

Additionally, the AANDC ON Regional Office reports that the community requires 13 plane loads of fuel to maintain heat and power until winter road delivery can begin. The community has also lost the use of one of its two sewage trucks.

The AANDC ON Regional Office continues to monitor the situation.

Updates will be provided as new information becomes available.

Wunnumin Lake First Nation - Diesel Generator Failure
The Wunnumin Lake First Nation (217) is located approximately 385 km northeast of Sioux Lookout with an on-reserve population of approximately 533.

On Thursday, January 24, 2013, the community reported that both of their working generators had failed. A third generator has not been operational since December 2012.

On Wednesday, January 30, 2013, the AANDC ON Regional Office reported that two of the three generators have been repaired. The third will be repaired once cost estimates are received.

The AANDC ON Regional Office continues to monitor the situation.

This will be the final notification for this incident unless significant developments occur.

Gull Bay First Nation – Damage to Water Treatment Plant and Fire Prevention Equipment
The Gull Bay First Nation (188) is located approximately 180 km north of Thunder Bay with an on-reserve population of approximately 343.

On Tuesday, January 22, 2013, the community reported that some essential services were affected by extreme cold weather and vandalism. The fuel lines from the external heating fuel tank to the Fire Hall were damaged, possibly due to fuel theft. This caused both the Reverse Osmosis (RO) unit and the fire truck to freeze.

AANDC ON Regional Office reports that Northern Water Works (NWW) is scheduled to repair, clean and test the RO unit. Bacterial testing results should be available within 24 hours after repair and it is anticipated that the RO unit will soon be functional.

Although the community's fire truck appears to be functional, it will need to be pressurized and assessed by a qualified technician. Currently, fire protection in the community is compromised as the current pumps would take at least one hour to fill the fire truck.

A boil water advisory is currently in effect, and bottled water is being distributed.

AANDC ON Regional Office is in contact with Health Canada, NWW, the tribal council and the community.

No updates were available as of Friday, February 1, 2013. AANDC ON Regional Office expects to receive an updated report on the situation by next week.

The AANDC ON Regional Office continues to monitor the situation.

Updates will be provided as new information becomes available.

SASKATCHEWAN

Standing Buffalo First Nation – Protest – Occupation of Band Office - Governance Dispute
The Standing Buffalo First Nation (386) is located approximately 102 km northeast of Regina with an on-reserve population of approximately 443.

Since January 18, 2013, five members of the Standing Buffalo First Nation's Senate Council have been occupying the First Nation's Band Council office. They have indicated that their occupation will continue until their decision to impeach the current chief and all but one of the band council is recognized.

Standing Buffalo First Nation is governed by its own custom election code. The First Nation's Senate Council received a complaint on December 21, 2012 about the level of salary and travel expenses received by Standing Buffalo's Chief and Council. On January 18, 2013, the Senate Council held impeachment hearings which resulted in the decision to remove all but one of the elected officials, including the Chief.

On Tuesday, January 29, 2013, the AANDC SK Regional Office reported that there are no disruptions to essential programs, services and activities.

This is the final notification unless significant developments occur.

"Idle No More" Protests Situation Report
Since Sunday, December 9, 2012, approximately 419 protests have occurred as part of an announced program of activism called 'Idle No More', which is being promoted through traditional and social media.

Idle No More is partly a response to Bill C-45, the omnibus budget bill which includes changes to the Indian Act, the Fisheries Act and the Navigable Waters Protection Act and partly a call for changes to the broader relationship between Canada and First Nations.

All protests which have already occurred have been peaceful, however some have affected the transportation sector. To date, approximately 93 protests have resulted in either interruption to rail services and border crossings or delays on various highways, streets and bridges.

While all protests have been peaceful, a significant number involved traffic disruptions: there were 24 partial blockades and 41 full blockades of either rail lines, highways, ferry stations, or bridges, as well as 28 traffic slowdowns of highways. Other protests (326) included peaceful demonstrations, marches, flash mobs in shopping centers or gatherings. There was also a one-day occupation of the AANDC ON Region Thunder Bay Office.

Except where otherwise stated, all information in this report was provided by AANDC Regional Offices, Public Safety Canada and media reports.

Updates will be provided as new information becomes available.

There is a call out for February 14th, 21st and/or 28th to be a day of some kind of action. February 14th is a day of awareness for missing and murdered Aboriginal women and Idle No More is supporting that. Currently, the organizers are calling for primarily teach ins and awareness pieces. There have been no further responses from Alberta organizers at this point.

ISSUE: Status update regarding BC 'Idle No More' public awareness campaign in British Columbia. (File EDIV 2013-083)

BACKGROUND:

$ The 'Idle No More' (INM) movement continues to hold peaceful and brief public awareness demonstrations regarding First Nations relations with the Government of Canada, as well as in solidarity with Attawapiskat Chief Spence who held a 44-day hunger strike from December 11, 2012 to January 24, 2013.

$ Demonstrations have been held at shopping malls, First Nations and government buildings, roads and highways, and international border crossings. To date, all demonstrations have been peaceful with varying attendance.

$ On January 11th Prime Minister Harper met with approximately 20 First Nations leaders. An 'Idle No More' National Day of Action was organized to coincide with the meeting. Approximately 35 'Idle No More' demonstrations occurred in BC.

- On January 16th a "National Day of Action" was organized advocating to "disrupt the Canadian economy." Three relatively minor demonstrations occurred in BC.

$ The January 28th "National Day of Action" coincided with the re-opening of Parliament; 14 demonstrations occurred in BC.

CURRENT STATUS:

$ Ongoing 'Idle No More' demonstrations (refer to attached timeline):

  $ February 2-10 – Alert Bay to Victoria: Walk from Alert Bay to BC Legislature

$ Upcoming 'Idle No More' demonstrations (refer to attached timeline):

  $ February 8 – Vancouver: CTV Studios
  $ February 8 – Terrace: Northwest Community College longhouse (tentative location)
  $ February 9 – Prince Rupert: Museum of Northern BC
  $ February 10 – Victoria: BC Legislature Copper Cutting Ceremony)
  $ February 11 – Prince Rupert: Civic Centre (coincide with 'All Native Basketball Tournament')
  $ February 11 – Victoria: BC Legislature (coincide with Family Day holiday)
  $ February 11 – Nanaimo: Departure Bay terminal (information picket)
  $ February 12 – Victoria: BC Legislature (coincide with Throne Speech)

$ Copper Cutting Ceremony – BC Legislature: February 10th

- The cutting of copper is a highly revered First Nation ceremony, one that can have multiple meanings and purposes. In this event, conveying his vehement disagreement with the Provincial Government.

- CN Rail has court issued injunctions that are enforceable province wide.

- This information has been shared with local detachments and public safety agencies including, Vancouver Police Department, Victoria Police Department, Stl'atl'imx Tribal Police, E Division BIP/Ports, CBSA, CN Police, CP Police, Marine Security Operations Centre (MSOC) and Ministry of Aboriginal Relations and Reconciliation (MARR).

- Further information will be shared with impacted jurisdictions through District Command.

STRATEGIC CONSIDERATIONS:

- The Idle No More movement has abated slightly, however, demonstration continued to be organized. The BC Legislature remains a common location for demonstrations.

- FNP (First Nations Policing) Members are encouraged to proactively engage their communities and advise of upcoming public order events to District Command.

PUBLIC SAFETY PROTOCOLS:

- None to report at this time.

There is a call out for February 14th, 21st and/or 28th to be a day of some kind of action. February 14th is a day of awareness for missing and murdered Aboriginal women and Idle No More is supporting that. Currently, the organizers are calling for primarily teach ins and awareness pieces. There have been no further responses from Alberta organizers at this point.

PURPOSE:
There have been several media and social networking reports of planned protests and potential blockades in support for the "Idle No More" (INM) Aboriginal-based solidarity movement since December 10, 2012. (U) These protests are being monitored for RCMP senior management situational awareness as well as public and police officer safety. (A)

This report will provide a summary of reported planned events in Canada being organized within the next 24 hours, as well as events planned until February 12th. These lists may not be complete as the environment is constantly changing, nor is it confirmed that these events have actually taken place. (U)

OVERVIEW:
Reports received indicate there are six events organized for February 8th in Alberta (AB), British Columbia (BC), and Saskatchewan (SK). These activities include a teach-in, a rally, and a round dance in AB; a rally and a flash mob/bone game ritual in BC; and, a flash mob/round dance in SK.

There are 10 events planned for February 9th in AB, BC, Newfoundland and Labrador (NL), Quebec (QC), and SK. These activities include rallies and a march in AB; a rally in BC; a highway protest in NL; meetings in QC; and, a demonstration in SK. (U)

There are seven events planned between February 10th and February 12th in BC and QC. These activities include a teach-in in AB; rallies, a ceremony, and a march in BC; a rally/march in QC. (U)

Dissemination List: D/Comm. Mike Cabana, D/Comm. Doug Lang, Chief Supt. Tonia Enger, A. DG NAPS/CPS Michael Lesage, Supt. Warren Coons, Daniel Lavoie, CM Francois Mathieu, Liam Price

PURPOSE:
There have been several media and social networking reports of planned protests and potential blockades in support for the "Idle No More" (INM) Aboriginal-based solidarity movement. (U) These protests are being monitored for RCMP senior management situational awareness as well as public and police officer safety. Since December 10th, 2012, 775 events were compiled at the national level. (A)

This report will provide a summary of reported planned events in Canada being organized within the next 24 hours, as well as events planned until February 15th. These lists may not be complete as the environment is constantly changing, nor is it confirmed that these events have actually taken place. (U)

OVERVIEW:

According to media reports, two protests in opposition to Quebec's northern development plan occurred in Montreal on February 8th and 9th, resulting in more than 30 arrests by the Montreal Police Service. (U) While some of the protesters have associated the protests to INM, there are no indications that the two events were organized or sponsored by the movement. (A)

there is a new call for a national day of action on February 14th, to coincide with the Missing and Murdered Aboriginal Women Awareness Day.

Reports received indicate there are three (3) events organized for February 11th in Alberta (AB) and British Columbia (BC). These activities include a teach-in in AB and rallies in BC. (U)

There is only one (1) event planned for February 12th in BC, consisting of a rally. (U)

There are eleven events planned between February 13th and February 15th in AB, Quebec (QC) and Saskatchewan (SK). (U)

These lists may not be complete as the environment is constantly changing, nor is it confirmed that these events have actually taken place. (U)

OVERVIEW:

According to media reports, INM local protesters were excluded from the afternoon consultation meeting for the "Canada-First Nations Joint-Action Plan on Education" that took place on February 11th in Saskatoon, Saskatchewan (SK). As a result, INM founders have asked the Assembly of First Nations (AFN) National Chief Shawn Atleo to decline the acceptance of an impending "Indspire Award for Education" scheduled to be received on February 15th in Saskatoon, SK.

Reports received indicate there is only one (1) event organized for February 12th in British Columbia (BC), consisting of a rally. (U)

There are four (4) events planned for February 13th in Alberta (AB) and Ontario (ON), which would include possible blockades and information sessions.

There are 31 events planned for February 14th and February 15th. there is a new call for a national day of action on February 14th, to coincide with the Missing and Murdered Aboriginal Women Awareness Day. Events of solidarity are currently planned in AB, BC, Manitoba (MB), ON, Quebec (QC) and SK. These events include blockades, rallies, peaceful demonstrations, candlelight vigils and information sessions. (U)

Date: 2013-02-12

There have been several media and social networking reports of planned protests and potential blockades in support for the "Idle No More" (INM) Aboriginal-based solidarity movement.

This report will provide a summary of reported planned events in Canada being organized within the next 24 hours, as well as events planned until February 15th. These lists may not be complete as the environment is constantly changing, nor is it confirmed that these events have actually taken place.

PURPOSE:
There have been several media and social networking reports of planned protests and potential blockades in support for the "Idle No More" (INM) Aboriginal-based solidarity movement. (U) These protests are being monitored for RCMP senior management situational awareness as well as public and police officer safety. Since December 10th, 2012, approximately 782 events have been recorded at the national level. (A)

This report will provide a summary of reported planned events in Canada being organized within the next 24 hours, as well as events planned until February 15th. These lists may not be complete as the environment is constantly changing, nor is it confirmed that these events have actually taken place. (U)

OVERVIEW:

INM events of solidarity of the "2013 Memorial March for Missing & Murdered Women", will take place in Alberta (AB), British Columbia (BC), Manitoba (MB), Ontario (ON), Quebec (QC) and Saskatchewan (SK) on February 14th. These events include blockades, rallies, candlelight vigils and information sessions. Peaceful demonstrations are also planned at the Kingston Police Service and the Toronto Police Service headquarters. (U)

According to media reports, INM founders have called for a national day of action on February 14th. Events across the country are intended to raise public awareness of violence against women. The first "Women's Memorial March" was held on February 14, 1991 in Vancouver, BC, following the murder of an Aboriginal woman in Downtown East Vancouver. (U)

Reports received indicate there are seven (7) events organized for February 13th in AB, MB, ON and SK consisting of possible blockades and information sessions. (U)

There are 32 events planned for February 14th. (U)

There are two (2) information sessions planned for February 15th in ON and SK. (U)

Idle No More Founding Women - For Immediate Release

by Idle No More - BC on Tuesday, February 12, 2013 at 11:20am

Idle No More Founders give a resounding 'YES' to Indigenous and non-Indigenous peoples to protect the environment and the democratic principles being undermined by the current federal government.

(Kelowna, BC, February 12, 2013) Idle No More is a movement for fundamental rights. For Indigenous peoples this means the implementation of the right to free, prior and informed consent over decisions that impact them and their traditional territories. For non-Indigenous people it is the defense of the democratic principles callously undermined by the current federal government; omnibus bills such as C-38 last spring followed by C-45 in the fall are just the most recent examples.

West Coast Indigenous people are currently protecting the rights of ALL communities facing the direct impact of the pipelines and have never relinquished sovereignty, as stated in the following quotation: "We were never conquered and we have never surrendered the right to govern or be stewards of our traditional territories."

In 2010, the Union of BC Municipalities; mayors and councilors, passed resolutions denying Enbridge and tanker traffic access to BC. The Save the Fraser Declaration and other motions, now law by sovereign First Nations, form an unbroken chain through the entire coast of BC banning all tar sands pipelines and tankers.

Idle No More stands in solidarity with all Indigenous and non-Indigenous people from BC who oppose Canada's move towards an extraction state. The history and activities of corporations such as Enbridge and Kinder-Morgan in other places proves they cannot ensure environmental safety. These companies value profit over the health and wellbeing of other species and the environment.

Idle No More will use strategic actions to stop all corporate activities which attack Indigenous self-determination and their territories. Indigenous peoples everywhere are claiming their legal right to self-determination, as supported by the United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples. Indigenous sovereignty and laws are the Earth's last hope for protection. We are asking all peoples to join in solidarity to protect this planet.

The organizations and activists that come together under the banner of Defend Our Coast stand in active solidarity with Idle No More. Indigenous communities are directly impacted by industrial pollution and unsafe resource extraction. Their struggle to protect the earth and build a st Idle No More is a peaceful, inclusive and family friendly revolution initiated by an indigenous grassroots movement in Saskatoon. We are culturally looking to each other for solutions and to take peaceful action in how to live more sustainably and lovingly on Mother Earth.

ISSUE: Status update regarding BC 'Idle No More' public awareness campaign in British Columbia. (File EDIV 2013-083)

BACKGROUND:

$ The 'Idle No More' (INM) movement continues to hold peaceful and brief public awareness demonstrations regarding First Nations relations with the Government of Canada, as well as in solidarity with Attawapiskat Chief Spence who held a 44-day hunger strike from December 11, 2012 to January 24, 2013.

$ Demonstrations have been held at shopping malls, First Nations and government buildings, roads and highways, and international border crossings. To date, all demonstrations have been peaceful with varying attendance.

$ On January 11th Prime Minister Harper met with approximately 20 First Nations leaders. An 'Idle No More' National Day of Action was organized to coincide with the meeting. Approximately 35 'Idle No More' demonstrations occurred in BC.

- On January 16th a "National Day of Action" was organized advocating to "disrupt the Canadian economy." Three relatively minor demonstrations occurred in BC.

$ The January 28th "National Day of Action" coincided with the re-opening of Parliament; 14 demonstrations occurred in BC.

CURRENT STATUS:

$ Upcoming 'Idle No More' demonstrations (refer to attached timeline):

- February 14 – Prince George: Prince George Courthouse
- February 16 – Lytton: Highway 1

$ CN Rail has court issued injunctions that are enforceable province wide.

$ This information has been shared with local detachments and public safety agencies including, Vancouver Police Department, Victoria Police Department, Stl'atl'imx Tribal Police, E Division BIP/Ports, CBSA, CN Police, CP Police, Marine Security Operations Centre (MSOC) and Ministry of Aboriginal Relations and Reconciliation (MARR).

$ Further information will be shared with impacted jurisdictions through District Command.

STRATEGIC CONSIDERATIONS:

$ Idle No More events have abated significantly, however, efforts to raise awareness of First Nations issues continue through social media and educational forums.

PURPOSE:
There have been several media and social networking reports of planned protests and potential blockades in support for the "Idle No More" (INM) Aboriginal-based solidarity movement. (U) These protests are being monitored for RCMP senior management situational awareness as well as public and police officer safety. Since December 10th, 2012, approximately 810 events have been recorded at the national level. (A)

This report will provide a summary of reported planned events in Canada being organized within the next 24 hours, as well as events planned until February 18th. These lists may not be complete as the environment is constantly changing, nor is it confirmed that these events have actually taken place. (U)

OVERVIEW:

According to media reports, INM founders have called for a national day of action on February 14th. Events across the country are intended to raise public awareness of violence against women. (U)

, INM founders in British Columbia (BC) stated their solidarity with aboriginal and non-aboriginal movements that support environmental protection issues.

According to media reports, on October 22nd, 2012, a peaceful demonstration was held by DOC which mobilized approximately 2500 participants on in front of the Legislative Assembly in Victoria, BC. (U)

INM events of solidarity of the "2013 Memorial March for Missing & Murdered Women" will take place today in Alberta (AB), BC, Manitoba (MB), Ontario (ON), Quebec (QC) and Saskatchewan (SK). Reports received indicate there are 29 events organized. These events include blockades, rallies, candlelight vigils and information sessions. (U)

There are two (2) information sessions planned for February 15th in ON and SK. (U)

There are six (6) events planned from February 16th to February 18th in AB, BC and SK. These events include a traffic slowdown, a rally, cultural ceremonies and information sessions. (U)

Dissemination List: D/Comm. Mike Cabana, D/Comm. Doug Lang, Chief Supt. Tonia Enger, A. DG NAPS/CPS Michael Lesage, Supt. Warren Coons, Daniel Lavoie, CM Francois Mathieu, Liam Price

PURPOSE:
There have been several media and social networking reports of planned protests and potential blockades in support for the "Idle No More" (INM) Aboriginal-based solidarity movement. (U) These protests are being monitored for RCMP senior management situational awareness as well as public and police officer safety. Since December 10th, 2012, approximately 812 events have been recorded at the national level. (A)

This report will provide a summary of reported planned events in Canada being organized within the next 24 hours, as well as events planned until February 18th. These lists may not be complete as the environment is constantly changing, nor is it confirmed that these events have actually taken place. (U)

OVERVIEW:

There are two (2) teach-ins planned for today, February 15th in Ontario (ON) and Saskatchewan (SK). (U)

There are four (4) events planned for February 16th, consisting of an information session in Alberta (AB), a cultural ceremony and a traffic slowdown in British Columbia (BC), as well as a candlelight vigil in SK. (U)

There are two (2) rallies planned for February 17th in AB and BC. According to reports, no events have been planned thus far for February 18th. (U)

AANDC EIMD WEEKEND SUMMARY REPORT
FOR SUNDAY, February 17, 2013

This is a weekend update regarding activities that threaten public safety in relation to issues affecting Aboriginal peoples in Canada.

WATCHED ITEMS:

There were no watched items identified for this weekend.

UPDATES/NEW ITEMS:

ONTARIO

Attawapiskat First Nation – Protest – Road Blockade – De Beers Victor Mine

The Attawapiskat First Nation (143) is located approximately 220 kilometres north of Moosonee with an on-reserve population of approximately 3443.

On Sunday, February 10, 2013, the ON Regional Office reported that approximately a dozen residents blockaded an ice road to the De Beers diamond mine. Protestors say they are demonstrating due to the mine's impact on their traditional hunting and land use.

This is the second recent blockade of the mine. The previous blockade ended on Thursday, February 7, 2013, after Chief Theresa Spence met with De Beers representatives.

The blockade has not significantly affected the mine's operation thus far.

On Friday, February 15, 2013, the ON Regional Office has confirmed with the First Nation and the winter road authority that the winter road into the First Nation remains unaffected and supplies continue to be delivered to the community.

On Sunday, February 17, 2013 the APTN National News is reporting that a sheriff has posted an injunction notice at the site of a week-long blockade on a diamond mine ice road a little over four hours after he was turned away from the Attawapiskat airport.

The sheriff appears to have flown to the airport at the De Beers Victor mine and from there drove the 90 kilometres to the blockade site, arriving sometime between 1 a.m. and 1:30 a.m. Sunday. The ice road from the mine does not cross through reserve land, though the area is Attawapiskat's claimed traditional territory.

Accompanied by two OPP officers, the sheriff read the injunction to a handful of Attawapiskat residents who were still at the site and posted the notice.

Attawapiskat Chief Theresa Spence appeared at the site shortly after the notice was posted and said she was glad no one was arrested. She was unable to locate the OPP officers in the community.

Some people at the site expressed anger at the move and warned it could escalate the situation. It was unclear, however, how the move would impact a planned meeting with De Beers later Sunday which was expected to bring an end to the blockade.

Just a few hours earlier, backed by a number of community members, Spence turned away the sheriff at the Attawapiskat airport. She handed a letter to the sheriff forbidding him from entering the community.

De Beers obtained the injunction from an Ontario judge on Friday.

The AANDC ON Regional Office continues to monitor the situation.

Updates will be provided as new information becomes available.

ISSUE: Status update regarding BC 'Idle No More' public awareness campaign in British Columbia. (File EDIV 2013-083)

BACKGROUND:

- The 'Idle No More' (INM) movement continues to hold peaceful and brief public awareness demonstrations regarding First Nations relations with the Government of Canada, as well as in solidarity with Attawapiskat Chief Spence who held a 44-day hunger strike from December 11, 2012 to January 24, 2013.

- Demonstrations have been held at shopping malls, First Nations and government buildings, roads and highways, and international border crossings. To date, all demonstrations have been peaceful with varying attendance.

- On January 11th Prime Minister Harper met with approximately 20 First Nations leaders. An 'Idle No More' National Day of Action was organized to coincide with the meeting. Approximately 35 'Idle No More' demonstrations occurred in BC.

- On January 16th a "National Day of Action" was organized advocating to "disrupt the Canadian economy." Three relatively minor demonstrations occurred in BC.

- The January 28th "National Day of Action" coincided with the re-opening of Parliament; 14 demonstrations occurred in BC.

CURRENT STATUS:

- Upcoming 'Idle No More' demonstrations (refer to attached timeline):

    - February 21 - New Westminster: Douglas College
    - February 21 – Abbotsford: University of Fraser Valley Abbotsford Campus
        - February 21st has been advertised as 'National Indigenous Education Day'

    - February 23 – Kamloops: Aberdeen Mall
    - February 23-24 – North Vancouver: Chief Mathias Centre (Idle No More conference)

- CN Rail has court issued injunctions that are enforceable province wide.

- This information has been shared with local detachments and public safety agencies including, Vancouver Police Department, Victoria Police Department, Stl'atl'imx Tribal Police, E Division BIP/Ports, CBSA, CN Police, CP Police, Marine Security Operations Centre (MSOC) and Ministry of Aboriginal Relations and Reconciliation (MARR).

PURPOSE:

There have been several media and social networking reports of planned protests and potential blockades in support for the "Idle No More" (INM) Aboriginal-based solidarity movement. (U) These protests are being monitored for RCMP senior management situational awareness as well as public and police officer safety. Since December 10th, 2012, approximately 826 events have been recorded at the national level. (A)

This report will provide a summary of reported planned events in Canada being organized within the next 24 hours, as well as events planned until February 25th. These lists may not be complete as the environment is constantly changing. In addition, the RCMP has not confirmed that these events have actually taken place. (U)

OVERVIEW:

a new call for a national day of action entitled the "Global Day of Ceremony and Resurgence" has been planned for March 20th, 2013. Planning is also reported for INM events to occur on March 22nd, which coincides with the World Water Day. (U)

In the short term, one (1) event is reported for today, consisting of forum in British Columbia (BC). There are five (5) events planned for February 23nd, consisting of a round dance in Alberta (AB), a conference and a flash mob in BC, as well as a protest and a possible blockade in Ontario (ON). There are currently two (2) events planned for February 24th and 25th in AB and ON. (U)

PURPOSE:

There have been several media and social networking reports of planned protests and potential blockades in support for the "Idle No More" (INM) Aboriginal-based solidarity movement. (U) These protests are being monitored for RCMP senior management situational awareness as well as public and police officer safety. Since December 10th, 2012, approximately 831 events have been recorded at the national level. (A)

This report will provide a summary of reported planned events in Canada being organized within the next 24 hours, as well as events planned until March 1st. These lists may not be complete as the environment is constantly changing. In addition, the RCMP has not confirmed that these events have actually taken place. (U)

OVERVIEW:

, a new call for a national day of action entitled the "Global Day of Ceremony and Resurgence" has been planned for March 20th, 2013. Planning is also reported for INM events to occur on March 22nd, which coincides with the World Water Day. (U)

In the short term, one (1) event is reported for today, consisting of a protest in Alberta (AB). There is one (1) event planned for February 26th, consisting of an information session in AB. There are currently five (5) events planned for February 27th to March 1st in AB, British Columbia (BC), Ontario (ON) and Saskatchewan (SK). (A)
